'I UNDERSTAND HIS SKI INSTRUCTOR IS ALSO HIS CAMPAIGN MANAGER!'

Hurting His Image

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — A White House spokesman says portrayals of President Ford as clumsy and accident-prone are a "most unconscionable misrepresentation of the President" and could hurt him politically.

"This president is healthy, he is graceful and he is by far the most athletic president in memory," said press secretary Ron Nessen, crediting Ford with skill and steadiness on skis at this 10,000-foot Vail Mountain resort.

Nessen doesn't think it's fair that of the hundreds of photographs taken of Ford on the ski slopes, the one most widely played in newspapers was when the President took a tumble in the snow.

Nessen told reporters Sunday Ford "laughs off" reports depicting him as awkward and bumbling but it bothers members of his staff, who fear it will hurt his political image.

"It would be a mistake if that impression cost him votes," said Nessen. He expressed hope "the news media would be accurate in its reporting" of the President.

Nessen's comments were prompted by a cartoon in the Denver Post Sunday, showing the 62-year-old Ford skiing backward with a bystander commenting, "I understand his ski instructor is also his campaign manager."

Nessen reminded reporters that experts who skied with Ford during this vacation, which ends Tuesday, praised his skill. He said "even your colleagues" in the press who had made some runs with Ford acknowledged he is an advanced skier.

Stories and cartoons portaying Ford as clumsy started in June when he fell down the ramp of Air Force One in Salzburg, Austria, as he was helping the First Lady down the steps in the rain.

There was more such publicity when, on other occasions, Ford hit his head against the top of a helicopter doorway and bumped his head on the edge of a swimming pool.

Descending the slopes Sunday after his sixth straight day of skiing, Ford commented philosophically, "Every skier takes a fall once in a while."

Was he afraid he would lose votes because of these stories about minor accidents?

"No, because I think there are more than falldowns and standups," said Ford.

Race for 'Death Ray'

LONDON (UPI) — The "death ray", a long-time prop of science fiction writers, may soon join the deadly military arsenals of the two superpowers, according to a major weapons expert.

Jane's Weapons Systems 1976, an authoritative guide on world weapons development, said today the United States and the Soviet Union are racing to develop a laser beam capable of destroying military targets.

In the forward to the annual weaponry guide, editor Ronald Pretty said the superpowers probably are "locked in a costly 'super-scientific' struggle to be the first" to develop such a practical laser.

Lasers produce narrow light beams of highly concentrated energy powerful enough to shear through armored metal.

Pretty said "solely by means of the energy the laser is able to generate and transmit to the target — in fact, the 'death ray' so beloved of generations of science fiction writers."

Laser devices capable of blinding the naked eye already have been developed, Jane's said. But it said the complicated apparatus required to generate large quantities of laser energy produced problems of bulk and weight that have hindered development of large lasers.

U.S., U.S.S.R. working on a military laser beam.

The Observer newpaper, however, quoted a "high source" in NATO as saying a compact laser weapon was now considered a practical possibility.

Pretty cited guarded references in U.S. Defense Department publications to high-energy laser development.

The Soviet Union also has made a big investment in high energy arms and the two superpowers are running neck and neck, according to Dr. Malcolm Currie, Director of U.S. Defense Research and Engineering, Jane's said.

Currie estimated the United States has the edge in fabrication techniques, structures and materials.

Defense scientists believe laser beams may be used first in space warfare because the "energy transfer efficiency" from laser to target is greater outside the earth's atmosphere.

The laser could be used in space to disable enemy communication and spy satellites, scientists believe. It also could be incorporated in future anti-ballistic missile systems to intercept and destroy warheads traveling above the earth's atmosphere.

Jane's said the laser also has military potential as a weapons' guidance device, such as in laser-guided air-to-surface missiles.

Anthem Needs Respect

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — America's National Anthem — "prostituted and mangled" by performers who sing before sports events — doesn't need new zing as much as it needs old respect, says Howard Pardee.

A former high school band leader, Pardee is a member of a committee trying to standardize the musical arrangement of The Star Spangled Banner by the time it is sung at bicentennial ceremonies. The 300 participants at the 23rd Annual American School Band Directors Association have the suggestion on their agendas today.

"All we want to do is make it serious," he said. "We use it so much, the kids never quit fighting in the stands when it's on."

"We want to standardize the Star Spangled Banner which has been prostituted and mangled over the tube for years," Pardee said.

But he said first the group must get support from the military bands.

"If we could get the service bands to use the same arrangement then we would have someone to look up to," he said. "People aren't going to pay any attention to a bunch of school teachers. But if we get men of that caliber to agree, then some rules and regulations could be made on how to play it with dignity and seriousness."

Pardee is a retired band director who conducted high school students in Conneaut and Salem city schools in northeast Ohio. After 39 years he decided to leave the schools and direct a summer park band.

Pardee's complaint is that entertainers who perform the anthem try to put too much of their own flamboyance and style into it.

"They're selling their personalities with the Star Spangled Banner," he said. "We hear it murdered all the time by this one or that one.

"It's a patriotic number," Pardee said. It should demand the respect of the public, but the way it is now—it's just not a very good thing for the country."

It's a Question of Safety...

(Editors note: Part I on nuclear opponents concerned itself with the growing voice of citizen action, its triumphs, and its prospects for thwarting construction of nuclear plants at Lloyd locally and halting construction nationally. Part II details some objections to the Lloyd site and outlines safety questions.)

(Last of Series)

By Tim Schuster

TOWN OF LLOYD

With voters in California to decide next June whether to make nuclear power plant construction subject to approval of 2/3 its state legislature, the official debate that kicked off this California Initiative at San Luis Obispo was between Dr. Edward Teller, famed as "father of the hydrogen bomb," and Dr. John Gofman, medical physicist and expert opponent.

The news account following this debate before a crowd of about 4,000 people stated the two men agreed upon but one basic thing— much has yet to be learned to make atomic power safe.

Safety as the primary concern of opponents deals directly with people. Some other issues are more site-related, such as possible effects on terrain, the air quality, and water supply. These also translate ultimately to safety.

According to two SUNY at New Paltz geologists, there are four to six earthquake faults located adjacent to the proposed Lloyd site and (ERDA) the State Energy Research and Development Authority is trying to cover it up.

Dr. Stephen Egemeier and Dr. Russell Waines reacted to the consultant's geological report on the site with dismay. The study was "really sloppy," said Dr. Egemeier, who stated he is not opposed to nuclear energy. He contended the core drillings at Lloyd were not deep enough; errors in the report were minimized; at least four and possibly six earth faults were not mentioned by ERDA, although the survey of the Hudson Valley from Albany to Newburgh, they said.

In that earlier report the consultants had stated, said the professors, "This formation is extensively faulted by repetitive high angle reverse faults which have a north south trend." The New Paltz professors said that rocks "may have had only minor movement, but several show considerable shattering of the bedrock."

Concern for the Ramapo Earthquake Fault within 3,000 feet of Con Ed's Indian Point nuclear plants has caused the NRC to call a Jan. 29 public hearing, further delaying installation of an emergency core cooling system in Plant No. 1 that has been closed down since Oct. 1974.

The major divergence of opinion concerning possible effects on the skies centers on how much water vapor will really be hanging around the atmosphere of the Hudson Valley from the 500 foot natural draft cooling towers needed to keep hot water out of the river.

No one claims to really know. ERDA has claimed vapor plumes will be under two miles in length 80 per cent of the time. Dr. Egemeier claims plumes of more than 14 miles four days a year; over seven miles 18 days a year. Some have been reported at up to 30 miles in length, a man made cloud.

Dr. Alvin Koenigsberg, physics professor at SUNY at New Paltx, says the meteorological report ERDA is using is simply inadequate, lacking sufficient data to decide either way. He said the model used does not take Hudson Valley terrain into account and diffusion was measured for coal plants rather than nuclear. The report was a forecast for only one plant, when up to four are authorized for the site.

Dire consequences are also seen for the Hudson River by some opponents. Dr. Egemeier said water taken from the river to cool four reactors at Lloyd would represent 12 per cent of the river volume at minimum flow time. Besides possible interference in the river's ecosystem and food chain, the prospect is raised of thus forcing the point of salinity northward in the river and polluting the water supply for such places as Poughkeepsie, Rhinebeck, and Port Ewen that draw water from the Hudson.

The time of reckoning begins now with official interaction among the parties on the Lloyd site set for Jan. 7 at Highland High School where ERDA will meet the public.

Albert Einstein, who was well aware of the potential uses and misuses derived from his theory that led to atomic fission, said in 1946, "Our representatives depend ultimately on decisions made in the village square . . . To the village square we must carry the facts of atomic energy. From there must come America's voice."

Fears Stem From Radiation

Contentions made by nuclear opponents include:

1—The federal government sets "permissible" radiation exposure levels, but no level has been ascertained to be "safe". Radiation does cause cancer, genetic mutations.

2—The major fear is rupture of an emergency core cooling system, subsequent meltdown of the reactor, and widespread leakage and resultant contamination by radioactive substances. No cooling systems have ever been tested because of the cost and risk.

3—There is no known safe method of storage for high level nuclear wastes with long half lifes.

4—Transporting materials to and from the generating plant in the form of a pressurized heated substance, accidents are bound to occur. Trucks and trains carrying such loads have been involved in accidents. No one has suggested flying.

5—The possibility exists for sabotage and blackmail by terrorists by either seizing a plant or shipment of material. Creation of a crude nuclear explosive device is not beyond public capability. In Nov. 1971 arson caused $5 to $10 million damage at Con Ed's Indian Point No. 2 reactor prior to completion.

Gas Prices Like the Weather

By Tobie Geertsema

KINGSTON

Given all the chaotic events of the last few years, the shortages of energy, including the very basic resource of gasoline, created a particular chaos among dealers and consumers. In today's continuing hectic atmosphere, area dealers no longer worry about shortage, but they agonize about prices . . . and so do consumers.

And the gasoline price story in 1975 has been as varied and vacillating as the logos of the myriad service stations in the area.

"If you compare gasoline prices with what they were last year, they've gone down from three to five cents," says William Bryant, who owns a Gulf station on Ulster Avenue Mall and operates an Exxon station on Washington Avenue Extension. "Last year at this time, we were getting 63 cents for regular. Now we're getting 59.9 cents for Exxon, and 57 cents for Gulf."

If that still causes customers to wince, it also leaves Bryant joyless. "The dealer's profits have gone down, also, with the price decrease," says Bryant. "Twenty years ago, I could expect profits of as much as eight cents a gallon. Today I'm lucky if I get a little more than half that."

What makes him particularly irate is that while the margin of profit has gone down for the dealer, it has gone up about 200 percent for the refineries. "They cry the blues," he says, "but they have so much fuel, they're bursting at the seams!" He cites an example: "Shell wants to take over my Albany Avenue location because they have more volume and more petroleum than they need."

Equally concerned is George Goldfarb, who owns a Gulf station on Broadway. "On the wholesale level," he says, "the price has not gone down one iota in months. In fact, it has moved up in the past two months—firming up close to two cents a gallon increase in that time."

But Goldfarb says his current price of 59.9 cents is an "inoperative margin." He points out that New York City dealers are "getting seven to nine cents more per gallon than upstate dealers." Says Goldfarb: "For us to drop the price of gas now means that we would go out of business, because our margin is lower now than it was 15 years ago." Far from improving, he suggests, the situation "has grown dramatically worse."

While wholesale prices move up, the gyration in prices takes place at he retail level, he notes, because of "intense competition from independent stations, who sell two to three cents less per gallon for unbranded products of a dubious background." For brand name Gulf dealer Goldfarb, the, "the future is very bleak and there are no rainbows on the horizon."

Slight variations of the same theme are reflected at other name-brand stations. 'We've remained pretty stable," says a spokesman for Del's Arco on Mill Hill Road, Woodstock. "Our price has varied only one cent over recent months. We dropped it again slightly at the beginning of December to 59.9 cents for self-service regular."

At Boulevard Gulf on Greenkill Avenue and Fair Street, prices have fluctuated from around three to six cents over the 12 months of 1975. Since October, however, the price has dropped about one percent; now stands at 58.9 cents a gallon—which is equal to that charged by the competition within a two mile radius. But no one at Boulevard Gulf is willing to predict the price trend for 1976. "It could go up today or down tomorrow," says an attendant. "It's like the weather . . . no one can tell what it's going to do from one day to the next."

And what of those thriving independents? Have they widened the margin in 1975? "Our gasoline has gone down steadily this year," says a man at Gasland. "We've never had an upward trend in the past 12 months. At the beginning of the year, regular was 58.9 cents a gallon. Now it's 55.9" And, at the Caldor Gas Station on Route 9W, customers are currently paying only 53.9 cents a gallon for self-service regular.

Warning From China

HONG KONG (UPI) — China today warned that the danger of a new world war loomed larger than ever, and also blamed the Soviet Union for "stirring up" civil war in Africa.

The New China News Agency, in one of two year-end commentaries, said the Soviet Union and the United States are the only two countries capable of starting a new world war because of their struggle for spheres of influence.

"Such fierce rivalry between the two superpowers is bound to lead to a new world war," the commenta said.

Exchange Gun Fire

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli troops exchanged fire with Arab gunners across the Lebanese border in two separate incidents today, the military command said.

Machine gun fire came from a car speeding along the Lebanese border road near the kibbutz of Misgav Am, a spokesman said.

Earlier, gunners in Lebanon fired with small arms and a bazooka at an Israeli patrol west of the settlement of Yiftach, eight miles to the south, the spokesman said.

Hopes Abandoned

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Officials abandoned hope today for hundreds of miners trapped in two coal pits in northeastern India, but said it was "possible" a few might be holding out in air pockets beneath millions of gallons of water.

More than 1,000 workers manning high-powered pumps Sunday began rescue operations at the Chasnala colliery, 180 miles west of Calcutta. Officials said it would be at least 15 days before the pits were drained.

Officials estimated the number of trapped miners at 372, but union officials insisted the figure might be as high as 900.

Trawler, Crew Held

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Polish fishing trawler and its crew of 98 were held at Governor's Island today for poaching mackerel from U.S. territorial waters off Long Island, the Coast Guard said.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the 288-foot trawler "Lepus" was escorted into New York harbor late Sunday night to await arraignment of the skipper in Manhattan Federal Court.

The stern trawler's catch of 364 tons of mackerel also was seized.

Cease-Fire Timetable

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — An ambitious cease-fire timetable taking effect today is designed to remove rival militiamen from the warshattered streets of Beirut by the end of the week.

But extremist opposition to the latest peace plan still could scuttle hopes for an end to nine months of bloody civil war that have claimed 6,500 lives and $5 billion in economic losses.

That Sinking Feeling

The realization of it all may just be hitting Bobby Sullivan, age 9, of Mequon, Wisc., as he rests in the terminal of O'Hare International Airport in Chicago early Sunday. Young Sullivan was reported by his parents to be in the cockpit of a Capitol Airlines charter DC-8 when it made a sudden drop from about 33,000 feet to 14,000 feet over the Pacific Ocean late Saturday. Bobby was one of 183 passengers, plus crew, when the incident occurred. The jet was enroute to Chicago from Hawaii via Oakland. Ten passengers were taken to an Oakland hospital before the flight continued into Chicago without further incident after about a four-hour delay. (UPI)

More Supervision Needed

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state Board of Social Welfare should strengthen its supervision of the state's 549 adult care homes, State Comptroller Arthur Levitt said today.

Levitt, in an audit of the board, said the board needs to conduct more frequent, more thorough inspections of the homes and that more surprise inspections are needed.

The program, which includes 433 private proprietary homes and 116 public, serves about 20,000 elderly persons. Adult home residents are not sick enough to be placed in nursing homes, but need "proprietary care."

The audit found that monthly costs at the homes vary widely — with few definite guidelines and standards set by the state. Monthly costs ranged from $101 to $587 — with large variations in the amounts spent for food and staffing per patient.

Because of these variations, the audit recommended that the legislature empower the welfare board to audit each home's records annually, to assure a minimum level of care for residents.

The audit team suggested the Welfare Board was too lenient on owners of the proprietary homes. It said: "We believe the board, in their efforts to treat home owners fairly, has adversely affected the quality of life for residents..."

Levitt's staff found that the board has waived minimum guidelines for many older adult care homes. One home had 3-7 persons per room, rather than the required two. Although new homes are limited to 200 persons, 21 older homes have a greater capacity — one housing 482 residents.

Also, fire regulations are not stringently enforced, the audit found.

The report said welfare board visits are timed so regularly the homes could predict and prepare for the arrival of inspectors. One home reportedly increased its staff just before each six-month inspection, then reverted to its normal staff size afterwards. At another home with an overloaded capacity, residents were transferred whenever the semi-annual inspection was due.

The report said the welfare board may need more resources to properly monitor the adult care homes. It noted that although more than $80 million in New York and federal welfare funds went to homes last year, less than one per cent of that amount was spent to monitor them.

High Speed Chase, Guns, A Bite

KINGSTON

A Kingston man who was initially arrested on 11 vehicle and traffic law violations following a high speed chase on Broadway Sunday night wound up in further difficulty after three guns were allegedly found in his car and when he allegedly bit a police officer who was trying to search him.

Arrested on the long list of charges Sunday at about 10 p.m. was James Butler, 28 of 110 Hone Street.

Vehicle and traffic charges against him included driving while intoxicated, reckless driving, failure to comply and speeding. Speeds during the chase reportedly reached 60 miles per hour.

The alleged discovery of two rifles and a shotgun in Butler's car resulted in a charge of fourth degree possession of a weapon being lodged against him.

Later, police said, Butler allegedly bit Patrolman Charles Polacco as he was being searched and he was charged with second degree assault, a felony.

Polacco was treated and released at Kingston Hospital. Butler was admitted to Kingston Hospital after complaining of chest pains, police said, and he was listed in satisfactory condition today.

Arrest Four

Ellenville State Police arrested four females, including two juveniles, on Sunday on third degree burglary charges in connection with a break-in Saturday at a Town of Rochester residence.

Police said the owner of the residence, who was not identified, spotted a car carrying the four females leaving his home on Saturday as he returned from snowmobiling. He gave police a license plate number, and on Sunday police found the car and arrested Maryann Kirshy, 50, of West Islip, Carol Ann Marsi, 18, of Brooklyn and two juveniles on burglary charges.

Police said a steamer trunk, skis and a toboggan taken in the burglary were recovered.

No Fatalities

Ulster County escaped the long holiday weekend unscathed, with no traffic fatalities reported. Statewide, fewer than normal traffic fatalities occurred during the 102-hour holiday period, with a UPI survey showing 13 persons killed. Nationwide, the weekend death toll mounted to near 400 as the holiday weekend drew to a close. The National Safety Council had estimated between 440 and 500 persons would be killed on the nation's highways.

Police Beat

One Nabbed

Highland State Police BCI investigators arrested Walter Merrill, 31, of Newburgh, formerly of Modena, on Saturday night on a charge of third degree grand larceny, a felony.

Police said Merrill allegedly took property belonging to his landlord when he moved from a trailer he had rented in Modena. Merrill was released on $100 bail following arraignment.

Mattress Fire

A mattress fire of undetermined origin Sunday night at a residence at 172 Ten Broeck Avenue resulted in fire, smoke and water damage to the two-story home and kept Kingston firemen busy for nearly four hours. No injuries were reported.

Out On Bail

Robert Lutley, 43, of 171 Henry Street, Kingston, was arrested Sunday morning for second degree reckless endangerment by Kingston Police on the complaint of Rocco Secreto (age and address not available). Police said Secreto alleged that Lutley chased him with a knife in the area of John and Fair Streets. A nine-inch hunting knife was confiscated during the arrest, police said. Lutley was released on $50 bail.

Senate Undercut Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By its vote to halt all covert aid to anti-Soviet factions in the Angolan civil war, the Senate also has undercut the authoritarian negotiating style by which Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has mediated some of the world's most potentially explosive issues.

Lost in the heat of accusations between Kissinger and the Senate is the fact that even though the House may not support the Senate concerning Angola, the Senate vote still may have a devastating impact on future negotiations by Kissinger.

Even though Kissinger's ability is not directly involved in the Angolan situation, foreign rulers now must ask Kissinger if he can sell Congress on any agreement he negotiates — something they never had to ask seriously before.

Despite his international success, Kissinger failed to sell the Angolan policy in a closed-door meeting with 25 senators. Instead, the Senate voted for the first time to halt a CIA covert operation already authorized by a president.

Senate critics say that no matter what the House does after it returns from vacation Jan. 19, the message to Kissinger is clear. Congress no longer will tolerate his making major commitments involving the United States even indirectly in foreign wars without real congressional consultation.

Consultation with a half dozen Senate and House committee chairmen regarded as the Pentagon's men in Congress no longer will suffice.

Critics blame Kissinger's style with Congress as much as congressional fear of another Vietnam fiasco for his Senate defeat on Angola. They say that despite frequent appearances before congressional committees, Kissinger has shown contempt for Congress by usually consulting it last in his major diplomatic initiatives.

While Kissinger has flooded Congress with information about economic miracles in Japan and the political situation in Indonesia, for example, he has confronted Congress only with accomplished deeds on the foreign policy decisions that seriously affect national security.

His style has been to go personally into areas where other secretaries of state have feared to tread, commit the United States to what would have been treaties in bygone days, and return home to dare Congress to oppose him.

Often this style has served the nation and the world well. It has, for example, extended a shaky Arab-Israeli truce in the Middle East. It has thawed U.S. relations with Moscow and Peking. And in a peculiar onagain off-again way, it ended the U.S. involvement in Indochina.

But it always grated upon a Congress that jealously guards its prerogatives, particularly a Senate mindful of its constitutional duty to give presidents advice and consent on treaty matters.

Kissinger's decision — and ability — to convince President Ford that the United States should get involved in Angola through covert CIA aid so quickly after the U.S. calamity in Vietnam shocked the Senate into opposing Kissinger.

Kissinger's souring congressional relations have prompted the question of whether he might resign. That is uncertain. When asked once what he would do after stepping down, Kissinger replied: "I have never thought about it.

"This is not the type of job that trains you for anything else."

South Africa Would Withdraw

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa has offered to withdraw its forces from Angola if Cuba and the Soviet Union also end their involvement in the Angolan civil war, according to government sources.

The offer from the white regime came in response to a black African proposal that all foreign countries pull out of the former Portuguese colony, the sources said Sunday.

Western diplomats interpreted the offer as an attempt to embarrass the Soviet Union and to direct African resentment at the Kremlin as the chief remaining obstacle to ending foreign intervention in the mineral-rich West African nation.

The Johannesburg Sunday Times said South Africa's presence in Angola was "counter-productive" because it has swung diplomatic initiative in favor of the Soviet-backed forces by embarrassing rival black Angolan leaders.

The Organization of African Unity has scheduled an emergency meeting in Ethiopia Jan. 10 to seek an end to the conflict.

(In Lusaka, Zambia, Western and African diplomats said the 46-nation organization stood virtually no chance of bringing peace to Angola. They said the Soviet-backed group and two pro-Western movements were "hopelessly split" and not prepared to compromise.)

The government sources said a condition of the South African offer included the withdrawal of Cuban troops, who joined the Marxist forces reportedly at Moscow's urging.

South Africa has at least a battalion of regular army troops in Angola. The Soviet Union has supplied the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola with arms and an estimated 400 military advisers. Cuba has provided about 6,000 combat troops.

The Popular Movement took control of the capital of Luanda and the oil-bearing northern enclave of Cabinda after Portugal pulled out of the country Nov. 11.

A military stalemate has set in and probably will be prolonged by current tropical rainstorms.

Nadjari Controversy Continues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey says a resolution of the dispute over his announced intention to fire special state anti-corruption prosecutor Maurice H. Nadjari is "imminent."

The governor met privately with Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz for an hour and half Sunday to discuss the Nadjari dismissal.

Afterward, a Carey aide issued a statement on the governor's behalf which said, "We had a useful meeting this morning and a resolution is imminent."

The aide declined further comment on Carey's attempt to oust the special prosecutor. Lefkowitz was unavailable for comment.

Last Tuesday, Carey, a Democrat, announced his intention to fire Nadjari, a Republican, and replace him with Manhattan District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau.

But, Nadjari, who was appointed under former Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, said he would remain in his post until ordered out by "the appointing authority" — Lefkowitz, a Republican.

The action threatened to bring on a partisan rift in the state administration.

Meanwhile, the City Club, one of the more vocal local citizen groups, joined in the controversy during the weekend, urging Lefkowitz to oppose Carey's intended dismissal of Nadjari.

In a statement Saturday, City Club President Joel Harnett said Carey's attempt to dismiss Nadjari was an abuse of executive power.

He said Lefkowitz was the only official empowered to fire Nadjari and urged the attorney general to "maintain the integrity of his office.

"In view of the precipitous behavior by the governor, questions must be raised ... why the need for such hasty action, why the attorney general wasn't consulted," Harnett said.

Harnett said Morgenthau was "publically acceptable" as Nadjari's successor but added "he is legally disqualified for the special prosecutor's office because he cannot also be a district attorney."

The club president said if Carey's plan was implemented, Morgenthau would in effect be charged with investigating himself.

Nadjari, responsible for probing corruption in the city's criminal justice system, Sunday again suggested that Carey's attempt to oust him may have stemmed from fears among top Democrats about a current investigation.

In an interview on WNEW-TV, Nadjari said, "There's no question that some of the targets — people who are close to the governor — had exactly that opinion."

Women Of the Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time Magazine did not pick a "Man of the Year" this year but substituted 12 women for its annual honor.

Betty Ford, wife of the President, was among the dozen women which Time said "for good or ill," have most significantly affected the course of the year's events.

Susie Sharp, Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, joined Mrs. Ford on the list. The First Lady reportedly campaigned for her as a possible candidate for the Supreme court seat President Ford ultimately gave to Justice John Paul Stevens.

Also on the "Women of the Year" roster were Addie Wyatt, head of the new Coalition of Labor Union Women. Feminist author Susan Brownmiller, author of "Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape," also made the list, as did tennis star Billie Jean King and Alison Cheek, whose ordination as an Episcopal priest rocked the church.

Others were Carla Hills, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; Texas Congresswoman Barbara Jordan; Jill Ker Conway, president of Smith College; Carol Sutton, managing editor of the Louisville Courier Journal; Kathleen Byerly, a Navy lieutenant commander; and Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso.

Time explained it did not name a man of the year because "it was a year of retrenchment and reappraisal."

"In this atmosphere," the magazine said, "leaders did not so much lead as grope. It was not a period in which a single man of the year could decisively emerge."

Time said a few men might have made it, had the award gone to men instead of women. Among them were Henry Kissinger, Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Teng Hsiao-ping, who has emerged as de facto ruler of China.

Cargo Ship Sinks

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A Panamanian-registered cargo ship sank in rough seas off the northern tip of the Philippines today but most of its crewmen were rescued, the Manila Rescue and Coordinating Center reported.

A spokesman said 21 of 26 crew members from the Rebecca Lu had been picked up by five commercial vessels that answered the ship's distress call.

He said the Rebecca Lu, a dry bulk cargo vessel en route to Taiwan from Indonesia, sank at 3 p.m. (2 a.m. EST) in heavy seas 70 miles northwest of Cape Bojeador, 300 miles north of Manila.

The Hong Kong Marine Department, which earlier picked up distress calls from the ship, said the 6,000-ton vessel reported her number one hatch was taking on water and the crew was abandoning ship.

The Hoegh Ranger, the first ship to answer the distress call, radioed that she had been to pick up survivors but that seas were rough and rescue operations hampered by floating logs.

Four more commercial vessels responded to the call and were aiding in the search for the missing crewmen.

Faulty Furnace Blamed

NEW YORK (UPI) — A faulty furnace leaked deadly carbon monoxide gas in a Brooklyn apartment Saturday. One woman was killed and 10 other persons were injured.

Three of the victims, including a month-old child, were treated at St. Mary's Hospital and released.

A Brooklyn Union Gas Co. spokesman said residents had called to complain about an odor of gas in the building. A crew which inspected the premises found that the furnace's chimney was stopped up, with "carbon monoxide gas backing up because of improper combustion."

The crew shut off the furnace and placed a large red tag on it to warn against its use until the chimney was cleaned out, then left.

The landlord went through the building telling tenants that the furnace would be shut down, the spokesman said.

In one apartment, the landlord found the body of Lynette Edwards, 25, of Queens, who was there visiting a friend. She apparently was a victim of the leaking gas, authorities said.

Police were then called about leaking gas in the building, and an Emergency Services Unit was sent to investigate. The ESS men were told about the dead woman, and they found that 10 other persons had been affected by the gas, officials said.

The gas company spokesman said a company crew also went to the building a second time but "this time it was only because the gas was lingering there."

Dr. Gorman Bows Out

The City of Kingston has been fortunate these past six years to have Dr. Gerald Gorman as one of its representatives in the county legislature.

Saying that six years was long enough, Dr. Gorman elected not to seek a fourth term last November. His presence will be missed, not only by the populace but by his cohorts in the legislature.

Though he is a Democrat , Dr. Groman did not let his political emotions interfere with his common sense approach to the many problems encountered in a predominantly Republican county.

In addition to his duties as minority leader, Dr. Gorman has been active in many of the important committees of the county body. He has had the respect and esteem of all its members and his decision not to seek another term leaves a huge gap in the city of Kingston's representation on the county board.

The Freeman salutes Dr. Gorman of six years of faithful service to the people of Ulster County in general and the residents of Kingstn in particular. He did his job well and it will be a long time before anyone fills his big shoes.

Smith Leaves the Council

When the new Common Council is sworn in on New Year's Day, Third Ward Republican Alderman Brian D. Smith will be back with the city's private citizens.

After six years as a member of the minority party, Smith was given his reward by the Republican City committee—no support in a fourth term attempt.

It's not often that a bonafide winner gets dumped by his own party — especially since the excuse was that someone else (Joseph Marklel) was promised the candidacy two years ago and it was his turn to run this time.

The Freeman will miss Alderman Smith. As a minority leader the past two terms, he has been an outspoken and sometimes the only vocal opposition to the Koenig administration.

But, his politics didn't interfere with his thinking. On many occasions he sided with the mayor when he thought it would be in the best interests of his Third Ward constituents as well as the city of Kingston residents.

The Freeman hopes that despite the fact he will no longer be representing his ward as a council member, Brian Smith will continue his political activity. His record speaks for itself and there are too few men like him around in this topsy turvy political world.

Careless Error

Editor, The Freeman:

As a concerned citizen of the Onteora School District, I was very deeply distressed to see the financial affairs of our district being handled so poorly. I am referring to an incident which occured at the December 15th Board of Education meeting when the monthly items calling for a transfer of $21,500 and $2,269. The approval of these fund transfers had already been made by the Board of Education at the November meeting.

This careless error has clearly been made by Dr. John Keough, who obviously did not scrutinize the finances of the district. This error, by the way, was discovered not by Dr. Keough nor any Board member, but by a member of the audience, namely, myself.

In view of the flippant manner in which our hard-earned tax dollars are being mismanaged, one must question the ability (or lack of ability) of our business manager, Dr. John Keough, who is also in the position of Action Superintendent. One must also question the wisdom of the majority of our Board of Education in appointing to the position of Acting Superintendent a business manage who appears tobe inept at handling the financial affairs of the district. A question which remains in my mind is, how many other errors have gone unnoticed and uncorrected? Perhaps of even greater importance is a question of the Board's intentions regarding the continued employment of Dr. Keough in light of the fact that his contract expires in June 1976.

I hope that all those concerned citizens who have an interest in preventing the misuse of their hard-earned tax dollars will attend the next meeting of the Onteora Board of Education!!

Sincerely
Jane Rossitz,
Shandaken

Thank You

Editor, The Freeman:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that the Helping Hand CB'ers take this opportunity to publicly thank everyone who was responsible for making our Drive on December 13th a success. As Helping Hand CB'ers this was our first effort in gathering public donations which we distributed to those less fortunate families in the area serviced by Ultser Hose No. 5 Inc. to help make this Christmas truly happy.

We appreciate the help of the general public and area businesses, such as Lake Katrine Superette, Ulster Plaza Merchants, IBM, Boice Brothers Dairy, Bryant's Inc., Paley's Market and Hurley Hotel. We are also indebted to Ulster Hose No. 5 Inc., for their sponsorship and support.

Our best wishes for a peaceful New Year to all.

Yours truly,
Helping Hand CB'ers
Mrs. R. Hitchcock.

Thanks and Appreciation

Editor, The Freeman:

On behalf of the children, staff and administration of the St. Cabrini Home, I would like to express our thanks and appreciation to Diane Gerald, Norman Schwartz, Tony Franco, James Sunderlin and Jack Ruzzo of the Camelot Inn Restaurant, who organized, prepared and gave a Christmas party and dinner for 115 children and several staff on December 21.

We all enjoyed the excellent food and the lively music, and the children were especially delighted with their gifts. We are keenly aware of the great amount of time which had to be given by these generous people in order to organize such a celebration, and we wish that the Spirit of Christmas, which is love, return their generosity a thousandfold.

Yours sincerely,
ROSEMARY A. SHERIDAN
Executive Director
St. Cabrini Home, Inc.

Vacation Needed

Editor, The Freeman:

In these holy days of celebration, all our Senators and Congressmen are away from Washington. This is the season of the year when they do the least damage to our nations economy. They are scattered all over the world. Some go to junkets in Europe, others go to have a chat with their friend Mr. Pinochet of Chile; some go to Spain to pay their respects to the new King of Spain.

Senators and Congressmen will go anywhere in the world just to keep from going back home and facing their constituents. It is just too bad that we do not have many more such holidays in order to relieve our hard-working representatives from going home to face their people and instead, meet with dictators of the world.

It is too bad the vacation did not start any sooner—the Ulster County Legislature just adopted a budget which will increase property taxes by 32 per cent.

Sincerely,
Angelo DeLewis,
Modena, N.Y.

Inside Report

Signing the Bill

By Rowland Evans
And Robert Novak

WASHINGTON—William Simon, Secretary of the Treasury, in a highly confidential memorandum Dec. 8 forcefully pleaded for a veto of the energy bill —both reflecting and adding to the ill effects of President Ford's month-long delay before his probably inescapable approval of the compromise.

Mr. Ford's signature, continuing oil price controls, suggests he is no political high roller but a true son of Congress inclined to the most cautious route. In addition, it reveals that he is susceptible to the majority opinion of his advisers; is more concerned with broad political impact than high pressure lobbying; is clearly no ideologue.

But what preceded his signing the bill Dec. 22 also underscores one of Mr. Ford's most serious weaknesses: agonizing procrastination. This indecision generated much veto agitation of its own—including Simon's polemical memo—guaranteeing a measurabl worse reaction than if he had acted four weeks earlier.

Actually, Mr. Ford months ago painted himself into a corner on energy by taking a hard public line for oil decontrol while privately encouraging federal energy administrator Frank Zarb to compromise with Congress for the best bill possible.

But so long as the President was going to take Zarb's advice and approve the compromise, he would have cut losses by announcing he would sign the compromise bill once its language was set late in November. Simon, though a fierce bureaucratic infighter and bitter foe of controls, had always been pessimistic about chances for a Ford veto. In the absence of any public word by Mr. Ford, however, he continued to lobby. His full argument was contained in the Dec. 8 memo to the President.

Simon was characteristically blunt. The bill would undermine the President's policy, he said, "by increasing our vulnerability to (OPEC) interruption and price escalation" through decreased domestic production and increased imports of "at least" one million barrels a day.

"The bill postpones the inevitible decision on price decontrol," Simon told the President. "Postponing decontrol will merely entrench the vested interests created by economic distortions resulting from controls and continue extensive controls over the petroleum industry contrary to your general policy to minimize gomvernmental interference in the private secto4 of the economy."

This strong language was not restricted to the President's ears but circulated through Washington when a preliminary Simon draft (quoted above) leaked to Capitol Hill. Lacking a full appreciation of how the Ford administration functions, it might be assumed the Secretary of the Treasury would not ventilate such sentiments without strong indications the bill would be vetoed.

Such suspicions were heightened when Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, on his endless trips about the country, began publicly denouncing the bill on the President's desk. Federal Energy Administrattion (FEA) officials were outraged. Rockefeller's complaint, Zarb grumbled in private, was that the bill did not contain a huge federal handout to industry. But with the President silent, the Vice President was not muzzled.

What truly incensed Zarb, however, was that White House indecision encouraged mounting political pressure in the oil states. Word drifted into Washington that Robert A. Mosbacher, the Houston investment broker in charge of Ford campaign fund-raising, was suggesting to oil magnates that contributions to the President might just influence his decision.

Thus were false expectations of a veto aroused in Washington. One high-priced oil industry lobbyist with superb administration connections became convinced by Dec. 17 that a veto was imminent. After the President gave no hint whatever of his feelings during a cabinet-level discussion of the bill on Dec. 19, gloomy officials in the FEA thought they had lost.

Political considerations were not discussed at the Dec. 19 meeting. But inside the White House, the President was advised the short-term impact of signing the bill would help Ronald Reagan's challenge for the nomination. Nevertheless, two of Mr. Ford's closest political associates—counselor Robert T. Hartmann and Commerce Secretary Rogers Morton—came down marginally against a veto which would enable the President's Democratic foes to paint him as captive of the oil industry and blame rising gasoline prices on him.

Such advice probably augmented the President's natural inclination to support Zarb, his chosen lieutenant for energy, and his failure to share Simon's zeal for deregulating American industry. Had Mr. Ford followed his instincts a month earlier, the political damage would have been diminished at a time the President cannot endure more erosion of his strength.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

U.S. Sells Itself Out of Armaments

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON—The United States has pumped so much emergency military equipment into Vietnam and Israel that its own arsenals are dangerously depleted.

This is the conclusion of a secret audit, which claims the arms exports "adversely affected overall U.S. readiness." The explosive audit, conducted by the General Accounting Office (GAO), charges that military supplies were borrowed from active U.S. units to meet the needs of our allies.

Some critical items were rushed to Vietnam and Israel in spite of "existing shortages" within America's own armed forces. These crucial weapons allegedly were removed from U.S. bases, including strategic "prepositioned" stocks in Europe.

"Actions are currently underway to try to alleviate many of these shortages," states the audit, which was concluded last month. But it adds grimly that "for such items as tanks, production capability is limited . . . Thus, inventories for ssveral important items will remain depleted for a long time."

During the 1972-74 period, declares the document, "the United States programmed . . . about $8.5 billion to support South Vietnam and Israel with military supplies and equipment."

On three occasions, arms were poured into Vietnam on an emergency basis. This occurred in August, 1971, and again in June, 1972.

Then, "as negotiations for a cease-fire in Southeast Asia progressed, it was anticipated that the agreement might call for a moratoruim on military equipment entering Vietnam. A special project was undertaken in October, 1972, to identify and expedite delivery of all the equipment the United States wanted to get in-country before such a deadline could be established."

Most of these supplies were abandoned a few months later by the retreating South Vietnamese. Indeed, the loss of U.S. equipment on overseas battlefields has been staggering.

During the latest Arab-Israeli conflict in October, 1973, for example, "equipment and supplies on both sides were consumed at astonishingly high rates. The Israeli inventories were reduced to such dangerous levels that Israel requested immediate assistance from the United States."

The Defense Department, caught without a contingency plan, asked the Israelis to document their needs. But they refused "to provide some such information," the study alleges. Therefore, "U.S. authorities had no basis on which to judge the criticality of items and amounts thereof requested by the Israelis."

Defense officials, nevertheless, filled most of Israel's requests on blind faith, although this meant stripping certain U.S. units. Here are other highlights from the secret GAO report:

—"The two principal types of tracked vehicles furnished to Vietnam and Israel in large quantities wee tanks and APCs (armored personnel carriers). As of June 30, 1974, the Army had a shortage of 4,943 tanks and 1,822 APCs." This reduced the inventory of tanks, for esample, 50 per cent below the minimum Army requirements.

—The 'rmy keeps equipment in Europe for U.S.-based troops, who would be airlifted across the Atlantic in case of an emergency. "To respond to Israel's requirements," states the study, "the Army withdrew 368 M-60 series tanks from this stock as well as 500 APCs." This cut deeply into the stockpile that is supposed to be held in Europe for U.S. use.

—Because of the shipments to Vietnam and Israel, according to the study, "the total requirements for APCs will not be satisfied until about 1980."

—Tactical radio components were furnished to Israel during the Middle East war. The government auditors claim this "had the effect of further aggravating a critical shortage which had existed for several years."

—The Air Force also depleted its "on-hand, available stocks" to supply Israel, thus leaving itself "far short of the computed war reserve requirements in several instances."

—The Tactical Air Command, for example, "was required to withdraw 34 F-4E aircraft from its active squadrons and to furnish them to Israel, thus uncreasing TAC's worldwide shortage to 116 F-4 aircraft."

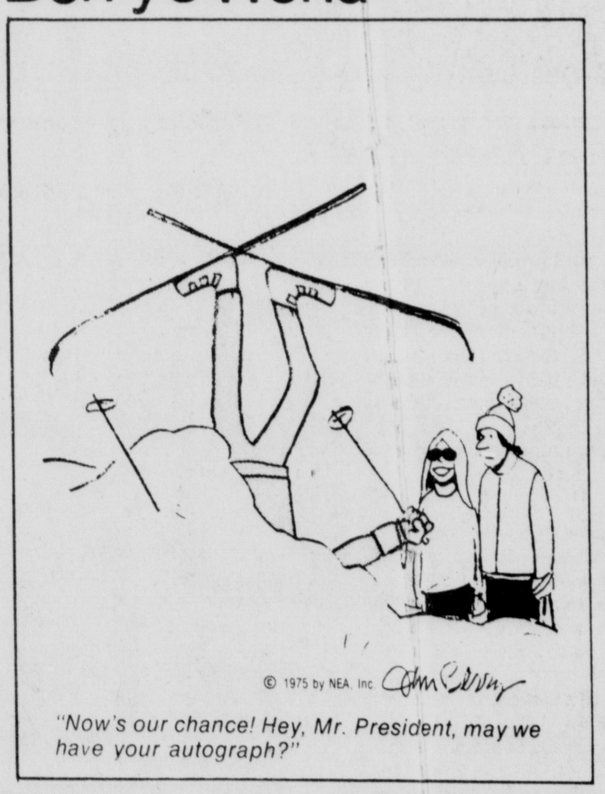

—During the 1973 Middle East war, 400 Maverick air-to-ground missiles ""were withdrawn from stock and sent to Israel." This amounted to "50 per cent of the missiles on hand," charges the report.

—Another air -to-ground missile, the Shrike, is used chiefly to knock out the radar systems of anti-aircraft missiles. "In October, 1973," reports the GAO, "Israel requested slightly more than 1,000 Shrike missiles. Although only 300 Shrikes were delivered to Israel, at the time the Air Force had only 22 per cent of its requirements."

—The U.S. has stopped producing Sparrow intercept missiles, which are used to blast enemy planes out of the sky. Although the U.S. had none to spare, the Israelis requested 180 and received 80 Sparrow missiles during the October, 1973, war.

Footnote: The Pentagon acknowledged that the GAO audit was "an impressive overview of the impact of aid to Israel and Vietnam." But Defense officials called the report "incomplete" because of an "inadequate analysis."

Flower Children's Last Trip

The hippie counterculture died quietly in the night. ' few survivors wander the streets spaced out. These are no-bra girls with matted hair, cut-off jeans and hairy legs. The men are pale and bearded, doorknob shoulders, youths with the wistful wet eyes of hungry mongrels.

It was 15-years-old, a world-wide movement of peaceniks and beatniks addicted to a cacophonous sound called rock 'n' roll. Allen Ginsberg was its father; Bob Dylan its mother, Its philosophy was drugs, music, sex, unemployment.

The hippie movement's enemy was The Establishment. This doomed the cunterculture because nothing is strong enough to kill The Establishment except The Establishment. It is a credit to the hippies that the protest lived to surpass the emotional age of its proponents.

At best, they were simplistic nomads. They live in communes, sleeping on the creaky floors of wretched houses with partners they barely knew.

DEEP STARE

They dropped acid because it gave them an expanded awareness. Small daisies became huge sunbursts. A cracked plaster wall was transmuted into a heavenly mural. It enabled hippies to stare behind the eyes of other men into their souls.

They went away on LSD. Some did not come back. Others came back and went away again, not wanting to. Life became a trampoline. Still others had a bad trip, returning to scream hysterically as they clawd at imaginary rats crawling up their legs.

They wanted most of all to "be in tune with nature." Living poor is a long limping walk to nowhere. They called it the good life. They met by the hundreds of thousands at rock concerts and in peace marches.

Some of these ended with riots. Crewcropped cops beat and busted the flower children. They bled in gutters like bags of rags. They fought against the war in Vietnam chanting: "LBJ, LBJ, how many kids you kill today?"

The blondes tried black men and the black girls tried honkies. Both were disappointed. Sex, especially in the dark, is colorless. They lied to each other and called it love. It was a pathetic exercise in license.

The Beatles sang their song. The hippies stripped all the culture from their skin and enjoyed their nakedness. They had babies and everyone knew who the mother was. Timothy Leary was the godfather.

Poets who couldn't rhyme wrote verse. Young men learned to weep as well as to laugh. Rip-off artists, rapists, junkies and dealers infiltrated the movement until few culd detect the genuine from the spurious garbage.

The movement began to freeze. It stared wistfully, hopefully at a cold sun. The glitter of filth began to decay. Small groups were chased from unemployment insurance lines. Some surrendered and went home. A few were frozen in space, lying in parks fingering a loose thread on a garment for hours.

Some died, lying unclaimed in a medical examiner's cold room. Many ate their own guts and whimpered for help. Others enrolled in colleges and hoped to study forever, without ever graduating. The move movement had gangrene.

PRACTICAL RETREAT

The deepest humiliation was taking a bath and getting a haircut. The males used the word "man" excessively to make sure they were. In order to get jobs, some had to relearn simplistic English. The army of love began its horrifying retreat from the scented world of unreality to the naked bulb of the practical.

No one wanted that trip. The flower children were left with no other place to go. They went home holding their ears against lectures, weeping to stifle the whip-words cutting across the dining room table. It was enough, they felt, that the freak had come home.

They kept their music. The records, the tapes, the raucous beat became albums of old family photos. It made them all young again, all one.

Some have not surrendered. There may be 10,000 sleeping in parks and parking lots. the great mass of hippies they became middle-aged overnight . . .

Throw A Dessert Party!

NEW YORK

Looking for an easy and economical way to entertain? Try a dessert and coffee party! Your invitation will be a welcome treat for friends and neighbors and means minimal preparation for you.

A dessert party can be as formal or informal as you like, a spur of the moment invitation, or a large affair planned well in advance. You might choose to hold your party following some other function which many of your guests will attend — a performance by the local theater group or a P.T.A. meeting. On the other hand, you can simply invite friends to your house for an enjoyable evening with some tempting refreshments.

Whether invitations are verbal or written, be sure to state "dessert and coffee" so guests know they should have dinner at home. Plan two or more desserts depending on the number of people expected.

Friends will have a hard time deciding between the two tempting desserts shown here. The Mocha Almond Angel Cake is light and airy, but the creamy frosting makes it sinfully rich and delicious! Our unique Lemon Yogurt Pie sits in a scrumptious graham cracker crust with a doubly flavorful filling made of lemon yogurt and gelatin. Both desserts are easy and economical to prepare and they are low in cholesterol and saturated fat which is so important to many diet-conscious people today. Fleischmann's 100 per cent Corn Oil Margarine makes it possible without sacrificing a bit of flavor.

Plan a dessert party during the holidays, or any time you want to wish your friends a warm welcome!

Mocha Almond Angel Cake

6 tablespoons softened Corn Oil Margarine
1 box (1-pound) unsifted confectioners' sugar
¼ cup cocoa
½ teaspoon instant coffee
3 tablespoons skim milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 10-inch angel food cake
Sliced almonds

In a small bowl, blend together margarine, confectioners' sugar and cocoa. Dissolve instant coffee in skim milk. Add to margarine mixture with vanilla extract. Beat until smooth and spreadable.

Use to frost 10-inch angel food cake. Garnish top of cake with sliced almonds. Makes one 10-inch tube cake.

Lemon Yogurt Pie

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup melted Corn Oil Margarine
1 package (3-ounce) lemon gelatin
1 cup cold water
1 cup lemon yogurt

Combine graham cracker crumbs, sugar and melted margarine. Reserve one tablespoon of mixture for topping. Press remaining crumb mixture firmly against sides and bottom of 8-inch pie plate. Refrigerate crust at least 15 minutes.

Meanwhile dissolve lemon gelatine in boiling water. Add cold water. Chill until slightly thickened. Add yogurt and beat with rotary beater until thoroughly blended. If mixture is thin, chill until of mounding consistency. Spoon into prepared crust. Sprinkle top with reserved crumbs. Chill until firm. Garnish with lemon slice, if desired. Makes one 8-inch pie.

Old Country recipes are still being made, but many American shortcuts or variations taste just as good — if not better. For instance, Black Forest Cake. This cold souffle, made with Knox Unflavored Gelatin e and the traditional kirsch, cherries and chocolate, is crowned with chocolate curls, whipped cream and more cherries — quite as spectacularly as the German cake!

Riz l'Imperatrice is another classic dessert with an easy variation fancy enough to become a custom. Rice and vanilla are added to a gelatine custard; then candied fruit marinated in liqueur is folded in with whipped cream.

The most luscious of all gelatine desserts probably didn't originate in Bavaria as the name would imply, but the French claim credit for invention. In Almond Brittle Bavarian, ice cream substitutes for eggs. The brittle isn't Bavarian either: the crushed almond candy recipe comes from Scandinavia!

BLACK FOREST SOUFFLE

1 can (16 oz.) sour pitted Cherries, drained
5 tablespoons kirsch
4 squares (1 oz. ea.) semi-sweet chocolate
2 enveloped Knox Unflavored Gelatine
¾ cup sugar
3 eggs, separated
2 cups milk
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
2 cups (1 pt.) heavy cream

Reserve ½ cup cherries; chop remaining cherries and marinate in 2 tablespoons kirsch.

Make enough chocolate curls for garnish (using about ¼ oz. chocolate).

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine and ½ cup sugar. Add egg yolks beaten with milk, and chocolate squares (about 3¾ oz.). Stir over low heat until gelatine dissolves and chocolate melts, about 5 minutes; add remaining 3 tablespoons kirsch and vanilla. With wire whip or rotary beater, beat mixture until chocolate is well blended. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

In large bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar and beat until stiff. Fold in gelatine mixture.

In medium bowl, whip 1½ cups heavy cream and fold into gelatine mixture with chopped cherries and kirsch.

Turn into 1-quart souffle dish with 3-inch collar; chill until set, about 4 hours. Remove collar; to garnish, top with remaining heavy cream, whipped, reserved ½ cup cherries and chocolate curls. Makes about 10 servings.

ALMOND BRITTLE BAVARIAN

½ cup sugar
¼ cup chopped blanched almonds
1 envelope Knox Unflavored Gelatine
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
1 cup vanilla ice cream, softened
1 cup (½ pt.) heavy cream, whipped

In small saucepan, melt sugar over medium heat, stirring constantly, until syrupy and light brown in color; stir in almonds. Pour onto greased baking sheet; cool. Between waxed paper, crush brittle fine; reserve 2 tablespoons.

In small bowl, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over cold water; let stand until moistened. Add boiling water and stir until gelatine is completely dissolved; add ice cream and stir until melted. Let stand until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon, about 7 minutes; fold in whipped cream and brittle. Turn into dessert dishes or 1-quart bowl and garnish with reserved brittle; chill until set, about 2 hours. Makes about 6 servings.

RIZ L'IMPERATRICE

½ cup chopped mixed candied fruit
3tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur
2envelopes Knox Unflavored Gelatine
⅓ cup sugar
3 eggs
2 cups milk
2 cups cooked rice
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup (½ pt.) heavy cream, whipped

In small bowl, marinate candied fruit in liqueur.

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine and sugar; blend in eggs beaten with milk. Stir over low heat until gelatine dissolves, about 5 minutes; add rice and vanilla. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

Fold in fruit with liqueur and whipped cream. Turn into 6-cup mold and chill until firm, about 4 hours. Unmold and garnish, if desired, with additional whipped cream and candied fruit. Makes about 10 servings.

About Antiques

Painted Canvas Floor Coverings

You will probably never find a genuine antique Painted Canvas Floor Covering—or even a remnant of one. Very few of the pioneer hand-painted forerunners of today's vinyl or linoleum tile floors have survived since their popularity during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

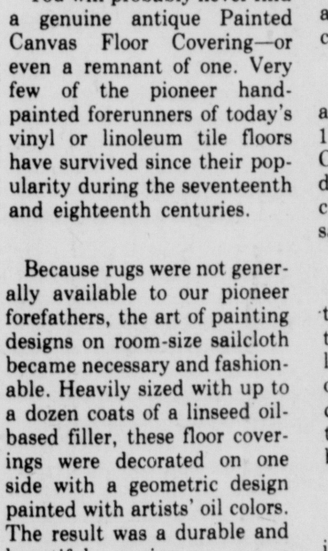

Because rugs were not generally available to our pioneer forefathers, the art of painting designs on room-size sailcloth became necessary and fashionable. Heavily sized with up to a dozen coats of a linseed oil-based filler, these floor coverings were decorated on one side with a geometric design painted with artists' oil colors. The result was a durable and beautiful covering.

Designs usually took the form of the inlaid marble floors of the time, with the difference being that a floor covering artist had a wider range of colors to choose from.

With the arrival of domestic and imported rugs around 1750, the demand for Painted Canvas Floor Coveings soon diminished. The use of sailcloth then went back to the sailmaker.

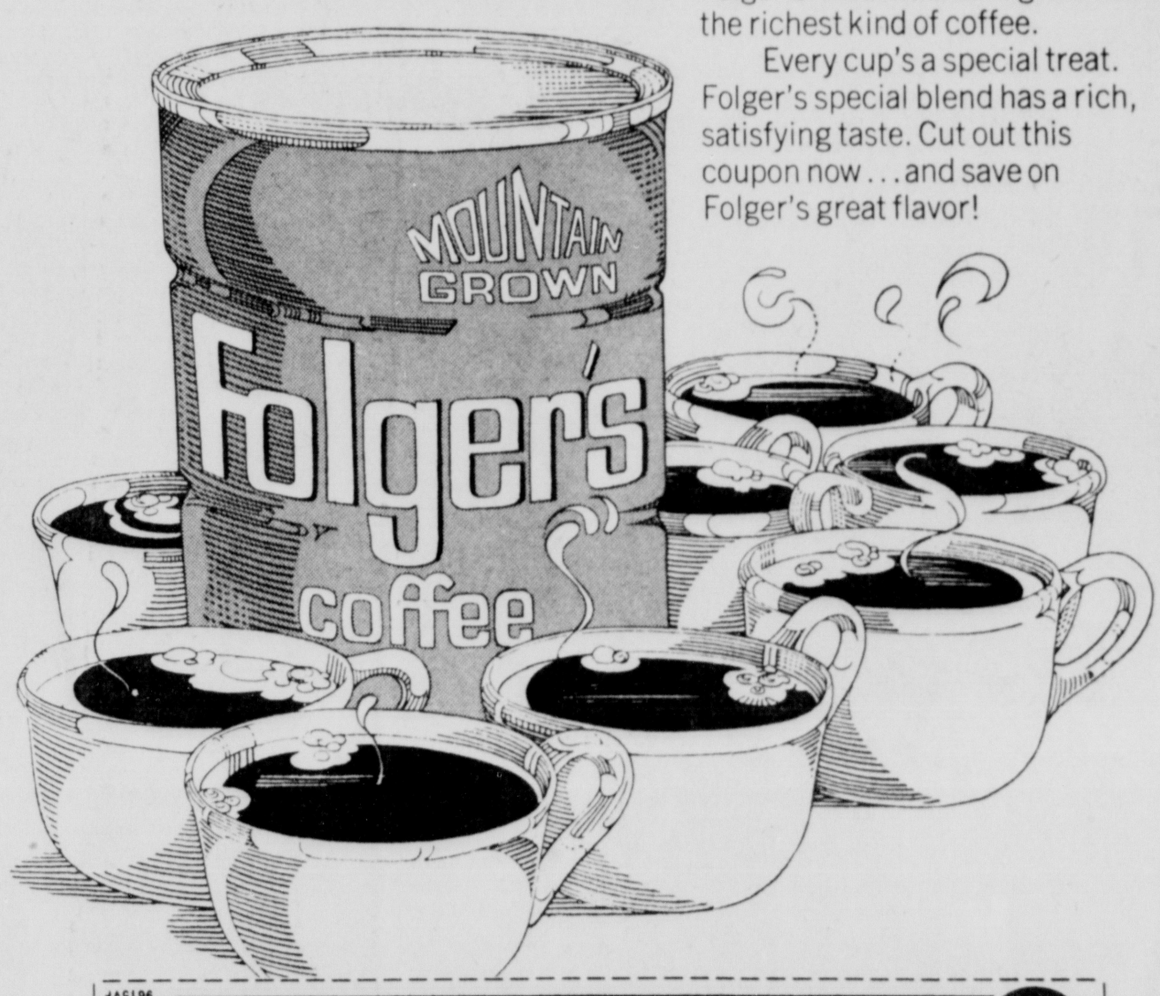

To add an authentic touch to a room of antiques, some of today's decorators and antique lovers are either making their own reproductions of these old covering or purchasing some of the ready-made examples now being manufactured.

To accent an antique grouping with one of these Painted Canvas Floor Coverings you might decide to try making one yourself. For starters, a hall runner or small mat might be appropriate. If you are exceptionally artistic you might even try to paint a canvas floor cover pattern to match a design on one of the antiques you already own—perhaps a favorite dinnerware pattern!

Lord Snowden: A Royal Passion for Photography

By Marian Christy

LONDON—Princess Margaret's husband, Lord Snowdon, is seated behind a king-size desk in a cluttered Kensington Palace office that's obviously private property. The nonroyal room is punctuated with posters, costumed dolls, modern painting and miles of book-studded shelves.

A uniformed butler, who could have stepped out of the pages of an Agatha Christie mystery, is serving demitasse coffee. The former Anthony Armstrong-Jones is painstakingly dribbling tiny drops of menthol magic called the White Flower of China into the coffee.

"This stuff really clears the head," said the 45-year-old Snowdon with a smile.

Photography is a passion with this controversial member of England's royal family. His camera has captured fashion photos for bride magazines as well as poignant pictures of people confined in Britain's mental institutions.

Occasionally there are close calls. Recently Snowdon had planned to join British auto racing champion Graham Hill and his team of six on a private plane flight from Marseilles to London. Snowdon, who was to take photos of Hill en route, canceled at the last moment. He felt he had enough photographs from a previous session.

The decision not to go saved him from perishing in the crash of that plane on a north London golf course while its pilot tried to land in heavy fog. Everone on board was killed.

He changes the mood by smiling broadly and talking about his "background credentials."

"I almost went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology," Snowdon says, "but I landed at Cambridge's Jesus College to study natural science. Well, that lasted about 10 days. I found chemistry utterly impossible!

"I changed to architecture but I spent too much time on boat racing. Thank heavens we won the Oxford-Cambridge boat race in 1950! But, alas, I failed my exams. I was told to 'get on' for a year and then come back. Of course I never returned. Frankly, I've always regretted that."

Instead, Snowdon drifted into photography.

"I worked in a chemist's shop doing enlargements fr other photographers," he says about his first job. "Then I decided to open my own shop. The rent was $8 a week, but I was on my own."

Snowdon specialized in portraits. Eventually Vogue and Harper's Bazaar began printing his pictures, and the royal family took notice. When Princess Margaret's 29th birthday photos were released to the press, they carried Snowdon's byline.

It was the beginning of a two-year courtship.

On May 6, 1960, Snowdon married Princess Margaret at Westminster Abbey and his name became a household word.

Snowdon, apparently sensitive about what Londoners call his "floundering marriage," will not answer questions about his relationship with Princess Margaret, 45, or Queen Elizabeth. Gossip is that there's a divorce in the offing.

> "As a photographer, I merely catch a moment in time, I am totally separate from the subject. In a way, I'm a fly on the wall."

Apparently Snowdon's nonphotographic forays are not always received with relish by Her Majesty's subjects.

Last year he invented a wheelchair on a motorized platform to enable a disabled person to maneuver from room to room. "This little invention irritated wheelchair manufacturers who were complacent about updating their designs," says Snowdon.

In 1965, he designed the aviary for the London Zoo. "I was criticized like crazy. The aviary, which is created to give the illusion that birds are in the wild rather than cages, was called 'rotten' by the press. But, you see, it eventually won serious praise in the Architectural Review, and from then on it has been treated more or less reverently.

"I worked three years on it, 16 billion people have seen it, and I got paid the sum total of $260."

What is it like being Lord Snowdon, the photographer, the occasional fashion designer and the inventor? Can the fact that he lives in Kensington Palace and is the husband of Princess Margaret be a detriment as far as his work is concerned?

"When you stick your neck out—and I do—you take a chance," he says. "What hurts most is the irrelevant criticsm. I like to think that I take no notice of critics I don't admire. It isn't true of course! I sop up all the criticism, regardless of the source. But I'm trying to be tough-skinned about nasty things said or written about me. I tell myself that a bad notice is better than no notice at all."

Snowdon, who has published five books of his photographs, says successful photography "takes a lot of luck."

When he was assigned to photograph Mike Todd, Snowdon says, a servant slammed a heavy door and Todd grimaced at the loud bang. "You see, Elizabeth Taylor was asleep in the next room and Todd didn't want the harsh noise to awaken her. The instant he frowned, I clicked. The picture was done in 15 seconds flat. That's pure luck.

"I have no particular, easily recognizable style. If you look through a batch of photographs, you could never pick the ones done by Snowdon. As a photographer, I merely catch a moment in time, I am totally separate from the subject. In a way, I'm the fly on the wall."

On an occasional twinge of insecurity:

"I tend to think I've snapped a nice picture and when I see the finished photograph, I'm disappointed. When I'm working, I have an intense desire to get the negatives processed immediately. Then, when the brown envelope is delivered to my desk, I tear it open and—well, sometimes my reaction is agony. I don't have what I thought I'd captured. Unfortunately, the older you get, the more nervous you are about achieving excellence."

Some of Lord Snowdon's critics have sneeringly labeled him Lord Bountiful—and that bothers him. His subjects, he says, are available to other photographers. When he goes to old age homes, mental hospitals or clinics for battered children, he says, there are no special advantages.

"The last thing I want to be known as is a do-gooder," he says. "But I know when I delve photographically into life's deepest social problems, people are bound to call me a voyeur. I consider myself an illustrator. Unfortunately there is only a hairline difference between the two."

Recently Snowdon's work has been exhibited in major cities. In two-day shows in Cologne, New York, and London, nearly a half million people saw Snowdon's poignant photos on the subject of "loneliness."

Snowdon and Margaret have a son, Lord Linley, 14, and a daughter, Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 11. Official photographs of his wife, children and other members of the Royal Family are done by other photographers—most often Norman Parkinson. "I only take snaps of my children," admits Snowdon.

Why is Snowdon, the photographer, banned from these family assignments? There is a moment of reflective silence.

"I would be justifiably criticized," he says. "The photographers would complain that I, Lord Snowdon, had been given special preference. So, at times, I let the others take the picture."

A Compost Heap Is A Lot of Rot

A new 20-page booklet written in co-operation with the Soil ssociation, for home gardeners interested in learning about garden compost, is available free from Rotocrop, manufacturers of compost bins. Entitled "A Lot of Rot on Gardens", the booklet explains in clear non-scientific terms how garden compost can act as a soil conditioner and a fertilizer to improve the growth of both flowers and vegetables without the need for chemical fertilizers.

The Soil Association, with headquarters in England, is a non-profit organization founded by the late Sir Alfred Howard, pioneer of organic methods of cultivation.

The booklet first explains that a garden compost heap is a man-made device by which the natural process of decomposition is speeded up so that animal and vegetable waste can be used to improve the soil and make plant nutrients more readily available to growing plants. "Compost made from a good variety of common ingredients can directly supply your plants with all the nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium they need, as well as many other minerals" states the introduction. It also goes on to explain that compost can be used as a mulch to create a weed-free blanket between rows to protect plant roots from drought and cold, and that compost is a soil conditioner, adding fibrous qualities to the soil. This encourages earthworms which enrich the ground with their casts.

Good composting matrials to use from the garden include remains of vegetable crops, weeds, lawn clippings, leaves and hedge trimmings. Tough stalks like cabbage stems, and thick fibrous roots of perennial weeds are best smashed or shredded before use.

Useful household wastes to use include wood ashes from your fireplace, orange peels, egg shells, coffee grounds—even old wool and cotton rags, providing they are well mixed together with other ingredients and moistened.

From the farm, straw and animal manures are excellent materials for composting.

The booklet further advises that thick layers of any one material should be avoided—especially impermeable layers of sawdust, grass clippings and leaves. These should be mixed with other waste material to improve air flow and drainage of moisture.

Although moisture is essential in a compost pile, too much moisture in the form of a sodden or waterlogged condition will suffocate the heap and cause putrefaction.

Aeration is also vital. Too little will turn the heap into a putrid mess, and too much may cause rapid heat and moisture loss.

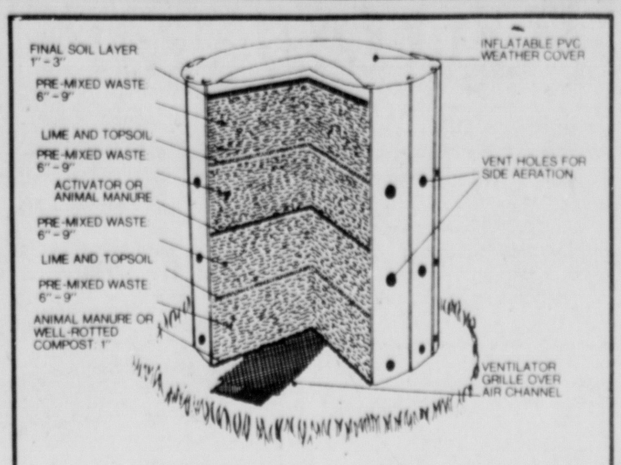

A major ingredient in the success of a compost pile is nitrogen. In spring and summer there is plenty of nitrogen in grass clippings, young leaves and weeds, but in fall this is almost totally absent. To provide the extra nitrogen needed there are some excellent natural sources. Animal manures (especially horse, cow, sheep, pig, poultry and rabbit) are good examples. So are dried blood, bone meal, hoof and horn meal and sewage sludge. These extra sources of nitrogen are known as "activators".

The booklet also advices for acid soil areas a sprinkling of lime. Activators and lime should be applied between layers of waste materials alternating the lime and nitrogen source. After the sprinkling of lime a layer of ½ inch of soil effectively absorbs any liberated ammonia and conserves it until the micre-organisms responsible for decomposition are ready to use it.

The average home gardener is advised to use a compost bin made to preserve heat generated by biological action, and designed to control aeration and moisture content. An Accelerator type bin is recommended, made of sliding panels with a removable insulated cover, and aeration holes around the sides.

The Accelerator compost bin is an easy and hygienic method of collectiong garden and kitchen wastes and turning them into good compost quickly. Made from attractive green interlocking panels, it is a self-contained unit that holds waste materials, speeds decomposition, and produces rich, clean, odorless compost for adding directly to the garden.

For a copy of the free information booklet on making compost, write: Rotocrop, 58 Buttonwood Street, New Hope, Penna. 18938.

Choosing and Using Your Doctor

By Alison Goddard

New York (MW) — How do you judge a good doctor?

"If I felt intimidated about calling my doctor with a problem — he wouldn't be a good doctor."

"I want someone who'll treat me and answer my questions without putting me down . . . who'll talk to me and listen to me."

"I look for a doctor who takes a complete history and with whom I feel comfortable enough to tell the truth in all areas, knowing he'll keep my confidence."

"I believe a physician's competency is directly connected to how he relates to his patients."

If you are a woman over forty, with years of experience in seeking medical treatment, your response to the question is apt to be like those of the women quoted above. All are patients of Marvin Belsky, an internist who invites them to speak out at three-hour "feedback sessions" in his Manhattan office on alternate Thursday nights.

"I can learn from patients just as they can learn from me," Dr. Belsky explains. "But I don't believe everything I hear from them — and vice versa." He thinks his group sessions encourage patients to think more about what they want in their health care — and then to demand it.

"Fateful Decision"

"Next to choosing a mate," Dr. Belsky said at a recent session, "choosing a doctor is the most fateful decision we make. Our lives may be at stake. Yet we often make the selection without preparation or knowledge."

Discussions of this theme at his feedback meetings have become the basis of Dr. Belsky's new book, "How to Choose and Use Your Doctor" (Arbor House, $7.95). Its main aim is to puncture what he calls "the medical mystique" — an aura of power and expertise that overwhelms many patients and keeps them from evaluating their doctors. Such awe — as evidenced by the gripes of patients attending Dr. Belsky's sessions — can later change to alienation and even rage.

One woman complained that doctors always gave her "the runaround." Another told of going to four physicians with symptoms, only to be told she was "neurotic." Finally, a fifth diagnosed her condition as hypoglycemia.

There were tales of "outrageous referral fees," and a consensus among Dr. Belsky's patients that as women, they were talked down to and considered "overly emotional" by many doctors. In each case, Dr. Belsky asked: "What do you think the doctor should have done? Why didn't you tell him how you felt?"

"Examine" Your Doctor

He goes a step further in his book, specifying just what people should demand of their physicians. "Start by choosing a doctor who is connected with a teaching hospital. Ask him — or her — how he's keeping up with the medical profession. Is he attending meetings, reading professional journals? Find out just what his fees are."

Dr. Belsky suggests that the patient's assessment include the following questions: How is the waiting room run? Is the doctor always behind schedule on appointments? (A Belsky hint — telephone the office before coming in for your appointment to see how the doctor's schedule is running.) Does your physician take a complete medical history? Does he or she listen to your description of symptoms and then explain the diagnosis and any instructions carefully?

"Speak up. Be assertive," Dr. Belsky charges his patients. "If you're disgusted, let the physician know it. The best advocate of your rights is you. Forget the medical mystique. You owe it to yourself to be a questioning, well-informed patient."

Cutting Down on Blood Fats

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband recently learned he has too many triglycerides in his blood. His count was 316.

We can't find much information on triglycerides and wondered if you could help us. What is the difference between triglycerides and cholesterol, since they are both fatty substances? Also, where could we get more information concerning triglycerides? He is on a no sugar, no starch, and no fried foods diet.

DEAR READER — I get that question often. No wonder since heart and vascular disease is the most common serious disease we have in our culture.

Cholesterol is a waxy substance from the bile. It is not really a fat. It has a yellowish mushy consistency. It is transported with fat (triglycerides) into the artery wall. A greater amount of cholesterol than fat remains in the wall and causes the cholesterol deposits that cause heart and vascular disease in man.

Triglycerides are simply fats. The fat you eat is usually made up of fatty acids connected to glycerol (glycerine). Three fatty acids connected to glycerol is a triglyceride. That is what you find in animal fat and most vegetable fats. Look on the food labels now appearing and you will see the terms monoglyceride, diglyceride and triglyceride. That means one, two or three fatty acids attached to the glycerine. It is all fat, and that is what you want to know.

The fatty acids can be saturated fat or unsaturated fat. The cholesterol, fat (triglycerides), and a blood protein combine to form a soluble substance in the bloodstream called a lipoprotein. If you want more details on triglycerides and cholesterol, write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.J. 10019. Send 50 cents, a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and ask for The Health Letter number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing about my son. He has erthropoietic protoporphria. It was not diagnosed accurately until he joined the Marines when he was 18. He was medically discharged after 40 days of hospital examinations and is now going to school at the university.

I understand this is a metabolic disease and part of the problem is an allergy to the sun. I am wondering if anything in the nature of a diet could improve the condition.

Life without the sun is not an easy adjustment, and I'm wondering if he should have some type of vitamin supplement.

DEAR READER — Yes, that is a rare disease all right. It was only described a short time ago. It belongs to a group of disorders involving pigment formation in the body. The pigment in the type of disorder your son has is caused by excessive pigment formation by the liver and a small amount from the formation of red cells.

The form he has causes what might at first appear as an intense, sudden reaction to the sun, with reddening and swelling of the exposed areas. Prolonged exposure can lead to an eczema-like appearance which gradually heals and may even leave scarring.

I am happy to tell you that this form of porphyria usually doesn't cause any serious disability nor affect the outlook for life expectancy. So, your son should live a healthy, normal life — except if he wants to protect his skin he will have to avoid the sun.

I am less happy to tell you that this is the only treatment other than symptomatic measures when sun exposure causes problems.

Dear Abby

Hubby Holds Car Keys Till Wife Votes Wallace

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is mean. He bought me a new Chevrolet, then wouldn't give me the keys until I signed a pledge to support George Wallace in '76. He and I never agree on anything, including politics.

Abby, I don't think this pledge should be binding since he forced me to sign it. My preacher says it is not binding as it was signed under duress.

I'm afraid to tell my husband what the preacher said since he doesn't think too much of the preacher and might make me sign another pledge to quit attending "that damn fool Baptist Church."

I value your opinion. Should I support Mr. Wallace? I don't like him, but then I don't like anyone else either, including my husband.

C.M. IN TUSTIN, CALIF.

DEAR D.M.: The secret ballot is an inalienable right in the U.S.A. You can't sign it away, and your husband can't force you to.

The "pledge" he demands is both absurd and unenforceable. Vote for the candidate of your choice.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter about Pisher the Poodle: Of course, I believe dogs understand what is being said to them.

Even though we provided a sitter for Ferdinand, our English bulldog, during our absence, he was very much annoyed with us upon our return.

He ignored our warm and friendly greetings, and wouldn't even come near us for days.

Then, my husband finally cornered him and explained in detail that we had to leave him and go to England because we weren't able to find a collar large enough for him here.

It took Ferdinand a long time to buy that story, but eventually he was wagging his tail and happily rejoined the family.

VERA IN NEWPORT

DEAR VERA: Next time, explain to your English bulldog where you are going and why, and you won't get the cold shoulder on your return.

DEAR ABBY: I am a healthy, active 76-year-old woman, and nobody takes me for a day older than 60. I lost my husband four years ago have have dated many interesting, eligible men since, but I never considered remarrying — until I met Julius.

He is a handsome, 69-year-old southern gentleman-type who was much too proper to go beyond a kiss before marriage.

To cut a long story short, Julius and I were married two months ago, and much to my surprise, I discovered that he didn't know the first thing about satisfying a woman. He had been married twice, so I couldn't understand it.

It doesn't seem possible for a man whose kisses promised so much to be so totally inept when it comes to lovemaking. (He's unbelievably selfish.)

Perhaps the bedroom performance shouldn't be so important to a woman my age, but it is.

I pretend that he is a good lover, but he's miserable. How can I let Julius know that he's not satisfying me without hurting his ego?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: An improved martial relationship is more important than Julius' ego. You do him no favor by pretending satisfaction. If he's able to satisfy himself, he's able to satisfy you. Some honest dialogue can make him more sensitive to your needs. You can be effective without being cruel. Start talking.

The Second Forty

Tempest in a Dishpan

Have you a problem as a mature woman, or with one? For advice write Margaret Brookfield, Information Center on the Mature Woman, 515 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

*****

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I am 15 years younger than my husband, who recently retired. I'm still working and thoroughly enjoying the contacts my job gives me and sometimes bring a colleague home to dinner with us.

I enjoy whipping up a quick meal on such occasions, but if I leave the dishes for my husband to do the next morning, he gets very unpleasant and claims that I'm emasculating him. Is this fair?

Y.W.

Dear Y.W.

Of course it isn't fair — but is everything?

One question: do you bring your husband and his interests into the conversation at these dinners, or do you and your colleague "talk shop" and leave him out in the cold?

After their retirement many men suffer a loss of self-esteem. This may be the case with your husband, and expecting him to do the dishes after you've entertained your working companion may be rubbing salt in his wounds.

Your husband needs to have his ego built up. Try inviting his friends over for special evenings now and then. Once he feels more confident and involved, the task of doing the dishes will fade into its proper perspective.

As another solution, if it's not too expensive, consider buying a dishwasher.

Nay-Saying Approved

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

A hearty "well-done" to your recent correspondent who had dared to say "no" to another woman who wanted to move in with her and "amen" to your endorsement of her action.

I fell into the trap of saying "yes" when my daughter asked me to take care of my grandson — age 5 — so she could take a part-time job. When I found that I just couldn't keep up with an active youngster and canceled the deal, we had a most unpleasant scene. We're reconciled now, but it would have been much easier if I'd just refused at the beginning.

D.C.

Dear D.C.:

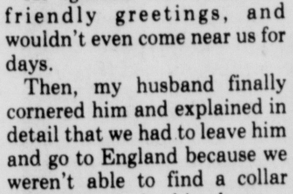

It's not always possible to know at the outset that you're going to regret saying "yes." You may even have thought it would be fun to take care of your grandson, but, if at the very beginning, you didn't want to do it, then you should have said so.

On the other hand, you were right in canceling the arrangement once you found it too taxing, and your daughter should have taken your decision in better grace.

One of the nice things about getting older is being more sure about what we really want to do — and don't.

U.N. Rating At Low Point

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J.

The public's rating of the United Nations' performance has declined to a 30-year low point following passage of a resolution condemning Zionism as a "form of racism and racial discrimination." The great majority of Americans, however, continue to favor retaining U.S. membership.

In the latest survey, 33 per cent say the United Nations is doing a "good job" in trying to solve the problems it has had to face, while 51 per cent say a "poor job."

The proportion currently giving the UN a favorable rating is down 8 points from a survey completed in January of the current year. That survey showed 41 per cent saying the UN was doing a good job and 38 per cent saying a poor job.

Although the performance rating given the UN is at a low point, three Americans in every four believe the U.S. should not give up its membership in this organization.

The United Nations General Assembly in November approved, by a vote of 72 to 35 with 32 abstentions, a resolution describing Zionism, the movement to establish a Jewish nation in Palestine, as a "form of racism and racial discrimination."

The UN action touched off debate on U.S. participation in the world body, with some political leaders proposing a cancellation of voluntary U.S. contributions to the UN and others saying we should resign from the 30-year-old organization.

Following is the question dealing with the performance of the UN:

"In general, do you feel the United Nations is doing a good job or a poor job in trying to solve the problems it has had to face?"

Here are the latest results and trend since 1967:

	Good Job Pct.	Poor Job Pct.	No Opin. Pct.

Gallup Poll

Results from surveys prior to 1967 are based on comparable questions and show favorable performance ratings far outweighing unfavorable ratings.

Following is the question asked concerning our membership in the UN in surveys over the last quarter-century, with the trend:

"Do you think the United States should give up its membership in the United Nations, or not?"

Views Of Opinion Leaders

An earlier Gallup survey of opinion leaders from 70 nations of the free world indicated that most would favor the UN's taking on new roles. These include the creation of a permanent United Nations peace-keeping force and the establishment of universities in major areas of the world.

Some critics of the UN reached in the survey felt that the organization's effectiveness had been seriously curtailed by the veto powers of the Security Council and by the voting rules in the General Assembly, which give as much weight to the vote of smaller nations as to the vote of larger ones.

The opinion leaders interviewed in that survey favored, by more than a 2-to-1 margin, limiting the veto powers of the Security Council. A closer vote was recorded on changing the voting rules to give less weight to the vote of smaller nations, with 48 per cent favoring such a change and 43 per cent opposed.

The latest results for the general public are based on interviews with 1,507 adults, 18 and older, taken in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 21-24.

Staubach Just Threw and Hoped

A Sad Day in the Tarkenton Family

Fran Tarkenton (L), a quarterback of the Minnesota Vikings, is not a happy man after his team was defeated, 17-14 by the Dallas Cowboys in Sunday's NFC playoffs, and he had yet to learn that his father, Dallas, 63, died of a heart attack while watching the game in Savannah, Ga. The Reverend Tarkenton (R), is shown in a 1973 photo. (UPI)

Pearson Did Rest

(United Press International)

Desperation is when you are four points down and 50 yards away from pay dirt with less than 30 seconds remaining in the game against the best defensive team in the National Football Conference.

That's when it's nice to have luck on your side...as the Dallas Cowboys found out Sunday in their shocking 17-14 upset of the defending NFC champion Minnesota Vikings in the opening round of the NFL playoffs.

Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach, his team trailing 14-10 in the 59th minute of the game, took the snap from center in the shotgun formation and fired a long desperation pass to Drew Pearson into the teeth of Minnesota's prevent defense.

Pearson and defensive back Nate Wright both pulled up short at the five yard line with Pearson taking a stride back upfield toward the underthrown ball and Wright tumbling to the ground. A surprised Pearson snagged the ball waist high and gingerly steppped past the fallen defensive back into the end zone for the winning points.

"You just have to throw it up there and hope the receiver can outjump the defense or just get lucky," explained Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He did."

In the other playoff game Sunday, Oakland nipped Cincinnati 31-28. On Saturday, defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh dumped Baltimore 28-10 and Los Angeles routed St. Louis 35-23.

Dallas will visit Los Angeles for the NFC championship and Oakland will travel to Pittsburgh for the AFC title game next Sunday to determine the participants in Super Bowl X Jan. 18 in Miami.

"The pass was underthrown and I had to come back for it," Pearson said of the reception which denied Minnesota a shot at a third straight Super Bowl appearance. "All along Roger (Staubach) kept asking me if I could get deep. Finally we ran out of chances. I told him this was the time.

"I gave Nate Wright an inside move and we were even when the ball was thrown," he added. "It felt like he bumped me. Anyway, we both saw it was short and both tried to hold up. I reached back and got it on my hip.

Minnesota Coach Bud Grant saw the play differently.

"It was clear as night and day that Nate was pushed," Grant said. "But that's the ball game. It's the old basketball play, push off and jump up to the ball."

The Cowboys effectively muffled NFC leading quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who passed for just 100 yards in his worst game of the season. Tarkenton's father, the Rev. Dr. Dallas Tarkenton, suffered a fatal heart attack while watching the game on television at home in Savannah, Ga. He was 63.

Minnesota picked up just 214 in total offense and the Vikings's first touchdown came on a drive of just four yards — following a Cliff Harris fumble of a Neil Clabo punt.

Minnesota's second touchdown, with 5:11 left in the game, culminated a 70-yard drive with Brent McClanahan plowing in from the one.

Dallas also had a four-yard touchdown run by Doug Dennison in the third quarter and a 24-yard field goal by Toni Fristch earlier in the fourth quarter.

Ken Stabler threw three touchdown passes to push Oakland out to a 31-14 lead before Ken Anderson found his passing arm with two fourth quarter touchdown tosses to pull the Bengals within three points.

Stabler hit Mike Siani with a nine-yard touchdown pass and Bob Moore with an eight-yard scoring strike to help stake the Raiders to a 17-7 halftime lead. Pete Banaszak added a six-yard touchdown run in the third period and Stabler found reserve tight end Dave Casper for a two-yard touchdown pass and what proved to be the winning points early in the fourth quarter.

Anderson hit Charlie Joiner with a 25-yard touchdown pass and found Isaac Curtis with a 14-yard TD toss a short time later to pull the Bengals back into contention late in the game. Stan Fritts and Lenvil Elliott scored on short runs for the first two Bengal touchdowns.

"We never expected it to be easy," said Oakland Coach John Madden. "Cincinnati is a very explosive team and you never really can keep the Bengals under control even with a big lead. But in the end it came down to our defense against their offense and we prevailed."

Pittsburgh relied on a magnificent defensive effort plus the running of Franco Harris in disposing of Baltimore. The Steelers limited the explosive young Colts to 154 yards in total offense—just one more yard than what Harris himself accounted for on the ground.

The Colts, who turned around from a 2-12 season last year to 10-4 and the playoffs this year, played more than three quarters of the game without quarterback Bert Jones, who strained an arm in Baltimore's first series when he was accidentally kicked by a Pittsburgh defender.

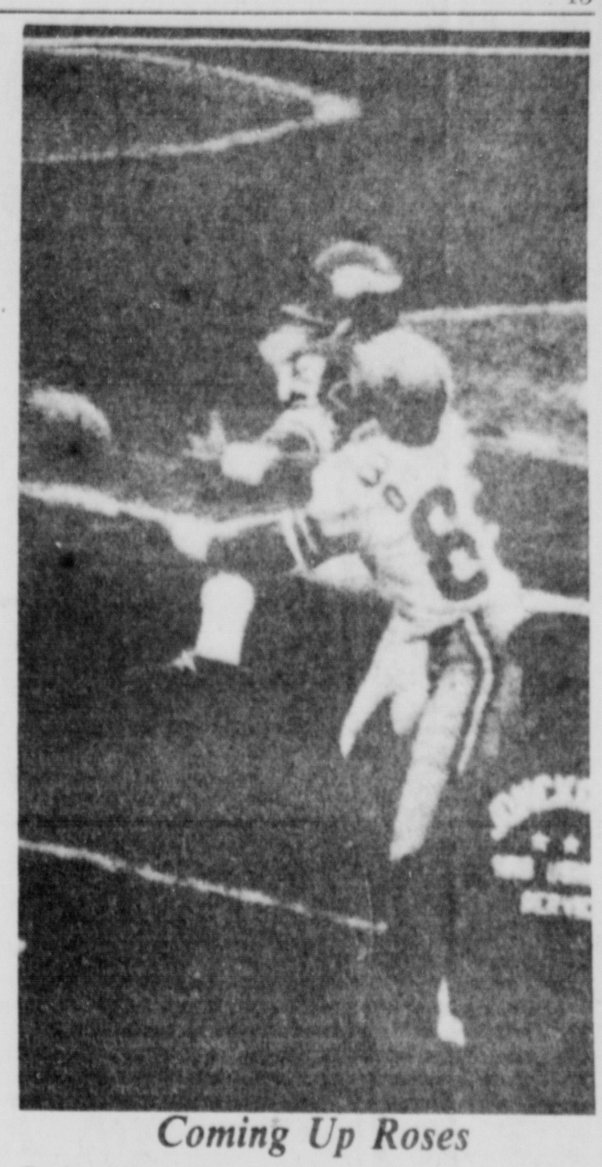

He was relieved by Marty Domres, who threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Glenn Doughty for Baltimore's lone touchdown as the Colts stayed within four points heading into the fourth quarter.

Los Angeles throttled St. Louis defensively in the first half, running out to a 28-9 halftime lead. The Ram defense scored two touchdowns on interceptions in the first half before turning the game over to the offense and Lawrence McCutcheon.

Jack Youngblood returned an interception 47 yards for one Los Angeles touchdown and Bill Simpson carried one back 65 yards for another Ram score to decide the contest in the game's initial 30 minutes.

McCutcheon, who sat out the Rams' regular season finale against Pittsburgh, rushed for a playoff record 202 yards in 37 carries to help the Rams win their seventh straight gave.

"I wasn't aware of how many yards I had," said McCutcheon. "I knew that I had carried the ball a lot because I got tired at the end. The most I had carried it previously was 39 times in college.

Coming Up Roses

Cowboys' Drew Pearson (88) is about to catch a 50 yard touchdown pass to defeat the Vikings in the final seconds of play Sunday as Nate Wright tries to defend during NFC playoff action. (UPI)

Landry Reacts: "A Miracle"

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Coach Tom Landry of the Dallas COwboys had a new synonym for victory today.

"A miracle," he said.

Landry spoke of the Cowboys' come-from-behind 17-14 triumph over the Minnesota Vikings, which put Dallas into the championship game of the National Football Conference at Los Angeles next Sunday.

Only 24 seconds remained when Drew Pearson, who caught only four passes in the game, all of them in the last 111 seconds, took the ball away from two Minnesota defensive backs, Terry Brown and Nate Wright, for the decisive touchdown.

"Our only hope was to throw and hope for a miracle," Landry added.

But he said he felt victory was deserved since he believed the Cowboys outplayed the Vikings all the way.

"I can't believe it yet," Landry said of Pearson's game-winning catch. "But it was a situation where it was called for and you hope when the defense is playing deep in a prevent that you can throw it up there and your receiver will outjump the defense or just get lucky."

Pearson said Roger Staubach's pass for the winning touhdown was underthrown and "I had to come back for it."

He confessed he had told Staubach that he "could get deep" and "this was the time" for the bomb.

"It was the most important catch of my career," he said. "We dominated the game and should have won it."

"We both saw it was short and tried to hold up" Pearson said. "I reached back and got it on my hip. Our chances were slim and none. Even though everybody's talking about the last touchdown, we deserved to win."

Coach Bud Grant of the Vikings and his players believed it was a bum decision by the officials which gave Pearson the score.

Grant, declaring it a "one time in 100" catch, charged that Pearson pushed Wright and was guilty of offensive interference as both of them tried to get the ball.

"A receiver will get away with that one time in 100 chances," Grant said. "He has nothing to lose because if he's caught the ball simply goes back and you try again. It was the old basketball play. You push off and jump up for the ball."

The Vikings, though, benefitted by another break, on a second period punt which resulted in Minnesota's first touchdown. The ball came to Cowboys' returner Cliff Harris and Minnesota's Autry Beamon intimidated Harris before he had a chance to field the ball. But Cowboy lineman Pat Donovan thought it had hit Harris, which would have been a fumble, tried to recover the ball but lost it, and Fred McNeill recovered for the Vikings on the Dallas 4.

That was Harris' view of the incident.

"I had to back off," he said. "It didn't touch me, but there was a lot of confusion."

The Cowboys contend Beaman interfered with Harris' right to catch the ball, but referee Chuck Heberling said Beaman was blocked into Harris by a Dallas player.

Still the Vikings took three plays before Chuck Foreman plunged across from the one for a touchdon and a 7-0 lead. Thereafter the Vikings got across the 50 into Dallas territory only twice, scoring a touchdown in the final period when quarterback Fran Tarkenton directed a 70-yard, 11-play march which ended when Brent McClanahan dove one yard for a touchdown and a 14-10 Minnesota lead.

"It was a remarkable performance by our defense," Landry said. "Our defense has played some great games and some not so great. In this one, they put it all together. To hold Minnesota to 14 points is remarkable."

Dallas dominated the game. Seven times the Cowboys advanced across midfield, scoring their first touchdown on a four-yard run by Doug Dennison and a 24-yard field goal by Toni Fritsch.

Staubach was a standout victor in the quarterback confrontation with Tarkenton. Tarkenton completed 12 of 26 passes for 135 yards and was sacked four times for 35 yards, while Staubach hit on 17 of 29 throws for 246 yards and was sacked five times for 21 yards.

It Wasn't Easy for Raiders

SPORTS TODAY

OAKLAND (UPI) — The road to the AFC Championship game didn't prove a joy ride for either the Pittsburgh Steelers or the Oakland Raiders — the two clubs everyone figured right from the start would be there at the end— so what can fans expect of their big meeting next Sunday?

Ken Anderson, the Cincinnati Bengals' fine quarterback whose team was beaten by the Raiders 31-28 Sunday in the opening round of the conference playoffs, for one, thinks next Sunday's game will be a tough as they come.

"They are two great teams, and it should be a good game," Anderson said. "I think it is so close it is tough t give an edge to either one. Pittsburgh will be at home and maybe that will make a difference.

The home field didn't mean anything to the Raiders a year ago when they hosted the Steelers in the title game and went down, 24-13, so naturally, they don't think it will amount to much for Pittsburgh this time.

The Steelers, playing a Baltimore team that had to go most of the way without its No. 1 quarterback (Bert Jones), huffed and puffed their way to a 28-10 victory on Saturday. The Raiders had as tough a time holding off the Bengals on Sunday. They have the added disadvantage of a day less of practice and the loss of nearly a day in traveling to Pittsburgh.

The Steelers, as defending Super Bowl champions, more than likely will be the favorites in the conference title game, which seems about right.

Most Cincinnati players wondered what will happen when the Raiders go with three three-man down linemen defense against the Steelers.

"Anyway you look at it, it should be a close game," said Bengals tight end Bob Trumpy. "It'll certainly be a game worth watching. It'll also be interesting to see how Oakland's three-man defensive line does against Franco Harris."

The Raiders's three-man defensive line is more exaggerated than real. Rarely do the Raiders wind up with only three men up front. It's something they give the opposition to think about and more often than not they wind up with five men up front by the time the ball is snapped.

Last year in the title game Oakland didn't stop Harris or Rocky Bleier, Franco's running mate, so it seems obvious the Raiders will have to come up with a defense that can. Otherwise, the 1975 title game may be a repeat of the 1974 edition.

"Obviously, we will have to do something about Harris," said Raiders' coach John Madden. "He is the man who makes their offense go. If you stop him you have a pretty good chance to win the game."

Sunday's victory over Cincinnati showed quarterback Ken Stabler and linebacker Ted Hendricks at their best. Stabler completed 17 of 23 passes for 199 yards and three touchdowns, while Hendricks sacked Anderson four times — the last during a crucial final series of downs which saw the Bengals give up the ball at the Oakland 38 with a little more than three minutes left in the game.

"We never thought for a moment the Bengals would be easy," said Stabler, "and the Steelers will be tougher yet. We had no set plan on what we would do offensively against Cincinnati. We went with what their defense dictated. I guess you could say we might play it the same way again. We know Pitsburgh will be tough. The Steelers always are and we always have good games with them. They're a great team with great personnel."

Hendricks thought his performance against the Bengals may have been his best as a pro.

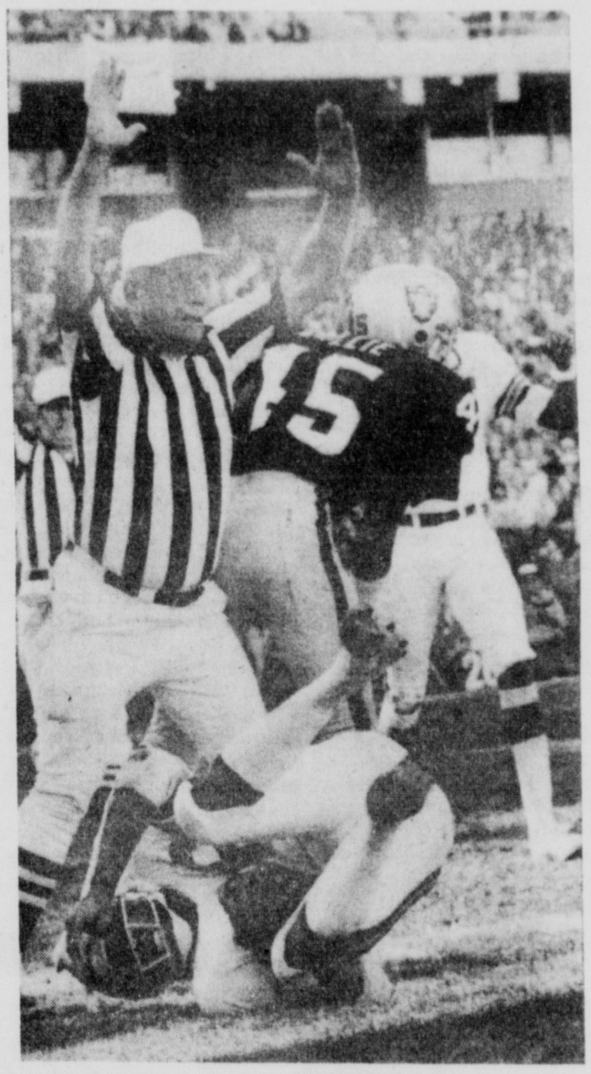

"I joined the Raiders because of their playoff potential," said Hendricks, who played out his option at Green Bay and cost Oakland its No. 1 draft choice plus one other pick. "This game (against Cincinnati) made it all pay off. Naturally, I'm pleased. Four quarterback sacks seems like a nice day's work. Doesn't it?"

Stabler threw scoring passes of nine yards to Mike Siani and eight yards to Bob Moore and old George Blanda booted a 27-yard field goal for a 17-7 halftime lead, which became 31-14 early in the final quarter after a six-yard smash by Pete Banaszak and a two-yard pass from Stabler to Dave Casper.

But Anderson hit Charlie Joiner with a 25-yarder and Isaac Curtis with a 14-yarder to draw Cincinnati to within three. Then, the Oakland defense, led by Hendricks, took over when it seemed the young Bengals would turn things around in the closing minutes, and that was it.

The victory sent the Raiders into their seventh league or conference championshiop game. They have won only once in the big one — in 1967 — but went on to lose to the Packers in the Super Bowl.

"None of this means a thing if you don't get to the Super Bowl," said Raider managing general partner Al Davis. "We've been down this road a lot of times. Let's hope we can go all the way for a change."

Those Bengals Won't Fade Away

OAKLAND (UPI) — Paul Brown's best Cincinnati Bengals' team is through for this season after losing 31-28 to the Oakland Raiders in the AFC playoffs Sunday, but they left enough claw marks to indicate they like it near the top and intend to stay there.

In fact, the Bengals knocked the Raiders out of playoff picture with a last quarter flurry after Oakland fans and a nationwide television audience thought the game was won.

Down 14-31 in the last period, the Bengals came roaring back with two quick touchdowns as quarterback Ken Anderson suddenly got hot. They then failed to capitalize on one good chance and a long shot and Oakland sewed up a shot at the AFC championship against Pittsburgh next Sunday.

There were almost five minutes left in the game when tackle Ron Carpenter pounced on an Oakland fumble on the Raider 37-yard line. But Ted Hendricks sacked Anderson for the fourth time for a six-yard loss and three straight passes failed to get a first down.

That was the last time Cincinnati had the ball in the 1975 season.

"I thought a key to the game was our not getting that first down. We had a big opportunity and couldn't take advantage of it," Anderson said.

The Bengals' long shot chance came with 50 seconds left. Oakland was forced to punt from the Cincinnati 48. The Bengals put on an all-out rush and nearly blocked Ray Guy's punt. But they were called for running into the kicker and Oakland ran out the clock.

"It was the last actual real chance we had," Brown said after the game. "It was a calculated risk and we came close. There were only seconds left and blocking the kick was about the only shot we had at that stage."

"We got overpowered for a period of time there," said Brown, "but we finally got back into the game. I told the team I was proud of them. They lost to a splendid team— and on their home grounds too."

Cincinnati is perhaps the team best able to assess next Sunday's Pittsburgh-Oakland game. The Bengals played each twice this year, losing both to the Steelers and splitting with Oakland.

Drew Pearson Cashed in Against 100-1 Odds

BLOOMINGTON, MINN. (UPI) — Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson cashed in a 100-1 gamble for the winning touchdown against the Minnesota Vikings Sunday, Vikings' Coach Bud Grant said after the 17-14 defeat.

Grant said there was no question that Pearson committed offensive interference on Vikings' defensive back Nate Wright before Pearson caught the 50-yard touchdown pass from Roger Staubach that won the game.

"It was clear as day and night that Nate was pushed," Grant said, "but that's the ballgame. From our side of the field there was absolutely no question Nate was pushed."

"A receiver will get away with that one time in 100 chances. He has nothing to lose because if he's caught, the ball simply goes back and you try again. It was the old basketball play, you push off and jump up for the ball."

Grant would make no comment on the officiating. Only a week ago he was fined an undisclosed amount by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for a declaration that many league officials were "amateurs" and that they should be made full time professionals in their jobs. Sunday, about the officiating, he said, "I have no comment. There's too big a club over my head."

"I'm stunned," Wright said. "That's all I can say. I thought I had an interception and the next thing I knew I was on the ground. What a way to end a great season."

Strong safety Terry Brown, also covering Pearson on the game breaking play, said, "It doesn't matter now. I was running side by side with Pearson and he pushed Nate down. I saw it. Two officials were there, but they said, 'no.'

"It's really a heck of a way to lose a game. I would rather lose 20-0 than this way. We have to accept defeat but it was a bad call," Brown said.

Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who said he had a "clear view" of Pearson's catch, added, "the outcome of the game was in the hands of the officials. You can tell as well as I did that he interfered with Nate. Two officials were right there but they wouldn't call it. The whole game boils down to that one play."

Tarkenton said the Vikings "never did run the ball very well, but in playoff games it always seems the defenses take over. Daltas played their typical strong defensive game and they played it well.

"Our running game didn't start off very well and they put plenty of pressure on me. The only good drive we had all day was in the fourth quarter which led to our second touchdown. We finally made some plays on that drive."

Vikings' running back Chuck Foreman gave credit to the Dallas defense, but said the result "was the most shocking thing that has happened to me since I started playing. The official just blew the call on Nate. I know people make mistakes and all but nothing as obvious as this."

Official Is Kayoed

BLOOMINGTON, MINN. (UPI) — A whiskey bottle thrown from the stands struck a National Football League game official in the head and knocked him unconscious Sunday in the final seconds of the Dallas Cowboys-Minnesota Vikings football game.

A league official called for better policing to avoid other such incidents.

Armen Terzian, field judge of the game, was standing near the Vikings' end zone with less than 24 seconds to play in the game after Dallas had scored to take the lead when he was hit.

The bottle hit him in the forehead and bounced more than 30 feet, almost reaching the players who were lined up for an attempted conversion.

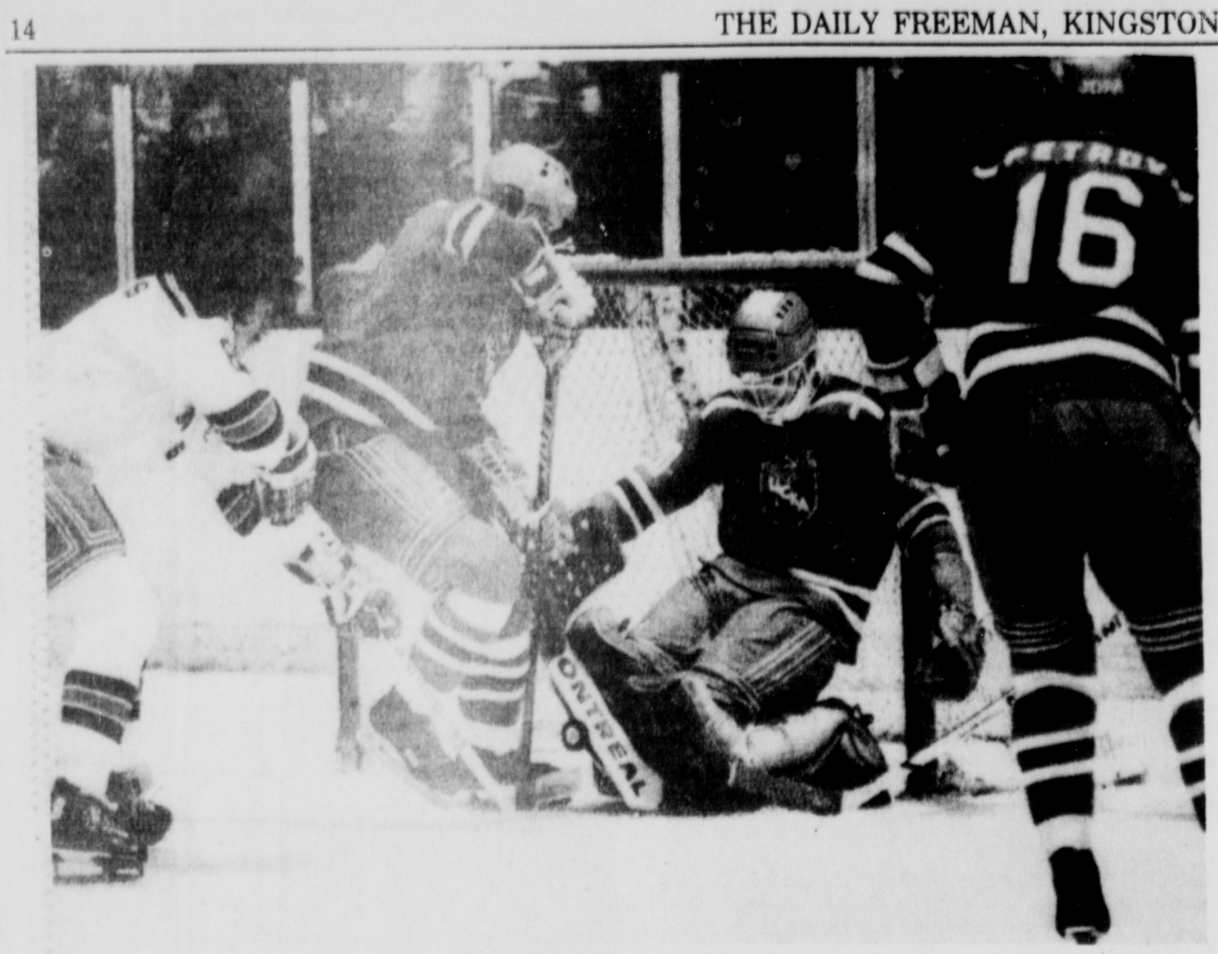

Later, Terzian, athletic director of the San Francisco high school system for the last 15 years, said that he had "just thrown a whiskey bottle off the field" when he was hit.

Referee Chuck Heberling said that "there were other bottles and cans thrown on the field before the incident."

Jack Reader, NFL supervisor of officials, said, "We need better policing at these games. Without it there are going to be other serious incidents and this is going to happen again."

Vikings' president Max Winter offered a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the man who threw the bottle which hit Terzian. The bottle was thrown from the bleachers near the Minnesota end zone.

A compression bandage was applied to a gash on Terzian's forehead before he left the field. He walked to the dressing room and obviously was shaken when he participated in a postgame news conference.

Flyers Suffer Through Poor One

(United Press International)

Although the New York Rangers suffered a thrashing from the Soviet Army Sunday night, the National Hockey League may have been spared further embarrassment by the luck of the schedule.

Instead of leading off an eight-game Russian invasion by matching the two national champions, the schedule makers saved that showcase event for the finale. It proved a fortunate move since the Soviet Army was highly impressive in opening its North American exhibition tour with a 7-3 rout over the Rangers, while the Philadelphia Flyers suffered through one of their poorer efforts in dropping a 4-2 decision to the Boston Bruins.

It was only the fifth loss in 35 games for Philadelphia.

The Stanley Cup champion Flyers, whose coach Fred Shero is the leading NHL exponent of the Soviet style of hockey, will host the Russian champion Soviet Army on Jan. 11. Boston also will get a crack at the Army team on Jan. 8.

There were three other NHL games played Sunday night with Vancouver edging Detroit, 3-2; Kansas City beating California, 3-1, and Buffalo skating to a 2-2 tie against Chicago.

In the World Hockey Association, Calgary beat Winnipeg, 6-4; San Diego beat Minnesota, 2-1; Phoenix beat Denver, 5-3; Cincinnati beat Indianapolis, 4-1; New England beat Cleveland, 4-0, and Quebec beat Toronto, 6-1.

Bruins 4, Flyers 2

Soviet Wings 7, Rangers 3

Vladimir Petrov and Vladimir Vikulov, both veterans of the Russian team that played against Team Canada in 1972, each scored two goals to lead the Soviet attack. Phil Esposito, one of two Rangers to play on Team Canada, had a hand in all of the New York scoring with a goal and two assists.

WHA

Danny Lawson scored two goals in the opening minute of play to start Calgary on its way over Winnipeg; Gary Bredin and Ray Adduono scored 2:25 apart in the second period to provide San Diego with both its goals against Minnesota; Phoenix handed Denver its fourth consecutive loss behind a pair of goals from Del Hall; Cincinnati scored two goals in each of the first two periods to beat Indianapolis and snap a three-game losing streak; Tom Webster had a goal and two assists and Christer Abrahamsson registered his second shutout when New England beat Cleveland; and Quebec coasted over Toronto with Marc Tardif notching his 33rd and 34th goals of the season as well as his 38th assist.

Rangers Got Hockey Lesson

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet Army hockey team came to the United States hoping to learn something in their games with National Hockey League teams. Sunday night, though, it was the New York Rangers who absorbed a lesson in how to play precision hockey.

"We didn't expect to win so easily. We anticipated facing a very strong type of hockey," said smiling Soviet Army Coach Konstantin Loktev, speaking through an interpreter after the Army team thrashed the Rangers, 7-3. Our principle is to learn something everywhere we play. Victory is just a matter of fact—though we're very willing to win."

"Let's face it, they were ready for us or they wouldn't have come here," said Rangers coach Ron Stewart. "If their players don't move, they don't get the puck. They never give the puck to the man standing still. They move the puck better than we do."

The Rangers took command in the opening moments, aggressively controlling the puck. Steve Vickers netted a backhander past Army goaltender Vladislav Tretiak only 21 seconds into the contest.

But it didn't take the Russians long to retaliate. With Doug Jarrett off for hooking, Boris Alexsandrov shot Vladimir Petrov's rebound past falling Ranger netminder John Davidson at 4:04 of the first period and, 1:15 later, Vladimir Vikulov scored from point-blank range.

By the end of the first period, the Russians had a 3-1 lead, adding a goal by Valeir Kharlamov, and extended the margin to 7-1 early in the third period after Petrov's second goal. Late tallies by Rod Gilbert and Phil Esposito, who assisted on New York's first two goals and took 10 shots altogether, made the score more respectable.

"They're very mobile," said Gilbert. "We couldn't forecheck them. But every team which sees the film of this game can benefit from our mistakes, especially how to defend against the long pass."

"We were not ready for this game, not at all," said Esposito. "I don't think they dominated us. They were shooting out blind from their zone and we were getting caught."

"The Rangers looked very heavy (sluggish)," Loktev said. "If they'd waited, instead of going in with just one or two forwards, they'd have improved more. The type of hockey the Rangers played was more individualistic; we had five men playing together. My opinion is Team Canada (which edged the Russians 4-3-1 in 1972's series) was stronger."

Asked what it would take to beat the Russians, Loktev smilingly responded, "You must be Russian to beat us."

"I reserve my comment until they play some of the better teams," Vickers responded candidly. "I don't think even if we played our best game we would have beaten them".

NHL President Clarence Campbell, who before the series began described it as "the most important and meaningful series in international hockey," downplayed the result as only a victory over a mediocre NHL club.

"It was tough the series opened with the team least likely to win playing their strongest team," Campbell said of the Rangers, who went into the game with 34 points, a total higher than only eight of the 17 other NHL clubs.

"That's the luck of the draw. I'm not embarrassed for the NHL. If we beat their fifth, sixth, seventh or eighth place team I wouldn't take any credit. I have to see them play more rugged teams. They're playing three more, you know."

The Army team next plays at Montreal on Wednesday, followed by games at Boston on Jan. 8 and the finale of the eight-game series in Philadelphia on Jan. 11 against the Stanley Cup champion Flyers. The Soviet Wings, runnersup to the Army team in the USSR national championships, opens its series tonight in Pittsburgh. They then visit Buffalo next Sunday, Chicago on Jan. 7 and the New York Islanders Jan. 10.

Canucks 3, Red Wings 2

Vancouver raced to a 3-0 lead in the second period on goals by Garry Monahan, Don Lever and Bobby Lalonde, and then withstood a third period rally by Detroit. Nick Libett and Dan Maloney scored for the Red Wings, but they couldn't get the equalizer.

Scouts 3, Golden Seals 1

Guy Charron and Wilf Paiement each had a goal and two assists to lift Kansas City over California. Scouts' goaltender Dennis Herron was credited with 42 saves, allowing only one shot by Dave Gardner to get by him.

Sabres 2, Black Hawks 2

Stan Mikita scored on a power play with 1:48 left to play to lift Chicago into a tie. It was Mikita's second goal in 1:08 left to play and Bobby Schmautz followed with his second goal of the night into an empty net. "They took us a little lightly because of the 8-1 game they had here against us earlier this season," Bruins' Coach Don Cherry said of Philadelphia. "Maybe they were a little overconfident. But you've got to admit we played top notch hockey."

Gator Bowl Tonight

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Keep an eye on Florida's No. 35 in tonight's Gator Bowl game. That's what the Maryland defense is going to be doing.

No. 35 for Florida is Jimmy DuBose, a 215-pound senior fullback who rushed for 1,307 yards this fall, just five yards shy of the Southeastern Conference record, ripping off 204 yards against Florida State and topping the 100-yard mark in five other games.

"Jimmy DuBose is the picture perfect fullback," said Florida Coach Doug Dickey. He has the power to run over people and, when he gets into the open field, he runs like a halfback."

DuBose is the main reason the 14th-ranked Gators are favored over the 19th-ranked Maryland Terrapins in tonight's nationally televised Gator Bowl game (ABC, 9 p.m. EST).

Georgia, which plays Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day, held DuBose to less than 100 yards and upset Florida, 10-7, in the Gator Bowl Stadium in early November.

"That's just how we figured it," Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said after that game. "To beat Florida, you've got to at least partially neutralize Jimmy DuBose."

With DuBose setting the pace, Florida led the Southeastern Conference in total offense this past fall, averaging 405 yards per game while posting a 9-2 mark — the first time the Gators won nine games in regular season play. DuBose averaged nearly seven yards a carry.

However, if Maryland devotes too much time to DuBose, Gator speedster Tony Green (No. 33) could come back to haunt them. Green, a sophomore who took a back seat to DuBose this season, rushed for 178 yards in 1974 when Florida beat Maryland, 17-10, at Tampa, Fla.

"I don't think they'll be looking for me this year," said Green. "Why should they? I haven't had the sort of season I had last year. They'll be watching for DuBose inside. I'd be very surprised if they are worried about me and, although I've only been a step away several times, I'd be surprised if I had a good night against them again."

Florida isn't favored by much tonight. Maryland (8-2-1) has a pretty good offense of its own. The Terrapins don't have a Jimmy DuBose, but they averaged 375 yards a game enroute to their best season in 20 years.

Tailbacks Jimmy Franklin (No. 44), Rick Jennings (25) and Steve Atkins (38) each has averaged better than five yards a carry and fullback Tim Wilson (14) has done almost as well.

Also, the Florida defense, which already had lost two linebackers, may have lost two starting defensive linemen last week. Tackle Darrell Carpenter sprained a knee in practice and end Joe Allen sprained an ankle when he slipped on a stair at the motel where the team stayed before the game.

UCLA: No Problems

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The UCLA football team, having straightened out its problems with Coach Dick Vermeil, has developed a "desire to win" attitude as kickoff time draws nears for its Rose Bowl football game with No. 1 ranked Ohio State New Years Day.

Bruins' quarterback John Sciarra and noseguard Cliff Frazier said Sunday that the team's attitude has changed in the past week from one of carefree indifference to all-out dedication to beating the Buckeyes.

The two players admitted that immediately after the Bruins 25-22 triumph over Southern California in the season finale, the Bruins had looked forward to a period of fun and parties.

Sciarra, who was chairman of UCGA's unique players' executive committee, said the players had protested the tough workouts that Coach Vermeil had programmed because, "We thought preparing for the Rose Bowl game would be fun. We had heard that the 1972 USC team only had six workouts when it ripped Ohio State apart in the Rose Bowl.

"But that Trojan team was one of the greatest in collegiate history, which we are not."

Dave Price, Pacific-8 Conference public information director, recalled that USC had 10 to 12 workouts, not six, that year.

"I now think we were a little childish," said Sciarra. "I look back now and see the coach was right. We are well prjpared for the Rose Bowl game now." But, Sciarra said the attitude has changed in the past week.

Pointing to his Rose Bowl wristwatch which was given to him a few days ago, Sciarra said, "When I look at this watch in the future I would much rather have it remind me of a victory instead of a defeat."

Frazier said he felt that UCLA will be better prepared defensively for Ohio State since their regular season 41-20 loss to the Buckeyes.

"We don't plan to do anything different on defense in the Rose Bowl game than we did against them before," said Frazier. "We were making too many mistakes in the first game. We players weren't fulfilling our assignments properly.

"I have confidence that we will do it this time."

Frazier said that quarterback Cornelius Greene and two-time Heisman Trophy winner tailback Archie Griffin had hurt UCLA most in their first meeting.

Greene had an offense total of 218 yards, 120 rushing and 98 passing and Griffin 160 rushing in 21 carries, in that game.

Both Frazier and Sciarra said that running back Wendell Tyler, who has just had a cast removed from his left wrist, broken in the Stanford game, had a super workout Saturday.

"He has that great speed to be there for pitch out on the option play," Sciarra said. "When he turns a corner there's not too many who can catch him."

Both UCLA and Ohio State will hold workouts every day through Wednesday. However, they will begin to taper off the intensity of their drills Monday.

PBA Opens 1976 Tour

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — The Professional Bowlers Association kicks off its 1976 winter tour today as qualifying begins in the $75,000 Open at Bowling Square.

Earl Anthony, the crew-cut veteran from Tacoma, Wash., won $107,585 and seven tournaments, both single-year records, on the pro bowling trail in 1975 and he's the defending champion here. He was the first man crack the $100,000 barrier.

His main competition figures to come from Larry Laub of San Francisco, who won at Arcadia in 1974; Roy Buckley of Columbus, Ohio, who was the PBA's hottest bowler in the fall, and Marshall Holman of Medford, Ore., who captured the Hawaiian Invitational two weeks ago.

Another qualifying session is scheduled Tuesday with the top 24 scorers moving into the finals. The bowlers will have New Year's Eve off and compete Thursday and Friday before a cut to the final five players.

They'll meet Saturday for the title on national television (ABC).

A field of 144 is entered. First prize is $8,000 and the use of a van for a year.

Annaliese Kime—605

SAUGERTIES

Anneliese Kime, a consistent leader in the Sawyer Women's Bowling League, rolled her second 600 series of the season and nailed down her second position on the Top Ten list.

Kime hit 227 and 213 this time and decked a 605, the tenth best women's series of the season. Her previous 619 ranks fourth on the list.

There have now been a dozen 600 triples recorded by area women bowlers. Joan Jameson's 645 tops the pack. Sis Balash, with 613 and 603, is the only other bowler to roll a pair.

Maryann Maines was the Sawyer Women's runnerup with a 474 set. She was followed by Judy Plock at 451, Dot Peters with 448 and Debby Van Wart with 443.

Olympic Team Scores a First

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The U.S.Olympic hockey team won the Walter A. Brown International Hockey Tournament here, the first time the U.S. has won in the 16-year history of the event, by beating Spartak of the USSR 6-5 Sunday.

Spartak, which includes on its roster some of the USSR national team, is Russia's best club team. The Soviets had leads of 3-0 and 5-4, but Gary Ross, of Bemidji St. (Minn.), scored the winning goal on a 40-foot slapshot with 34 seconds left in the game.

Dodgers Trade With Mexico

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers today announced they have made a two-for-two swap with Monterrey of the Mexican League, acquiring righthander Cesar Moreno and catcher Fernando Camargo.

The Dodgers gave up pitcher Ron Allen and catcher-outfielder Lee Robinson in the trade.

Moreno, 20, and the 19-year-old Camargo were assigned to the Dodgers' Albuquerque Pacific Coast League farm club.

Cavaliers Now Finest Show in Cleveland

By United Press International

More than 55,000 fans have jammed their way into the Coliseum to see the last three Cleveland Cavalier games, but Bobby Smith remembers when things were very quiet.

"We have really come a long way," said Smith, who spent most of Sunday's game on the bench nursing a sore knee as the Cavs whipped Buffalo 111-88 to make it nine victories in their last 10 games.

"I remember the 1,500 crowds and the many times all you could hear was the bouncing of the ball on the floor," said Smith, who is the only original member left from the expansion Cleveland team that started in the National Basketball Association back in 1970.

With Smith on the sidelines, Dick Snyder took over and the sharpshooting guard connected on 15 of 24 from the field in tossing in his season high of 36 points. Snyder now needs only 43 more points to hit the 10,000-point mark in his career.

Cleveland is 11-4 since Nate Thurmond was obtained from the Chicago Bulls and the big center calls the Cavs' potential "unlimited."

"We won seven straight, then lost a tough one to Atlanta Friday, but we bounced back to beat Washington Saturday and came home to knock off the Braves," said Thurmond. "That is the sign of a solid team."

Jim Chones chipped in with 23 points for the Cavs, while Bob McAdoo paced the Braves with 26 points.

In other NBA games Sunday, Milwaukee edged Phoenix, 88-85; Boston beat Los Angeles, 123-113; Detroit drubbed Kansas City, 103-87; Portland put away Golden State, 96-92, and Seattle outlasted Houston, 116-106.

Over in the ABA, Denver shaded Indiana, 110-105, and St. Louis downed Virginia, 102-97.

Bucks 88, Suns 85

Junior Bridgeman's jump shot with 3:48 to go gave the Bucks the lead for the first time since the opening seconds of play and they went on to hand Phoenix its fourth loss in the last five games. Jim Price led the Bucks with 20 points, while Bridgeman had 15 and Elmore Smith 17.

Celtics 123, Lakers 113

Dave Cowens scored 17 of his 23 points in the last 18 minutes as Boston won its 11th game in the last 12. John Havlicek also had 23 points for Boston and JoJo White contributed 22.

Pistons 103, Kings 87

Curtis Rowe poured in 29 points as the Pistons saddled Kansas City with its ninth straight loss. The Detroit victory was achieved mostly without the services of 6-11 center Bob Lanier, who was ejected from the game in the second quarter after grabbing referee Richie Powers and later spitting on the floor.

Sonics 116, Rockets 106

Freddie Brown scored 23 points, including eight late in the fourth quarter, to pace the Seattle victory over Houston. A three-point play by Joe Meriweather brought Seattle to within 99-95 with 4:04 to play and the Sonics, led by Brown's four buckets, outscored Houston 13-3 over the next three minutes.

Trail Blazers 96, Warriors 92

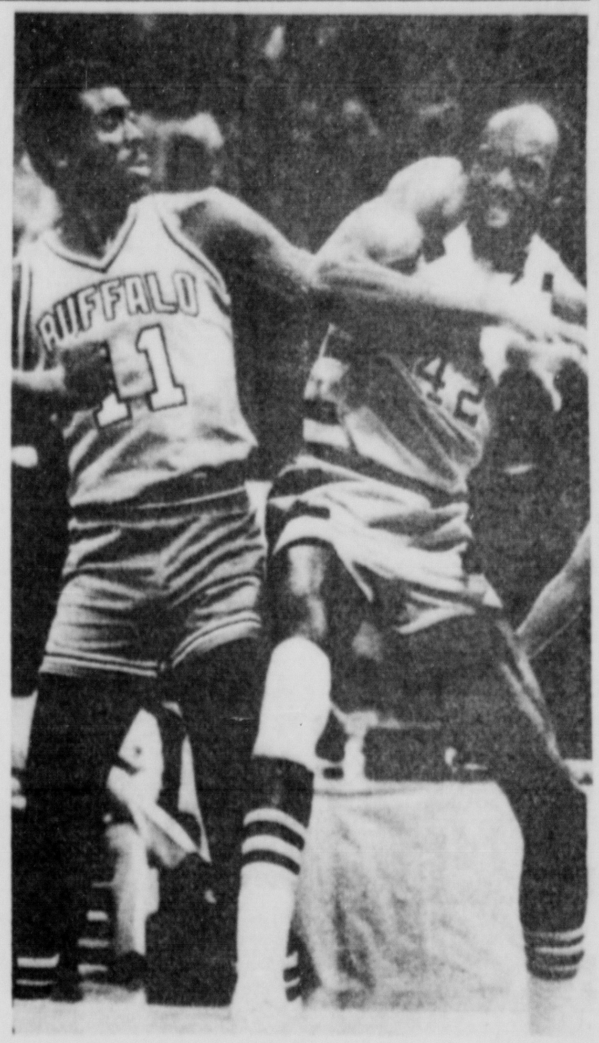

Guards Geoff Petrie and Lionel Hollins combined for 18 assists while Portland outscored the Warriors 10-2 during a five-minute span in the fourth quarter to put away the game. Petrie led all scorers with 24 points and Lloyd Neal added 19 points and 11 rebounds for Portland.

Spurs 110, Pacers 105

Dan Issel poured in 29 points and rookie David Thompson added 23 to lead the ABA-leading Nuggets to victory over Indiana. Veteran Ralph Simpson, with 18 points, clinched the game for Denver with a pair of free throws in the final two seconds.

Spirits 102, Squires 97

Ron Boone's 24 points led a balanced scoring attack Sunday night to help the Spirits hand the Squires a fifth straight loss. Marvin Barnes had 21 points for St. Louis, and Caldwell Jones and Freddie Lewis contributed 12 each. Virginia was led by Mel Bennett and Willie Wise with 23 points each.

Big Boys at Play

Cleveland's Nate Thurmond (42) takes away a rebound from Buffalo's Bob McAdoo (11) during Sunday NBA action. Cavs won, 111-88. (UPI)

GM Upset

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — New York Islanders' general manager William Torrey said Sunday that he was upset over the cancellation of last Friday night's National Hockey League game in Detroit with the Red Wings and that his team was in no way responsible for the action.

The game was cancelled because of a severe snowstorm but Torrey said the Islanders had arrived in Detroit prior to the cancellation and were prepared to play the game.

"Contrary to published reports, at no point did the New York Islanders or anyone connected with the Islanders organization agree to cancel the Friday Dec. 26 contest with the Detroit Red Wings," Torrey said in a prepared statement.

High Score Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — In the first Ohio State-UCLA meeting in October, the teams ran up a whopping total of 61 points. The Buckeyes won that one in a breeze 41-20.

Dick Vermeil, the Bruins' young coach, anticipates another high-scoring game in the Rose Bowl rematch on New Year's Day.

"Both teams are going to score in the 20s," he predicted Sunday. "If we can score four touthdowns, I think it'll be a pretty tight ball game."

Nose guard Cliff Frazier told a Huntington-Sheraton Hotel news conference UCLA will be better prepared defensively for Ohio State this time.

"But we don't plan to do anything different on defense in the Rose Bowl game than we did against them before," he added. "We were making too many mistakes in the first game.

"We weren't fulfilling our assignments properly. I have confidence that we will do it this time."

Quarterback John Sciarra said the Bruin football team had changed its attitude this week. He earlier headed a unique players' committee that protested UCLA's tough Rose Bowl workouts to Vermeil.

"We thought preparing for the Rose Bowl game would be fun," he said. "We had heard that the 1972 University of Southern California team only had six workouts when it ripped Ohio State apart in the Rose Bowl.

"But that Trojan team was one of the greatest in collegiate history, which we are not.

"I now think we were a little childish. I look back now and see the coach was right. We are well prepared for the Rose Bowl game now."

Pointing to his Rose Bowl wrist watch, Sciarra said, "When I look at this watch in the future I would much rather have it remind me of a victory instead of a defeat."

Ohio State had a hard, two-hour workout Sunday and then was hosted at a dinner by the Big Ten Club where Bob Hope was master of ceremonies.

Name Olympic Skaters

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (UPI) — Seven men and eight women, headed by record setters Peter Mueller and Leah Poulos, were named Sunday to the United States Olympic speed skating team.

The team was named after two weekends of competition and those selected departed immediately for a short stop in New York before going to Europe for pre-Olympic competition.

Two men and two women are repeaters from the team that represented the U.S. in the 1972 winter games in Japan. They are Dan Carroll and Charles Gilmore of Milwaukee, Poulos and Sheila Young of Detroit.

Also named to the 1976 team were Peggy Crowe, St. Louis; Beth Heiden and Lori Monk of Madison, Wis.; Kim Kostron, St. Paul; Cindy Seikkula, Minneapolis, and Nancy Swider, Park Ridge, Ill., to the women's team and Jim Chapin, St. Louis; Eric Heiden and Dan Immerfall of Madison and Mike Woods, South Milwaukee, to the men's team.

Poulos, Northbrook, Ill., who broke almost all track records in the shorter distances, could finish no better than sixth in the final event of the trials Sunday. The event, the 3,000 meters, was won by Swider in a record time of 5:01.05. She had set the old record of 5:05.05 last week.

Heiden was second, followed by Seikkula, Connie Carpenter, Madison, and Kostron.

In the final men's event, the 10,000 meters, Carroll was the winner, breaking his old record of 16:04 with a 16:03.94 clocking. Heiden was second, Woods third and Gilmore fourth. Gary Ross of Petoskey, Mich., finished fifth.

After two days in New York, where the team will be outfitted and will practice, the team will leave for Europe.

Giannino Race Winner

ROSENDALE — Frank Giannino beat icy roads and a field of 30 Sunday to capture the Onteora Runners Club's second annual Viking Road Race in a time of 27:25 for the five mile distance.

Giannino's Open Division triumph came over runnerup Joe Boyle of Poughkeepsie and third place Chris Chamuris. Giannino is a resident of Walden.

The poor conditions kept the turnout below last year's inaugural run, but four other participants beat the elements to win divisional titles. In the high school bracket, Al Schmidt of Pine Bush came in first in 27:52. Second was Matt Williams, and third was Bill Wilson of Kingston High.

In the time-estimation run, Spero Chumas of Arlington scored a victory with a 12 second differential. Bill Stahl of Kingston was next at :21, and Joe Keller, cross country coach at Coleman High, was third with a 1:25 mark.

Chuck Vandezande, also fo Arlington, captured the Masters Division in 32:03. He topped Bill Harris of Poughkeepsie by 1:24. Rich Impola of New Paltz placed third.

Kingston High's Eileen Casey was the lone female to attempt the distance. She clocked 35:29.

Well II Rallies to Win "B" Autumn Basketball

KINGSTON — Well II rallied from a 21-14 first half deficit to explode for a 26-point second quarter, take a 40-30 halftime lead and go on to trounce Giustino's Market 91-79 in the third and final game of the YMCA "B" Autumn Basketball League championship.

Well Wolfpack crushed Wrixon Cabinets, 118-55, for consolation honors.

Well II made it two straight over Giustino's in the playoffs and extended its unbeaten winning streak to 15 for the 1975 season.

Frank Samms set the pace for the champions with 27 points. Jim Adams added 24 and Tom Tegler 22. Gary Ostrander contributed 10.

Corey Schoonmaker of Giustino's took game honors with 32 points. Chris Nordstrom hit for 14 and Buzzy Banks for 10. Giustino's outscored the winners 31-30 in the fourth quarter when the game was well out of reach.

Well Wolfpack broke to a 28-14 quarter lead, then widened its margin to 54-25 at the half against Wrixon's.

The Jasanski brothers—John (29) and Eddie (26) combined for 55 points for the Wolfpack. Russ Wilbur added 20 and John Callahan (17) and Bernie Schaffer (18) shared 35 for the winners.

Three of the Wrixon's were in double figures, as Rich Bell led with 22 points and Craig Struble and Bill Wrixon added 10 each.

Bell to Vault

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Arkansas State's Earl Bell, who won the NCAA pole vault title at 18-1 in Provo, Utah, in June, will compete in the Sunkist Invitational track meet at the Sports Arena Jan. 16.

Bell, a junior from Jonesboro, Ark., set a collegiate record in beating San Jose State's Dan Ripley at Provo.

American Ketch Leads

HOBART, Australia, Dec. 29 (UPI) — The American Ketch Kialoa III took line honors and broke the record for the Sydney to Hobart blue water yachting classic Monday.

Kialoa III, based in Los Angeles and owned and skippered by Jim Kroy, took two days, 14 hours and 36 minutes for the 630-mile race, breaking the record set by the Sydney yacht Helsal in 1973 by 10 hours 55 minutes.

Kialoa is not necessarily the outright winner of the race, which is run to a complicated hanicap formula taking into account vital measurements of each entrant. The yacht leading on handicap will not be known until later Monday.

Following Kialoa across the line was another American yacht, Windward Passage, 23 minutes astern. Ballyhoo, a Sydney sloop, was third.

The two American yachts, both more than 70 feet in length, staged an exciting duel as they neared the finish blowing out spinnakers in the fresh northeasterly winds.

Another Golden Page for St. John's

Driving for Two

Frank Alagia (10) of St. John's drives around Jack Gillooon (32) of South Carolina for a basket during their semifinal in the Holiday Festival Saturday night. Alagia, a 5-9 guard for the Redmen, sank seven critical free throws to help defeat the Gamecocks, 71-59. (UPI)

United Press International

St. John's will attempt Monday night to turn another golden page in its basketball history.

One of the most successful tournament teams the game has known, dating back to 1938, currently 17th-ranked St. John's faces first-ranked Indiana in the finals of the Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden.

Indiana is a solid favorite, of course, but over the years St. John's has made a habit of upsetting higher-ranked teams and winning tournaments. The Redmen have won a record four National Invitation Tournaments, three Holiday Festivals and several others in different parts of the country, including the Brigham Young Classic this season.

"It isn't winning that counts so much," says St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca. "It's getting a whack at the top-ranked teams that counts."

St. John's and Indiana advanced to the finals of the Holiday Festival Saturday when the Redmen defeated South Carolina, 71-59, and the Hoosiers beat Manhattan, 97-61.

Ninth-ranked Cincinnati, 10th-ranked Louisville, 12th-ranked North Carolina State and No. 16 San Francisco were the only other teams in the top 10 which saw action Saturday.

Cincinnati lost to Arizona, 71-64, in the first round of the Rainbow Classic, while Louisville downed Texas A&M, 102-88, to win its own Holiday Classic.

N.C. State kept its poise and pulled out a 79-74 victory over Auburn, with Kenny Carr's 23 points leading the Wolfpack to its seventh straight victory of the season.

Jim Williamson scored 20 points to lead Rhode Island to a 85-77 upset victory over San Francisco, the Dons' second loss of the season, in the title game of the Ocean State Classic.

On Sunday, 14th-ranked Tennessee defeated Pennsylvania, 77-70, with Ernie Grunfield scoring 36 points in the first round of the Sugar Bowl tournament.

In other big tournament games Monday night, No. 13 Washington plays Northwestern in the semifinals of the Far West Classic, while No. 19 Kansas State faces Missouri and Colorado plays Kansas in the semifinals of the Big Eight Tournament.

Frank Alagia, a 5-foot, 9-inch guard, made seven critical free throws in the final minutes of play and helped thwart South Carolina's pressure defense with his ball-handling as St. John's scored its ninth straight victory of the season.

All-America forward Scott May scored 32 points and Kent Benson, the Hoosiers' 6-foot, 11-inch center, added 19 in leading Indiana to its eighth consecutive win.

Guard Jim Rappis, who scored 24 points in the game, tallied two layups in the final minute and a half to break open what had been a tight game between Arizona and Cincinnati. The lead had changed hands 10 times in 10½ minutes of the second half before Arizona broke open the game.

Phil Bonds had 23 points and eight assists as Louisville ran up 100 points for the second straight game and easily downed Texas A&M. Louisville also got 19 points from Wesley Cox and 16 from Rick Wilson.

In other games Saturday, North Carolina State downed Auburn, 79-74; Washington beat Florida State, 69-54; Minnesota defeated Creighton, 80-74, in the finals of the Pillsbury Classic; Wake Forest topped Florida, 78-75, to win the Gator Bowl Classic; Louisiana State nipped Stanford, 89-85; Detroit toped DePaul, 74-64, winning the Motor City Classic, and Duke outscored Western Kentucky, 111-90.

Longden Won't Slow Down

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Johnny Longden, thoroughbred racing's fabled "Mr. Moneybags," will celebrate his 70th birthday in two months but he doesn't have any plans to slow down.

Despite being a millionaire a couple of times over, the English-born former riding great refuses to leave thoroughbred racing. Instead, he's ready to begin his second decade as a trainer.

"Why should I retire?" he shrugged. "I just love what I'm doing. I don't know what else I'd do if I wasn't doing this. This is a fascinating life.

"People ask me what motivates me. Well, I have a lot of goals left. I want to win every race I enter. I'd like to win the Kentucky Derby again. It's just a matter of getting the right horse."

Along with his wife and two sons, Vance, 45, and Eric, 32, Longden trains 45 thoroughbreds and makes the rounds of the California thoroughbred circuit — Santa Anita, Hollywood Park, Del Mar, Bay Meadows and Golden Gate Fields.

"John definitely would have missed riding if he hadn't stayed in the sport as a trainer," Hazel Longden declared. "But he doesn't have time to miss it now. He's up on horses every morning."

By nature, Johnny Longden is a taciturn man. In contrast, Vance Longden is outgoing.

"If you've known my dad for five years, he'll say hello," Vance explained. "He's not one to speak much. He doesn't like interviews and he rarely accepts speaking engagements. I'd say he averages one speaking engagement every three years.

"But that's deceptive, though. When he does get up and talk to a group, he's hysterical. He's a real comedian."

On April 4, Santa Anita will pay a special tribute to Longden, who will be 70 on Feb. 14. That's the date of the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano, a race Longden won in his final ride March 12, 1966, aboard George Royal.

Longden won his first race at Salt Lake City in 1927. In his remarkable 40-year career before he retired at 59, he had 32,408 mounts and piloted 6,032 winners, including 452 stakes triumphs and 25 $100,000 races. The horses he rode earned a staggering $42,665,800.

In 1943, Longden and Count Fleet ran off with the final jewel of turfdom's fabled Triple Crown by capturing the Belmont Stakes by 25 lengths. Count Fleet earlier scored victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

"They say Count Fleet never beat much but I know myself he could beat any horse I've ever seen," Longden said. "Count Fleet had all the stamina in the world. He could run two miles."

Longden scored his greatest triumph as a trainer in the 1969 Kentucky Derby. Majestic Prince, owned by Frank McMahon and piloted by Bill Hartack, beat Arts and Letters by a neck in one of the most dramatic Derbies in history.

One day after he announced his retirement as a jockey, Longden went to work for McMahon. The two since have gone their separate ways.

Longden and his wife split their time between their home here and their 40-acre ranch near Fresno, Calif. They currently have 45 thoroughbreds.

"Dad doesn't just love horses," Vance pointed out. "He loves all animals.

Gordon Family Spirit

Taking advantage of the area's latest heavy snowfall, the Ted Gordon family of Detroit demonstrated its University of Michigan football spirit by building a huge snowman with upraised arms signifying a Wolverine touchdown. Five members of the family have graduated from or currently attend the school. Michigan meets Oklahoma in this year's Orange Bowl. (UPI)

Who'd want to invest in a bunch of revolutionaries?

They didn't exactly look like winners.

But then our revolutionary army beat the British at Saratoga in 1777.

And people recognized Washington's men as an army, rather than a band of renegades.

So faith was won as well as a battle. And investments in our government's securities started picking up.

It took courage to take stock in America back then. But it paid off.

And it can do the same for you now.

Just join the Payroll Savings Plan, or buy U.S. Savings Bonds at your bank. There's no safer, easier way to build your savings.

STONE RIDGE

Course For Agents At UCCC

Beginning Friday, Jan. 9, an intensified course of instruction preparing New York State property and casualty insurance agents for their state exams will be given by Ulster County Community College.

This announcement was made by Ronald A. Koster, associate dean of faculty for Continuing Education at the Stone Ridge campus.

The re-scheduling of this program, which previously trained Prudential Life Insurance agents for the New York State property and casualty agents' examination, will prepare agents for the exam coming up March 17, 1976.

In arranging the program, Robert H. Pawlowski, administrator of Field Training and Manpower Development at the Prudential Center in Boston, Mass., said he was especially proud of the record initiated on the Ulster Campus last spring. He pointed out that 84.63 per cent of the agents taking the course passed the state exam. The passing average in other New York State training locations is reported to be only 70.75 per cent.

This special offering of Business 231-232, Fundamentals of Insurance I & II, is also open to the general public. The program will conclude March 13, 1976. Friday night meetings will be conducted from 6-9 p.m. and Saturday sessions from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1-4 p.m.

The course will also offer six-credit hours toward an Associate Degree.

Dale Evens Is Unabashed Christian and Patroit

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dale Evans, "Queen of the Westerns" in the 40s and 50s, has written a new book, "Let Freedom Ring," for the Bicentennial year.

Dale, who is Mrs. Roy Rogers, is an unabashed Christian and patriot.

In "Let Freedom Ring" she combines both, flinging aside the tenet of separation of church and state. Dale finds the two inseparable.

"Our government was lifted out of the Old Testament," she said. "The men who wrote our Constitution believed in God and the Bible.

"This book has been in my heart for 28 years, since I started to study the Bible. When I came to the scripture about God giving the laws to Moses, I realized our government was taken from the Bible.

"My book is based on the four freedoms.

"This book has been in my heart for 28 years. Freedom begins with freedom of the spirit, not materialism."

The book is Dale's 14th. Most are inspirational volumes with strong religious and patriotic themes.

Her first was "Angel Unaware," which dealt with the true story of the Rogers' Mongoloid daughter Robin, who died at the age of 2.

"It was a taboo subject at the time," Dale said. "But I wanted to acquaint the public with the problems and needs of these children. It was a best seller.

"My autobiography, 'The Woman at the Well,' also did very well when it was published four years ago.

"I've been criticized for being a flag-waver and accused of preaching. So has Roy. But my publishers asked me to write a Bicentennial book on God and country and that's what I've done."

Dale is more matronly than in the days when she rode the range with Roy in movies and in 101 episodes of the Rogers' television series.

Her hair is gray and she has 15 grandchildren and a great-grandchild. Dale, 63, has a serene smile and the fervor of an evangalist.

"I was very mixed up and dissatisfied with life 28 years ago," she said. "Everything seemed to be at a dead end until I found religion.

"Now I travel a great deal for church crusades, meetings and rallies

On Their Way to China

Hoover Didn't Trust the Dr.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dr. Robert J. Oppenheimer, director of the laboratory where the first atomic bomb was made, was barred from security secrets in 1953 because FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover did not trust him, a former government attorney says.

Harold P. Green, now a law professor at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., also said the FBI bugged conversations between Oppenheimer and his lawyers during an investigation into allegations Oppenheimer was a Soviet agent.

"I think Hoover thought Oppenheimer wasn't the kind of guy who ought to be trusted," said Green in an interview Sunday.

Green, then working for the Atomic Energy Commission, drafted the formal charges against Oppenheimer, director of the Los Alamos, N. M. secret laboratory where the atomic bomb was designed during World War II.

The case against Oppenheimer was begun after President Dwight D. Eisenhower barred him from U. S. nuclear secrets Dec. 3, 1953, and directed his ordered his security clearance be suspended until an investigation into the accusations was conducted.

After a hearing, the Personnel Security Board voted 2-1 that Oppenheimer's security clearance be permanently suspended and the AEC upheld that decision by a 4-1 vote in June 1954.

Oppenheimer's security clearance was never restored but the physicist was awarded the Enrico Fermi Medal in 1963 for his contributions to the nuclear energy program by President Lyndon Johnson. Oppenheimer died of throat cancer in 1967.

Green, in Atlanta to speak on a panel before the American Historical Association, said the case against Oppenheimer resulted from a pledge by former AEC Chairman Lewis Strauss to Hoover to remove people in the AEC program that the FBI director disliked.

"I believe that when Strauss became chairman he made a promise to Hoover that he was going to get rid of people in the atomic energy program who were bones in Hoover's throat," said Green.

Dallas Doesn't Want Them

DALLAS (UPI) — Out-of-work New York City police officers can forget about looking for jobs in Dallas. Police administrators here don't want them.

"There already is a public relations problem when an officer issues someone a speeding ticket," said Don Cleveland, assistant city manager. "It wouldn't help matters for the officer to have one of those sharp Eastern accents."

One Dallas police administrator added, "I've heard too much about the 'fringe benefits' New York City cops get from the people on their beat. I believe the Dallas Police Department can do fine without that type of attitude."

And one city official said there was no need to hire a police union member from New York who might offer free advice to Dallas officers whose Dallas Police Association is pressing for collective bargaining rights.

Cleveland said the police department is 80 officers below full strength and police said they have received a number of job inquiries from former New York City officers.

But Dallas has decided not to hire any of the thousands of officers laid off during New York City's financial crisis.

Officials said publicly the decision was made because of the feeling that the officers would return to New York as soon as possible. But individual administrators said Dallas just doesn't want New York City's type of police.

Bob Shaw, head of the police information office, said Dallas police officials were certain New York officers hired locally would return home if the financial situation eased in the nation's most populous city.

"We're sure they would go back to New York at the first opportunity," Shaw said.

Cleveland said it has long been police department policy to try to employ officers with local backgrounds.

"We will hire more police officers, but we are not out actively recruiting them," he said.

Recovery of Bodies A Dangerous Job

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (UPI) — Authorities say it will be a difficult and dangerous job to recover the bodies of nine persons killed in a plane crash on a remote, boulder-strewn mountainside in the northern Colorado Rockies.

Two rescue workers leaped from a helicopter Sunday to reach the wreckage of the chartered plane on an 11,800foot mountain and confirmed there were no survivors.

Another Colorado plane crash Sunday killed four persons. Twelve of the 13 victims of the two crashes were Californians.

Rescue workers planned to try to recover the bodies today.

"The plane is in a very rugged area and it is going to be a very hazardous operation to get them out of there," said Gilpin County Sheriff Dick Conn. "The closest a helicopter can land is 500 to 600 yards away and from there to the crash scene is up and down cliffs."

The plane, piloted by Lee Hollingsworth of the Denver-based Star Aviation Co., had been missing since Friday on a flight from Denver's Stapleton International Airport to Granby, Colo.

The passengers included Stuart Nelson, 42, president of a men's clothing business in Beverly Hills, Calif.; his wife, Myrna, 36; their two children, Tiffany, 5 and Sebrina, 2; Mrs. Nelson's mother; Bobby Ross, 60; and Gary Nuhivrian, 28, all from the Los Angeles area.

Also killed were Bob Peterson, 10, and his brother, Richie, 9, sons of Marjorie and Robert Peterson who took another plane to Granby Friday. Peterson is president of the Peterson Publishing Company of Los Angeles.

The group apparently was en route to Granby for the opening of a new resort operated by Mrs. Nelson's brother, Leonard Ross.

Conn said the wing and tail section of the chartered plane broke off on impact but there was no fire.

"The crash caused an avalanche and part of the plane was covered by snow," Conn said. "There aren't any trees around. It's above timberline with nothing but large boulders ranging in size from desks to houses."

The other plane crash occured in southern Colorado.

Officials said the victims were the mother, father and brother of Pagosa Springs dentist Dr. Randall Davis, and the brother's girlfriend. The victims' names and their hometown in California was not released. Their twin-engine plane apparently lost an engine and crashed four miles west of Pagosa Springs airport.

Blast Probe Continues

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) — A cause may be pinpointed today for an explosion which destroyed a well-known Schenectady restaurant.

The Friday blast at the Nicholaus Restaurant injured one passer-by and firemen, who spent much of the weekend going over the rubble, said they might have the origin determined by today.

Police and fire investigators spent much of Saturday trying to track down what may have set off the explosion.

Witnesses at the scene said they believed they smelled gas just after the blast, but fire officials today would not rule out the possibility of arson.

Also studying the explosion's cause were investigators for the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., whose gas lines service the area.

Police and fire officials said the blast tore up the sidewalk adjacent to the unoccupied restaurant and threw chunks of cement as far as 70 feet into the show windows of a nearby clothing store.

BOND AND CAPITAL NOTE ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF KINGSTON, NEW YORK, AMENDING A BOND AND CAPITAL NOTE ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF KINGSTON, NEW YORK, AUTHORIZING THE PAYMENT OF A JUDGMENT, CLAIM, AWARD, COMPROMISE OR SETTLED CLAIM AGAINST THE CITY OF KINGSTON, NEW YORK, RESULTING FROM TAX CERTIORARI PROCEEDINGS INSTITUTED AGAINST THE CITY OF KINGSTON, NEW YORK, BY STRELENE REALTY CORPORATION AND KINGSTON PLAZA, INC., WHICH SAID PROCEEDINGS RESPECTIVELY RESULTED IN JUDGMENTS OR AWARDS OF THE COURT AND A SETTLEMENT OF CLAIM AND ONE OF WHICH SAID JUDGMENTS OR AWARDS OF THE COURT WAS IN TURN SETTLED PENDING APPEAL; THE TOTAL REFUNDABLE AMOUNTS OF SAID JUDGMENTS, AWARDS, CLAIMS, COMPROMISES AND SETTLEMENTS BEING $580,463.82 TO STRELENE REALTY CORPORATION FOR GENERAL REAL ESTATE TAXES PAID FOR THE YEARS 1973, 1974 AND 1975, AND WHICH SETTLED CLAIM OF KINGSTON PLAZA, INC., IN THE AMOUNT OF $37,387.87 IS FOR GENERAL REAL ESTATE TAXES PAID FOR THE YEAR 1975, THE TOTAL OF SUCH JUDGMENTS, AWARDS, COMPROMISES AND SETTLEMENTS BEING IN THE SUM OF $17,851.69, WHICH IS MORE THAN 1% OF THE AVERAGE ASSESSED VALUATION OF THE CITY OF KINGSTON, NEW YORK, OF WHICH TOTAL SUM APPROPRIATION BY CAPITAL NOTE SHALL BE IN THE SUM OF $30,851.69, AS THE DOWNPAYMENT THEREFOR AND AUTHORIZING THE ISSUANCE OF $587,000.00 OF SERIAL BONDS OF SAID CITY TO FINANCE THE BALANCE OF SAID APPROPRIATION

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF KINGSTON, IN THE COUNTY OF ULSTER, NEW YORK (by the favorable vote of not less than two-thirds of all the members of said Council) AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. That the Bond and Capital Note Ordinance passed by this Body on the 10th day of November, 1975, and approved by the Mayor of the City of Kingston on the 12th day of November, 1975, be and hereby is amended and superseded hereby and that any and all revenues derived pursuant to the original such Bond and Capital Note Ordinance be and hereby are ratified, approved and confirmed, nunc pro tunc.

SECTION 2. The City of Kingston, in the County of Ulster, State of New York, is hereby authorized to refund General Real Estate Taxes paid by Strelene Realty Corporation for the year 1973, in the sum of $180,530.72 for the year 1974, in the amount of $199,881.01, and in the year 1975, in the amount of $198,052.09, inclusive of legal interest thereon, making in all a total of $580,463.82, and to refund General Real Estate Taxes paid by Kingston Plaza, Inc., for the year 1975, in the amount of $37,387.87, inclusive of legal interest thereon, and making in all a grand total of $617,851.69, the downpayment of which total sum shall be provided by a capital note or notes in the total sum of $30,851.69, as required by law, and the further sum of $587,000.00 in serial bonds to finance the balance thereof and the levy of a tax upon all of the taxable real property in said City to pay the principal of said bonds and interest thereon.

SECTION 2. Pursuant to the provisions of the Local Finance Law, constituting Chapter 33-a of the Consolidated Laws of the State of New York, serial bonds in the principal amount of $587,000.00 of the City of Kingston are hereby authorized to be issued to finance a portion of the cost of said items of such specific object or purpose.

SECTION 4. The following additional matters are hereby determined and stated:

(a) The period of probable usefulness of each item of said specific object or purpose for which the bonds authorized by this ordinance are to be issued within the limitations of Section 11.00, subdivision 33 (b), of said Local Finance Law is ten (10) years, the said sum so appropriated being in excess of 1% of the average assessed valuation of the City of Kingston, and said judgments, awards, compromises and settlements being payable in a single fiscal year.

(b) Current funds are required by said law to be provided as a downpayment prior to the issuance of the bonds herein authorized or of any notes in anticipation of the sale of said bonds and such current funds are hereby provided to be appropriated through the issuance of a capital note or notes of the City of Kingston in the amount of $30,851.69. The City Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to cause the issuance of a capital note or notes in said total sum as the downpayment for the uses and purposes above mentioned and to apply same to the said specific object or purpose described in Section 1 hereof.

SECTION 5. Each of the bonds authorized by this Ordinance and any bond anticipation notes issued in anticipation of the sale of such bonds shall contain the recital of validity prescribed by Section 52.00 of said Law and said bonds and any notes issued in anticipation of said bonds shall be general obligations of the City, and the City hereby irrevocably pledges its faith and credit to the punctual payment of the principal thereof and the interest thereon and there shall be raised annually by tax on all the taxable real property in the City, a sum sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on said bonds as the same shall become due and payable.

SECTION 6. Subject to the provisions of this Ordinance and of said Local Finance Law and pursuant to the provisions of Section 30.00 relative to the authorization of the issuance of bond anticipation notes and of Section 50.00 and Section 56.00 to 60.00 of said Law, the powers and duties of the Common Council relative to prescribing the terms, form and contents and as to the sale and issuance of the bonds, are hereby delegated to the City Treasurer, chief fiscal officer of the City.

SECTION 7. It is further stated that the validity of the bonds authorized by this ordinance, and of any notes issued in anticipation of said bonds, may be contested only if:

(a) Such obligations are authorized for an object or purpose for which the City is not authorized to expend money, or

(b) the provisions of law which should be complied with at the date of the publication of such ordinance, are not substantially complied with, and an action, suit or proceeding contesting such validity, is commenced within twenty days after the date of such publication.

(c) such obligations are authorized in violation of the provisions of the constitution.

SECTION 8. That the original such ordinance, passed and approved aforesaid, being superseded hereby, is repealed.

SECTION 9. This Ordinance, which takes effect immediately, shall be published in full, after approval by the Mayor, in the official newspaper of the City together with a notice substantially the form as prescribed by Section 81.00 of the Local Finance Law.

Submitted to the Mayor by the City Clerk this 3rd day of Dec. 1975.

LOUIS F. DeCICCO

IN KINGSTON AMERLING VOLKSWAGEN

RICHARD MENSCH

. . . . . Proudly announces the addition of Richard Mensch to their staff. Mr. Mensch assumes the position of Service Shop Foreman.

Richie comes to us with 16 years of Volkswagen service experience. Trained in Germany, he has reached the highest level of recognition in his field from World-Wide Volkswagen, the New York Distributor for VW. His unblemished track record and years of dedication to VW Service and technology prove to be a tremendous asset to our Service Department.

We have made this addition to our facility to further insure that our customers receive nothing less than the best service possible for their hard earned dollars, and to insure customer satisfaction both before and most importantly after they purchase one of our fine automobiles. Won't you stop in and join us in extending a welcoming hand to Richie.

Your Astrograph

For Tuesday, Dec. 30, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're capable of handling a broad range of interests today. Don't limit yourself to little things. Be up and doing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others are more likely to treat you in a favorable manner today if they see you're also concerned about giving them a fair shake.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although you may be tempted to act impulsively today, weigh patiently both sides of important issues before taking step 1.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extra-alert today where your work or career is concerned. Something advantageous might develop suddenly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to feel in a rather expansive mood today. Why not get together with fun-loving friends who feel likewise?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You should be quite adept today at stretching the family budget and juggling resources. Put your common sense to work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your strong suit today is in creative or mental areas. Jot your bright ideas down even if you can't use them today, they can be tried later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Most of your attention today will be centered upon your material interests. Gains are likely if you use your best judgment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be happiest today being around people who share similar interests. Mix with those you can learn from and have laughs with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your best results will be achieved today by pulling strings behind the scenes. Shun the spotlight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This should be a very pleasant day for you if you do things in accordance with your highest standards.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be patient regarding rewards that are due to you. You'll not be overlooked in situations where you've put forth your best.

Dec. 30, 1975

This coming year you may be involved in a very worthy endeavor that will be beneficial to yourself and to others as well. Seek an outlet of a charitable nature.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D

DREAM: (Q.) This poem I have written is about me and a guy whom I care for very much. It fits us perfectly because we both used to think a lot of each other but he has changed. I haven't, and it doesn't seem like I ever will. Many other people probably share the same feelings.

We once had a dream
Of you and me,
The way it was,
The way it would be.
My dream is still here,
Your dream is now gone.
But I shall still dream
From dark until dawn.

Jim: "Four spades looks like one of those automatic contracts. The defense starts with three rounds of hearts. South ruffs the third and goes after trumps. Maybe he finesses, maybe not. It doesn't matter. He loses a trick to the king and makes his contract."

Oswald: "When I watched Dr. Richard Greene of New Orleans play the hand in a regional tournament four spades also made, but there was quite a lot to the play by both sides. East took his ace of hearts at trick one and shifted to his singleton diamond. Now Dick was threatened with a diamond ruff in addition to his other three losers."

Jim: "I see how he avoided that. He must have cashed his ace and king of clubs, entered dummy with the ace of trumps, led the jack of clubs and discarded his remaining heart on East's queen."

Oswald: "Of course. Then, there was no way for East to put his partner in. The diamond ruff was avoided and Dick made the contract for an average score."

Dangers Below the Stairs—and Plumbing Inspector's Advice

KINGSTON

Is danger lurking in your basement? City of Kingston plumbing inspector, Charles J. Kelly, is convinced that many local families are vulnerable to risks and peril during the winter months. Noting that he's been called by the Kingston Fire Department on numerous occasions in recent weeks to inspect malfunctionig heating units, Kelly warns the public of the following dangers below stairs— or wherever heating units are located in individual homes.

Said Kelly, "Death can result from improperly installed space heaters, improperly adjusted equipment in homes and schools, and—because of improperly installed heating equipment, many homes and businesses will be completely or partially destroyed by fire." And, added Kelly, "Death by asphyxiation can result due to faulty installation of vents from heating equipment, fires will start from clothes left to dry over floor furnaces or open flames, or from electrical, gasoline and oil heaters which have been installed too close to inflamable material."

The local plumbing inspector also warned of the dangers inherent in storing heating oils in glass containers, and defective wiring in heating systems. He urges the public in general to check valves and safety devices in home and business systems. . . and in every other facet of the system.

Questions that should be asked, says Kelly, include: Is your heating equipment working as it should? Is it safe? Are all valves and gauges and safety devices working properly?

Most wystems do function as they should, says Kelly, but a sizeable percentage may not be delivering the comfort, fuel economy and operating efficiency that a modern, well-adjusted system should. "When it comes to the health and safety of your family," urgues the plumbing inspector, "as well as the long term economy and protection of your home, rely only on skilled persons for these responsibilities."

It is Kelly's opinion that the greatest number of tragedies occur because of improper installations by handymen and so-called heating experts, who either install equipment incorrectly in the first place, who tamper with existing equipment in ignorance of how it works, or who apply heating equipment to do jobs for which it was never intended.

There have been many instances, he says, where an attempt to "save a few dollars" has culminated in disaster. The installation and care of heating systems, he stresses, is not a job for a handyman.

Kelly also warned that furnaces and chimneys should be properly cleaned and soot removed from inside chimneys, especially if there is a soot accummulation above any vent piping leading into the chimney.

For your own sake— and that of your family, suggests Kelly, have equipment inspected to insure a warm and safe home this winter, Anyone who has questions regarding heating equipment is urged to contact him at his City Hall office for answers.

Fear '18 Killer-Virus May Resurface

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — There is a chance that a virus strain which killed more than 20 million people in 1918 might resurface during the next major flu epidemic, according to an influenza specialist.

Dr. Robert Webster said that concern has been raised by recent studies which suggest there are repeating cycles of flu viruses. Similarities, for example, were found between an 1880 virus and the last epidemic strain to hit — the 1968 Hong Kong flu.

"The fact that concerns people now is that the 1918 strain was the next epidemic after the 1880 influenza," said Webster, a member of the research staff at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. "Now we wonder if the Hong Kong flu will also be followed by a strain capable of infecting and killing large numbers of people."

If such an epidemic should strike, he said doctors still face some of the problems of the early 1900's. While progress has been made in the treatment of influenza, a prevention method eludes researchists.

"All of the other plagues in man have been taken care of — except the flu," Webster said.

Despite years of research, doctors have not been able to develop suitable vaccines against current virus strains. "When a new one occurs, we are all virgins," Webster said.

To overcome this susceptibility of man, Webster and other scientists across the world are conducting experiments and swapping information in an attempt to identify all known virus strains and anticipate their descent upon man.

"We now have a good amount of evidence showing that viruses in birds and animals may serve as the source of human viruses," Webster said following tests conducted with Dr. Graham Laver of the National University in Australia.

To reinforce this theory, Webster and Dr. Charles Campbell of the Department of Agriculture have conducted four years of testing on pigs, turkeys, and chickens on an isolated island off the northern tip of Long Island in New York.

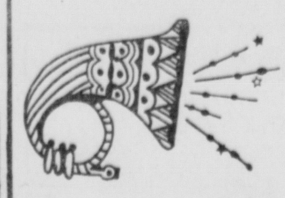

"Basically what we were trying to see was if a new strain of flu could be created in a sterile laboratory," Webster said, "and the answer is yes."

Emphasizing the elaborate security precautions used to prevent any virus from escaping the laboratory, Webster said the tests have shown that when the birds or animals are infected with two different animal viruses, they are capable of producing a third viral form.

Webster is hopeful these experiments will lead to a method of early detection of human viruses.

"Our hope is if we can isolate epidemic strains while they are in birds and animals then we might be in a position to produce a vaccine immediately," Webster said.

'I UNDERSTAND HIS SKI INSTRUCTOR IS ALSO HIS CAMPAIGN MANAGER!'

Hurting His Image

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — A White House spokesman says portrayals of President Ford as clumsy and accident-prone are a "most unconscionable misrepresentation of the President" and could hurt him politically.

"This president is healthy, he is graceful and he is by far the most athletic president in memory," said press secretary Ron Nessen, crediting Ford with skill and steadiness on skis at this 10,000-foot Vail Mountain resort.

Nessen doesn't think it's fair that of the hundreds of photographs taken of Ford on the ski slopes, the one most widely played in newspapers was when the President took a tumble in the snow.

Nessen told reporters Sunday Ford "laughs off" reports depicting him as awkward and bumbling but it bothers members of his staff, who fear it will hurt his political image.

"It would be a mistake if that impression cost him votes," said Nessen. He expressed hope "the news media would be accurate in its reporting" of the President.

Nessen's comments were prompted by a cartoon in the Denver Post Sunday, showing the 62-year-old Ford skiing backward with a bystander commenting, "I understand his ski instructor is also his campaign manager."

Nessen reminded reporters that experts who skied with Ford during this vacation, which ends Tuesday, praised his skill. He said "even your colleagues" in the press who had made some runs with Ford acknowledged he is an advanced skier.

Stories and cartoons portaying Ford as clumsy started in June when he fell down the ramp of Air Force One in Salzburg, Austria, as he was helping the First Lady down the steps in the rain.

There was more such publicity when, on other occasions, Ford hit his head against the top of a helicopter doorway and bumped his head on the edge of a swimming pool.

Descending the slopes Sunday after his sixth straight day of skiing, Ford commented philosophically, "Every skier takes a fall once in a while."

Was he afraid he would lose votes because of these stories about minor accidents?

"No, because I think there are more than falldowns and standups," said Ford.

It's a Question of Safety...

(Editors note: Part I on nuclear opponents concerned itself with the growing voice of citizen action, its triumphs, and its prospects for thwarting construction of nuclear plants at Lloyd locally and halting construction nationally. Part II details some objections to the Lloyd site and outlines safety questions.)

(Last of Series)

By Tim Schuster

TOWN OF LLOYD

With voters in California to decide next June whether to make nuclear power plant construction subject to approval of 2/3 its state legislature, the official debate that kicked off this California Initiative at San Luis Obispo was between Dr. Edward Teller, famed as "father of the hydrogen bomb," and Dr. John Gofman, medical physicist and expert opponent.

The news account following this debate before a crowd of about 4,000 people stated the two men agreed upon but one basic thing— much has yet to be learned to make atomic power safe.

Safety as the primary concern of opponents deals directly with people. Some other issues are more site-related, such as possible effects on terrain, the air quality, and water supply. These also translate ultimately to safety.

According to two SUNY at New Paltz geologists, there are four to six earthquake faults located adjacent to the proposed Lloyd site and (ERDA) the State Energy Research and Development Authority is trying to cover it up.

Dr. Stephen Egemeier and Dr. Russell Waines reacted to the consultant's geological report on the site with dismay. The study was "really sloppy," said Dr. Egemeier, who stated he is not opposed to nuclear energy. He contended the core drillings at Lloyd were not deep enough; errors in the report were minimized; at least four and possibly six earth faults were not mentioned by ERDA, although the survey of the Hudson Valley from Albany to Newburgh, they said.

In that earlier report the consultants had stated, said the professors, "This formation is extensively faulted by repetitive high angle reverse faults which have a north south trend." The New Paltz professors said that rocks "may have had only minor movement, but several show considerable shattering of the bedrock."

Concern for the Ramapo Earthquake Fault within 3,000 feet of Con Ed's Indian Point nuclear plants has caused the NRC to call a Jan. 29 public hearing, further delaying installation of an emergency core cooling system in Plant No. 1 that has been closed down since Oct. 1974.

The major divergence of opinion concerning possible effects on the skies centers on how much water vapor will really be hanging around the atmosphere of the Hudson Valley from the 500 foot natural draft cooling towers needed to keep hot water out of the river.

No one claims to really know. ERDA has claimed vapor plumes will be under two miles in length 80 per cent of the time. Dr. Egemeier claims plumes of more than 14 miles four days a year; over seven miles 18 days a year. Some have been reported at up to 30 miles in length, a man made cloud.

Dr. Alvin Koenigsberg, physics professor at SUNY at New Paltz, says the meteorological report ERDA is using is simply inadequate, lacking sufficient data to decide either way. He said the model used does not take Hudson Valley terrain into account and diffusion was measured for coal plants rather than nuclear The report was a forecast for only one plant, when up to four are authorized for the site.

Dire consequences are also seen for the Hudson River by some opponents. Dr. Egemeier said water taken from the river to cool four reactors at Lloyd would represent 12 per cent of the river volume at minimum flow time. Besides possible interference in the river's ecosystem and food chain, the prospect is raised of thus forcing the point of salinity northward in the river and polluting the water supply for such places as Poughkeepsie, Rhinebeck, and Port Ewen that draw water from the Hudson.

The time of reckoning begins now with official interaction among the parties on the Lloyd site set for Jan. 7 at Highland High School where ERDA will meet the public.

Albert Einstein, who was well aware of the potential uses and misuses derived from his theory that led to atomic fission, said in 1946, "Our representatives depend ultimately on decisions made in the village square . To the village square we must carry the facts of atomic energy. From there must come America's voice."

Fears Stem From Radiation

Contentions made by nuclear opponents include:

1—The federal government sets "permissible" radiation exposure levels, but no level has been ascertained to be "safe". Radiation does cause cancer, genetic mutations.

2—The major fear is rupture of an emergency core cooling system, subsequent meltdown of the reactor, and widespread leakage and resultant contamination by radioactive substances. No cooling systems have ever been tested because of the cost and risk.

3—There is no known safe method of storage for high level nuclear wastes with long half lifes.

4—Transporting materials to and from the generating plant in the form of a pressurized heated substance, accidents are bound to occur. Trucks and trains carrying such loads have been involved in accidents. No one has suggested flying.

5—The possibility exists for sabotage and blackmail by terrorists by either seizing a plant or shipment of material. Creation of a crude nuclear explosive device is not beyond public capability. In Nov 1971 arson caused $5 to $10 million damage at Con Ed's Indian Point No. 2 reactor prior to completion

Race for 'Death Ray'

LONDON (UPI) — The "death ray", a long-time prop of science fiction writers, may soon join the deadly military arsenals of the two superpowers, according to a major weapons expert.

Jane's Weapons Systems 1976, an authoritative guide on world weapons development, said today the United States and the Soviet Union are racing to develop a laser beam capable of destroying military targets.

In the forward to the annual weaponry guide, editor Ronald Pretty said the superpowers probably are "locked in a costly 'super-scientific' struggle to be the first" to develop such a practical laser.

Lasers produce narrow light beams of highly concentrated energy powerful enough to shear through armored metal.

Pretty said "solely by means of the energy the laser is able to generate and transmit to the target — in fact, the 'death ray' so beloved of generations of science fiction writers."

Laser devices capable of blinding the naked eye already have been developed, Jane's said. But it said the complicated apparatus required to generate large quantities of laser energy produced problems of bulk and weight that have hindered development of large lasers.

U.S., U.S.S.R. working on a military laser beam.

The Observer newpaper, however, quoted a "high source" in NATO as saying a compact laser weapon was now considered a practical possibility.

Pretty cited guarded references in U.S. Defense Department publications to high-energy laser development.

The Soviet Union also has made a big investment in high energy arms and the two superpowers are running neck and neck, according to Dr. Malcolm Currie, Director of U.S. Defense Research and Engineering, Jane's said.

Currie estimated the United States has the edge in fabrication techniques, structures and materials.

Defense scientists believe laser beams may be used first in space warfare because the "energy transfer efficiency" from laser to target is greater outside the earth's atmosphere.

The laser could be used in space to disable enemy communication and spy satellites, scientists believe. It also could be incorporated in future anti-ballistic missile systems to intercept and destroy warheads traveling above the earth's atmosphere.

Jane's said the laser also has military potential as a weapons' guidance device, such as in laser-guided air-to-surface missiles.

Anthem Needs Respect

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — America's National Anthem — "prostituted and mangled" by performers who sing before sports events — doesn't need new zing as much as it needs old respect, says Howard Pardee.

A former high school band leader, Pardee is a member of a committee trying to standardize the musical arrangement of The Star Spangled Banner by the time it is sung at bicentennial ceremonies. The 300 participants at the 23rd Annual American School Band Directors Association have the suggestion on their agendas today.

"All we want to do is make it serious," he said. "We use it so much, the kids never quit fighting in the stands when it's on."

"We want to standardize the Star Spangled Banner which has been prostituted and mangled over the tube for years," Pardee said.

But he said first the group must get support from the military bands.

"If we could get the service bands to use the same arrangement then we would have someone to look up to," he said. "People aren't going to pay any attention to a bunch of school teachers. But if we get men of that caliber to agree, then some rules and regulations could be made on how to play it with dignity and seriousness."

Pardee is a retired band director who conducted high school students in Conneaut and Salem city schools in northeast Ohio. After 39 years he decided to leave the schools and direct a summer park band.

Pardee's complaint is that entertainers who perform the anthem try to put too much of their own flamboyance and style into it.

"They're selling their personalities with the Star Spangled Banner," he said. "We hear it murdered all the time by this one or that one.

"It's a patriotic number," Pardee said. It should demand the respect of the public, but the way it is now—it's just not a very good thing for the country."

Gas Prices Like the Weather

By Tobie Geertsema

KINGSTON

Given all the chaotic events of the last few years, the shortages of energy, including the very basic resource of gasoline, created a particular chaos among dealers and consumers. In today's continuing hectic atmosphere, area dealers no longer worry about shortage, but they agonize about prices . . . and so do consumers.

And the gasoline price story in 1975 has been as varied and vacillating as the logos of the myriad service stations in the area.

"If you compare gasoline prices with what they were last year, they've gone down from three to five cents," says William Bryant, who owns a Gulf station on Ulster Avenue Mall and operates an Exxon station on Washington Avenue Extension. "Last year at this time, we were getting 63 cents for regular. Now we're getting 59.9 cents for Exxon, and 57 cents for Gulf."

If that still causes customers to wince, it also leaves Bryant joyless. "The dealer's profits have gone down, also, with the price decrease," says Bryant.

"Twenty years ago, I could expect profits of as much as eight cents a gallon. Today I'm lucky if I get a little more than half that."

What makes him particularly irate is that while the margin of profit has gone down for the dealer, it has gone up about 200 percent for the refineries. "They cry the blues," he says, "but they have so much fuel, they're bursting at the seams!" He cites an example: "Shell wants to take over my Albany Avenue location because they have more volume and more petroleum than they need."

Equally concerned is George Goldfarb, who owns a Gulf station on Broadway. "On the wholesale level," he says, "the price has not gone down one iota in months. In fact, it has moved up in the past two months—firming up close to two cents a gallon increase in that time."

But Goldfarb says his current price of 59.9 cents is an "inoperative margin." He points out that New York City dealers are "getting seven to nine cents more per gallon than upstate dealers." Says Goldfarb "For us to drop the price of gas now means that we would go out of business, because our margin is lower now than it was 15 years ago." Far from improving, he suggests, the situation "has grown dramatically worse."

While wholesale prices move up, the gyration in prices takes place at he retail level, he notes, because of "intense competition from independent stations, who sell two to three cents less per gallon for unbranded products of a dubious background." For brand name Gulf dealer Goldfarb, the, "the future is very bleak and there are no rainbows on the horizon."

Slight variations of the same theme are reflected at other name-brand stations. 'We've remained pretty stable," says a spokesman for Del's Arco on Mill Hill Road, Woodstock. "Our price has varied only one cent over recent months. We dropped it again slightly at the beginning of December to 59.9 cents for self service regular."

At Boulevard Gulf on Greenkill Avenue and Fair Street, prices have fluctuated from around three to six cents over the 12 months of 1975. Since October, however, the price has dropped about one percent; now stands at 58.9 cents a gallon —which is equal to that charged by the competition within a two mile radius. But no one at Boulevard Gulf is willing to predict the price trend for 1976. "It could go up today or down tomorrow," says an attendant. "It's like the weather . . . no one can tell what it's going to do from one day to the next."

And what of those thriving independents? Have they widened the margin in 1975? "Our gasoline has gone down steadily this year," says a man at Gasland. "We've never had an upward trend in the past 12 months. At the beginning of the year regular was 58.9 cents a gallon. Now it's 55.9." And, at the Caldor Gas Station on Route 9W, customers are currently paying only 53.9 cents a gallon for self service regular.

UPI DATELINE

Warning From China

HONG KONG (UPI) — China today warned that the danger of a new world war loomed larger than ever, and also blamed the Soviet Union for "stirring up" civil war in Africa.

The New China News Agency, in one of two year-end commentaries, said the Soviet Union and the United States are the only two countries capable of starting a new world war because of their struggle for spheres of influence.

"Such fierce rivalry between the two superpowers is bound to lead to a new world war," the commenta said.

Exchange Gun Fire

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli troops exchanged fire with Arab gunners across the Lebanese border in two separate incidents today, the military command said.

Machine gun fire came from a car speeding along the Lebanese border road near the kibbutz of Misgav Am, a spokesman said.

Earlier, gunners in Lebanon fired with small arms and a bazooka at an Israeli patrol west of the settlement of Yiftach, eight miles to the south, the spokesman said.

Hopes Abandoned

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Officials abandoned hope today for hundreds of miners trapped in two coal pits in northeastern India, but said it was "possible" a few might be holding out in air pockets beneath millions of gallons of water.

More than 1,000 workers manning high-powered pumps Sunday began rescue operations at the Chasnala colliery, 180 miles west of Calcutta. Officials said it would be at least 15 days before the pits were drained.

Officials estimated the number of trapped miners at 372, but union officials insisted the figure might be as high as 900.

Trawler, Crew Held

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Polish fishing trawler and its crew of 98 were held at Governor's Island today for poaching mackerel from U.S. territorial waters off Long Island, the Coast Guard said.

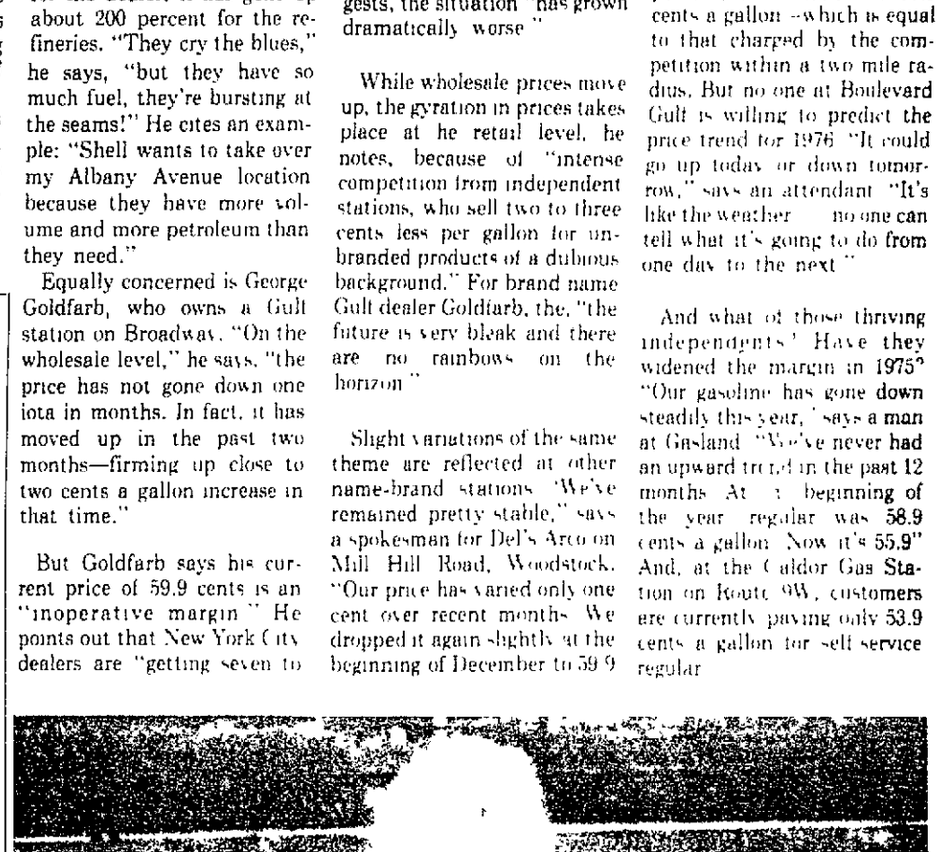

A Coast Guard spokesman said the 288-foot trawler "Lepus" was escorted into New York harbor late Sunday night to await arraignment of the skipper in Manhattan Federal Court.

The stern trawler's catch of 364 tons of mackerel also was seized.

Cease-Fire Timetable

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — An ambitious cease-fire timetable taking effect today is designed to remove rival militiamen from the warshattered streets of Beirut by the end of the week.

But extremist opposition to the latest peace plan still could scuttle hopes for an end to nine months of bloody civil war that have claimed 6,500 lives and $5 billion in economic losses.

That Sinking Feeling

The realization of it all may just be hitting Bobby Sullivan, age 9, of Mequon, Wisc., as he rests in the terminal of O'Hare International Airport in Chicago early Sunday. Young Sullivan was reported by his parents to be in the cockpit of a Capitol Airlines charter DC-8 when it made a sudden drop from about 33,000 feet to 14,000 feet over the Pacific Ocean late Saturday. Bobby was one of 183 passengers, plus crew, when the incident occurred. The jet was enroute to Chicago from Hawaii via Oakland. Ten passengers were taken to an Oakland hospital before the flight continued into Chicago without further incident after about a four-hour delay. (UPI)

More Supervision Needed

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state Board of Social Welfare should strengthen its supervision of the state's 549 adult care homes, State Comptroller Arthur Levitt said today.

Levitt, in an audit of the board, said the board needs to conduct more frequent, more thorough inspections of the homes and that more surprise inspections are needed.

The program, which includes 433 private proprietary homes and 116 public, serves about 20,000 elderly persons. Adult home residents are not sick enough to be placed in nursing homes, but need "proprietary care."

The audit found that monthly costs at the homes vary widely — with few definite guidelines and standards set by the state. Monthly costs ranged from $101 to $587 — with large variations in the amounts spent for food and staffing per patient.

Because of these variations, the audit recommended that the legislature empower the welfare board to audit each home's records annually, to assure a minimum level of care for residents.

The audit team suggested the Welfare Board was too lenient on owners of the proprietary homes. It said: "We believe the board, in their efforts to treat home owners fairly, has adversely affected the quality of life for residents..."

Levitt's staff found that the board has waived minimum guidelines for many older adult care homes. One home had 3-7 persons per room, rather than the required two. Although new homes are limited to 200 persons, 21 older homes have a greater capacity — one housing 482 residents.

Also, fire regulations are not stringently enforced, the audit found.

The report said welfare board visits are timed so regularly the homes could predict and prepare for the arrival of inspectors. One home reportedly increased its staff just before each six-month inspection, then reverted to its normal staff size afterwards. At another home with an overloaded capacity, residents were transferred whenever the semi-annual inspection was due.

The report said the welfare board may need more resources to properly monitor the adult care homes. It noted that although more than $80 million in New York and federal welfare funds went to homes last year, less than one per cent of that amount was spent to monitor them.

High Speed Chase, Guns, A Bite

KINGSTON

A Kingston man who was initially arrested on 11 vehicle and traffic law violations following a high speed chase on Broadway Sunday night wound up in further difficulty after three guns were allegedly found in his car and when he allegedly bit a police officer who was trying to search him.

Arrested on the long list of charges Sunday at about 10 p.m. was James Butler, 28 of 110 Hone Street.

Vehicle and traffic charges against him included driving while intoxicated, reckless driving, failure to comply and speeding. Speeds during the chase reportedly reached 60 miles per hour.

The alleged discovery of two rifles and a shotgun in Butler's car resulted in a charge of fourth degree possession of a weapon being lodged against him.

Later, police said, Butler allegedly bit Patrolman Charles Polacco as he was being searched and he was charged with second degree assault, a felony.

Polacco was treated and released at Kingston Hospital. Butler was admitted to Kingston Hospital after complaining of chest pains, police said, and he was listed in satisfactory condition today.

Arrest Four

Ellenville State Police arrested four females, including two juveniles, on Sunday on third degree burglary charges in connection with a break-in Saturday at a Town of Rochester residence.

Police said the owner of the residence, who was not identified, spotted a car carrying the four females leaving his home on Saturday as he returned from snowmobiling. He gave police a license plate number, and on Sunday police found the car and arrested Maryann Kirshy, 50, of West Islip, Carol Ann Marsi, 18, of Brooklyn and two juveniles on burglary charges.

Police said a steamer trunk, skis and a toboggan taken in the burglary were recovered.

No Fatalities

Ulster County escaped the long holiday weekend unscathed, with no traffic fatalities reported. Statewide, fewer than normal traffic fatalities occurred during the 102-hour holiday period, with a UPI survey showing 13 persons killed. Nationwide, the weekend death toll mounted to near 400 as the holiday weekend drew to a close. The National Safety Council had estimated between 440 and 500 persons would be killed on the nation's highways.

One Nabbed

Highland State Police BCI investigators arrested Walter Merrill, 31, of Newburgh, formerly of Modena, on Saturday night on a charge of third degree grand larceny, a felony.

Police said Merrill allegedly took property belonging to his landlord when he moved from a trailer he had rented in Modena. Merrill was released on $100 bail following arraignment

Mattress Fire

A mattress fire of undetermined origin Sunday night at a residence at 172 Ten Broeck Avenue resulted in fire, smoke and water damage to the two-story home and kept Kingston firemen busy for nearly four hours. No injuries were reported.

Out On Bail

Robert Lutley, 43, of 171 Henry Street, Kingston, was arrested Sunday morning for second degree reckless endangerment by Kingston Police on the complaint of Rocco Secreto (age and address not available). Police said Secreto alleged that Lutley chased him with a knife in the area of John and Fair Streets. A nine-inch hunting knife was confiscated during the arrest, police said. Lutley was released on $50 bail.

Senate Undercut Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By its vote to halt all covert aid to anti-Soviet factions in the Angolan civil war, the Senate also has undercut the authoritarian negotiating style by which Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has mediated some of the world's most potentially explosive issues.

Lost in the heat of accusations between Kissinger and the Senate is the fact that even though the House may not support the Senate concerning Angola, the Senate vote still may have a devastating impact on future negotiations by Kissinger.

Even though Kissinger's ability is not directly involved in the Angolan situation, foreign rulers now must ask Kissinger if he can sell Congress on any agreement he negotiates — something they never had to ask seriously before.

Despite his international success, Kissinger failed to sell the Angolan policy in a closed-door meeting with 25 senators. Instead, the Senate voted for the first time to halt a CIA covert operation already authorized by a president.

Senate critics say that no matter what the House does after it returns from vacation Jan. 19, the message to Kissinger is clear. Congress no longer will tolerate his making major commitments involving the United States even indirectly in foreign wars without real congressional consultation.

Consultation with a half dozen Senate and House committee chairmen regarded as the Pentagon's men in Congress no longer will suffice.

Critics blame Kissinger's style with Congress as much as congressional fear of another Vietnam fiasco for his Senate defeat on Angola. They say that despite frequent appearances before congressional committees, Kissinger has shown contempt for Congress by usually consulting it last in his major diplomatic initiatives.

While Kissinger has flooded Congress with information about economic miracles in Japan and the political situation in Indonesia, for example, he has confronted Congress only with accomplished deeds on the foreign policy decisions that seriously affect national security.

His style has been to go personally into areas where other secretaries of state have feared to tread, commit the United States to what would have been treaties in bygone days, and return home to dare Congress to oppose him.

Often this style has served the nation and the world well. It has, for example, extended a shaky Arab-Israeli truce in the Middle East. It has thawed U.S. relations with Moscow and Peking. And in a peculiar onagain off-again way, it ended the U.S. involvement in Indochina.

But it always grated upon a Congress that jealously guards its prerogatives, particularly a Senate mindful of its constitutional duty to give presidents advice and consent on treaty matters.

Kissinger's decision -- and ability — to convince President Ford that the United States should get involved in Angola through covert CIA aid so quickly after the U.S. calamity in Vietnam shocked the Senate into opposing Kissinger.

Kissinger's souring congressional relations have prompted the question of whether he might resign. That is uncertain. When asked once what he would do after stepping down, Kissinger replied: "I have never thought about it.

"This is not the type of job that trains you for anything else."

South Africa Would Withdraw

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa has offered to withdraw its forces from Angola if Cuba and the Soviet Union also end their involvement in the Angolan civil war, according to government sources.

The offer from the white regime came in response to a black African proposal that all foreign countries pull out of the former Portuguese colony, the sources said Sunday.

Western diplomats interpreted the offer as an attempt to embarrass the Soviet Union and to direct African resentment at the Kremlin as the chief remaining obstacle to ending foreign intervention in the mineral-rich West African nation.

The Johannesburg Sunday Times said South Africa's presence in Angola was "counter-productive" because it has swung diplomatic initiative in favor of the Soviet-backed forces by embarrassing rival black Angolan leaders.

The Organization of African Unity has scheduled an emergency meeting in Ethiopia Jan. 10 to seek an end to the conflict.

(In Lusaka, Zambia, Western and African diplomats said the 46-nation organization stood virtually no chance of bringing peace to Angola. They said the Soviet-backed group and two pro-Western movements were "hopelessly split" and not prepared to compromise.)

The government sources said a condition of the South African offer included the withdrawal of Cuban troops, who joined the Marxist forces reportedly at Moscow's urging.

South Africa has at least a battalion of regular army troops in Angola. The Soviet Union has supplied the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola with arms and an estimated 400 military advisers. Cuba has provided about 6,000 combat troops.

The Popular Movement took control of the capital of Luanda and the oil-bearing northern enclave of Cabinda after Portugal pulled out of the country Nov. 11.

A military stalemate has set in and probably will be prolonged by current tropical rainstorms.

The Senate has blocked further covert U.S. aid to the anti-Soviet National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

Nadjari Controversy Continues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey says a resolution of the dispute over his announced intention to fire special state anti-corruption prosecutor Maurice H. Nadjari is "imminent."

The governor met privately with Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz for an hour and half Sunday to discuss the Nadjari dismissal.

Afterward, a Carey aide issued a statement on the governor's behalf which said, "We had a useful meeting this morning and a resolution is imminent."

The aide declined further comment on Carey's attempt to oust the special prosecutor Lefkowitz was unavailable for comment.

Last Tuesday, Carey, a Democrat, announced his intention to fire Nadjari, a Republican, and replace him with Manhattan District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau.

But, Nadjari, who was appointed under former Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, said he would remain in his post until ordered out by "the appointing authority" — Lefkowitz, a Republican.

The action threatened to bring on a partisan rift in the state administration

Meanwhile, the City Club, one of the more vocal local citizen groups, joined in the controversy during the weekend, urging Lefkowitz to oppose Carey's intended dismissal of Nadjari.

In a statement Saturday, City Club President Joel Harnett said Carey's attempt to dismiss Nadjari was an abuse of executive power

He said Lefkowitz was the only official empowered to fire Nadjari and urged the attorney general to "maintain the integrity of his office

"In view of the precipitous behavior by the governor, questions must be raised why the need for such hasty action, why the attorney general wasn't consulted," Harnett said.

Harnett said Morgenthau was "publically acceptable" as Nadjari's successor but added "he is legally disqualified for the special prosecutor's office because he cannot also be a district attorney."

The club president said if Carey's plan was implemented, Morgenthau would in effect be charged with investigating himself.

Nadjari, responsible for probing corruption in the city's criminal justice system, Sunday again suggested that Carey's attempt to oust him may have stemmed from fears among top Democrats about a current investigation.

In an interview on WNEW-TV, Nadjari said, "There's no question that some of the targets people who are close to the governor had exactly that opinion."

Women Of the Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time Magazine did not pick a "Man of the Year" this year but substituted 12 women for its annual honor.

Betty Ford, wife of the President, was among the dozen women which Time said "for good or ill," have most significantly affected the course of the year's events.

Susie Sharp, Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, joined Mrs. Ford on the list. The First Lady reportedly campaigned for her as a possible candidate for the Supreme court seat President Ford ultimately gave to Justice John Paul Stevens.

Also on the "Women of the Year" roster were Addie Wyatt, head of the new Coalition of Labor Union Women. Feminist author Susan Brownmiller, author of "Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape," also made the list, as did tennis star Billie Jean King and Alison Cheek, whose ordination as an Episcopal priest rocked the church.

Others were Carla Hills, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; Texas Congresswoman Barbara Jordan; Jill Ker Conway, president of Smith College; Carol Sutton, managing editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, Kathleen Byerly, a Navy lieutenant commander; and Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso.

Time explained it did not name a man of the year because "it was a year of retrenchment and reappraisal."

"In this atmosphere," the magazine said, "leaders did not so much lead as grope. It was not a period in which a single man of the year could decisively emerge."

Time said a few men might have made it, had the award gone to men instead of women. Among them were Henry Kissinger, Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Teng Hsiao-ping, who has emerged as de facto ruler of China.

Cargo Ship Sinks

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A Panamanian-registered cargo ship sank in rough seas off the northern tip of the Philippines today but most of its crewmen were rescued, the Manila Rescue and Coordinating Center reported.

A spokesman said 21 of 26 crew members from the Rebecca Lu had been picked up by five commercial vessels that answered the ship's distress call.

He said the Rebecca Lu, a dry bulk cargo vessel en route to Taiwan from Indonesia, sank at 3 p.m. (2 a.m. EST) in heavy seas 70 miles northwest of Cape Bojeador, 300 miles north of Manila.

The Hong Kong Marine Department, which earlier picked up distress calls from the ship, said the 6,000-ton vessel reported her number one hatch was taking on water and the crew was abandoning ship.

The Hoegh Ranger, the first ship to answer the distress call, radioed that she had been to pick up survivors but that seas were rough and rescue operations hampered by floating logs.

Four more commercial vessels responded to the call and were aiding in the search for the missing crewmen.

Faulty Furnace Blamed

NEW YORK (UPI) — A faulty furnace leaked deadly carbon monoxide gas in a Brooklyn apartment Saturday. One woman was killed and 10 other persons were injured.

Three of the victims, including a month-old child, were treated at St. Mary's Hospital and released.

A Brooklyn Union Gas Co. spokesman said residents had called to complain about an odor of gas in the building. A crew which inspected the premises found that the furnace's chimney was stopped up, with carbon monoxide gas backing up because of improper combustion.

The crew shut off the furnace and placed a large red tag on it to warn against its use until the chimney was cleaned out, then left.

The landlord went through the building telling tenants that the furnace would be shut down, the spokesman said.

In one apartment, the landlord found the body of Lynette Edwards, 25, of Queens, who was there visiting a friend. She apparently was a victim of the leaking gas, authorities said.

Police were then called about leaking gas in the building, and an Emergency Services Unit was sent to investigate. The ESS men were told about the dead woman, and they found that 10 other persons had been affected by the gas, officials said.

The gas company spokesman said a company crew also went to the building a second time but "this time it was only because the gas was lingering there."

Dr. Gorman Bows Out

The City of Kingston has been fortunate these past six years to have Dr. Gerald Gorman as one of its representatives in the county legislature.

Saying that six years was long enough, Dr. Gorman elected not to seek a fourth term last November. His presence will be missed, not only by the populace but by his cohorts in the legislature.

Though he is a Democrat , Dr. Groman did not let his political emotions interfere with his common sense approach to the many problems encountered in a predominantly Republican county.

In addition to his duties as minority leader, Dr. Gorman has been active in many of the important committees of the county body. He has had the respect and esteem of all its members and his decision not to seek another term leaves a huge gap in the city of Kingston's representation on the county board.

The Freeman salutes Dr. Gorman of six years of faithful service to the people of Ulster County in general and the residents of Kingstn in particular. He did his job well and it will be a long time before anyone fills his big shoes.

Smith Leaves the Council

When the new Common Council is sworn in on New Year's Day, Third Ward Republican Alderman Brian D. Smith will be back with the city's private citizens.

After six years as a member of the minority party, Smith was given his reward by the Republican City committee—no support in a fourth term attempt.

It's not often that a bonafide winner gets dumped by his own party — especially since the excuse was that someone else (Joseph Marklel) was promised the candidacy two years ago and it was his turn to run this time.

The Freeman will miss Alderman Smith. As a minority leader the past two terms, he has been an outspoken and sometimes the only vocal opposition to the Koenig administration.

But, his politics didn't interfere with his thinking. On many occasions he sided with the mayor when he thought it would be in the best interests of his Third Ward constituents as well as the city of Kingston residents.

The Freeman hopes that despite the fact he will no longer be representing his ward as a council member, Brian Smith will continue his political activity. His record speaks for itself and there are too few men like him around in this topsy turvy political world.

Careless Error

Editor, The Freeman:

As a concerned citizen of the Onteora School District, I was very deeply distressed to see the financial affairs of our district being handled so poorly. I am referring to an incident which occured at the December 15th Board of Education meeting when the monthly items calling for a transfer of $21,500 and $2,269. The approval of these fund transfers had already been made by the Board of Education at the November meeting.

This careless error has clearly been made by Dr. John Keough, who obviously did not scrutinize the finances of the district. This error, by the way, was discovered not by Dr. Keough nor any Board member, but by a member of the audience, namely, myself.

In view of the flippant manner in which our hard-earned tax dollars are being mismanaged, one must question the ability (or lack of ability) of our business manager, Dr. John Keough, who is also in the position of Action Superintendent. One must also question the wisdom of the majority of our Board of Education in appointing to the position of Acting Superintendent a business manage who appears tobe inept at handling the financial affairs of the district. A question which remains in my mind is, how many other errors have gone unnoticed and uncorrected? Perhaps of even greater importance is a question of the Board's intentions regarding the continued employment of Dr. Keough in light of the fact that his contract expires in June 1976.

I hope that all those concerned citizens who have an interest in preventing the misuse of their hard-earned tax dollars will attend the next meeting of the Onteora Board of Education!!

Sincerely
Jane Rossitz,
Shandaken

Thank You

Editor, The Freeman:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that the Helping Hand CB'ers take this opportunity to publicly thank everyone who was responsible for making our Drive on December 13th a success. As Helping Hand CB'ers this was our first effort in gathering public donations which we distributed to those less fortunate families in the area serviced by Ulster Hose No. 5 Inc. to help make this Christmas truly happy.

We appreciate the help of the general public and area businesses, such as Lake Katrine Superette, Ulster Plaza Merchants, IBM, Boice Brothers Dairy, Bryant's Inc., Paley's Market and Hurley Hotel. We are also indebted to Ulster Hose No. 5 Inc., for their sponsorship and support.

Our best wishes for a peaceful New Year to all.

Yours truly,
Helping Hand CB'ers
Mrs. R. Hitchcock.

Thanks and Appreciation

Editor, The Freeman:

On behalf of the children, staff and administration of the St Cabrini Home, I would like to express our thanks and appreciation to Diane Gerald, Norman Schwartz, Tony Franco, James Sunderlin and Jack Ruzzo of the Camelot Inn Restaurant, who organized, prepared and gave a Christmas party and dinner for 115 children and several staff on December 21.

We all enjoyed the excellent food and the lively music, and the children were especially delighted with their gifts. We are keenly aware of the great amount of time which had to be given by these generous people in order to organize such a celebration, and we wish that the Spirit of Christmas, which is love, return their generosity a thousandfold.

Yours sincerely,
ROSEMARY A. SHERIDAN
Executive Director
St. Cabrini Home, Inc.

Vacation Needed

Editor, The Freeman:

In these holy days of celebration, all our Senators and Congressmen are away from Washington. This is the season of the year when they do the least damage to our nations economy. They are scattered all over the world. Some go to junkets in Europe, others go to have a chat with their friend Mr Pinochet of Chile, some go to Spain to pay their respects to the new King of Spain.

Senators and Congressmen will go any where in the world just to keep from going back home and facing their constituents. It is just too bad that we do not have many more such holidays in order to relieve our hard-working representatives from going home to face their people and instead, meet with dictators of the world.

It is too bad the vacation did not start any sooner -the Ulster County Legislature just adopted a budget which will increase property taxes by 32 per cent.

Sincerely,
Angelo DeLewis,
Modena, N.Y.

Inside Report

Signing the Bill

By Rowland Evans
And Robert Novak

WASHINGTON—William Simon, Secretary of the Treasury, in a highly confidential memorandum Dec. 8 forcefully pleaded for a veto of the energy bill —both reflecting and adding to the ill effects of President Ford's month-long delay before his probably inescapable approval of the compromise.

Mr. Ford's signature, continuing oil price controls, suggests he is no political high roller but a true son of Congress inclined to the most cautious route. In addition, it reveals that he is susceptible to the majority opinion of his advisers; is more concerned with broad political impact than high pressure lobbying; is clearly no ideologue.

But what preceded his signing the bill Dec. 22 also underscores one of Mr. Ford's most serious weaknesses: agonizing procrastination. This indecision generated much veto agitation of its own—including Simon's polemical memo—guaranteeing a measurabl worse reaction than if he had acted four weeks earlier.

Actually, Mr. Ford months ago painted himself into a corner on energy by taking a hard public line for oil decontrol while privately encouraging federal energy administrator Frank Zarb to compromise with Congress for the best bill possible.

But so long as the President was going to take Zarb's advice and approve the compromise, he would have cut losses by announcing he would sign the compromise bill once its language was set late in November. Simon, though a fierce bureaucratic infighter and bitter foe of controls, had always been pessimistic about chances for a Ford veto. In the absence of any public word by Mr. Ford, however, he continued to lobby. His full argument was contained in the Dec. 8 memo to the President.

Simon was characteristically blunt. The bill would undermine the President's policy, he said, "by increasing our vulnerability to (OPEC) interruption and price escalation" through decreased domestic production and increased imports of "at least" one million barrels a day.

"The bill postpones the inevitible decision on price decontrol," Simon told the President. "Postponing decontrol will merely entrench the vested interests created by economic distortions resulting from controls and continue extensive controls over the petroleum industry contrary to your general policy to minimize gomvernmental interference in the private secto4 of the economy."

This strong language was not restricted to the President's ears but circulated through Washington when a preliminary Simon draft (quoted above) leaked to Capitol Hill. Lacking a full appreciation of how the Ford administration functions, it might be assumed the Secretary of the Treasury would not ventilate such sentiments without strong indications the bill would be vetoed.

Such suspicions were heightened when Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, on his endless trips about the country, began publicly denouncing the bill on the President's desk. Federal Energy Administrattion (FEA) officials were outraged. Rockefeller's complaint, Zarb grumbled in private, was that the bill did not contain a huge federal handout to industry. But with the President silent, the Vice President was not muzzled.

What truly incensed Zarb, however, was that White House indecision encouraged mounting political pressure in the oil states. Word drifted into Washington that Robert A. Mosbacher, the Houston investment broker in charge of Ford campaign fund-raising, was suggesting to oil magnates that contributions to the President might just influence his decision.

Thus were false expectations of a veto aroused in Washington. One high-priced oil industry lobbyist with superb administration connections became convinced by Dec. 17 that a veto was imminent. After the President gave no hint whatever of his feelings during a cabinet-level discussion of the bill on Dec. 19, gloomy officials in the FEA thought they had lost.

Political considerations were not discussed at the Dec. 19 meeting. But inside the White House, the President was advised the short-term impact of signing the bill would help Ronald Reagan's challenge for the nomination. Nevertheless, two of Mr. Ford's closest political associates—counselor Robert T. Hartmann and Commerce Secretary Rogers Morton—came down marginally against a veto which would enable the President's Democratic foes to paint him as captive of the oil industry and blame rising gasoline prices on him.

Such advice probably augmented the President's natural inclination to support Zarb, his chosen lieutenant for energy, and his failure to share Simon's zeal for deregulating American industry. Had Mr. Ford followed his instincts a month earlier, the political damage would have been diminished at a time the President cannot endure more erosion of his strength.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON—The United States has pumped so much emergency military equipment into Vietnam and Israel that its own arsenals are dangerously depleted.

This is the conclusion of a secret audit, which claims the arms exports "adversely affected overall U.S. readiness." The explosive audit, conducted by the General Accounting Office (GAO), charges that military supplies were borrowed from active U.S. units to meet the needs of our allies.

Some critical items were rushed to Vietnam and Israel in spite of "existing shortages" within America's own armed forces. These crucial weapons allegedly were removed from U.S. bases, including strategic "prepositioned" stocks in Europe.

"Actions are currently underway to try to alleviate many of these shortages," states the audit, which was concluded last month. But it adds grimly that "for such items as tanks, production capability is limited . . . Thus, inventories for ssveral important items will remain depleted for a long time."

During the 1972-74 period, declares the document, "the United States programmed . . . about $8.5 billion to support South Vietnam and Israel with military supplies and equipment."

On three occasions, arms were poured into Vietnam on an emergency basis. This occurred in August, 1971, and again in June, 1972.

Then, "as negotiations for a cease-fire in Southeast Asia progressed, it was anticipated that the agreement might call for a moratoruim on military equipment entering Vietnam. A special project was undertaken in October, 1972, to identify and expedite delivery of all the equipment the United States wanted to get in-country before such a deadline could be established."

Most of these supplies were abandoned a few months later by the retreating South Vietnamese. Indeed, the loss of U.S. equipment on overseas battlefields has been staggering.

During the latest Arab-Israeli conflict in October, 1973, for example, "equipment and supplies on both sides were consumed at astonishingly high rates. The Israeli inventories were reduced to such dangerous levels that Israel requested immediate assistance from the United States."

The Defense Department, caught without a contingency plan, asked the Israelis to document their needs. But they refused "to provide some such information," the study alleges. Therefore, "U.S. authorities had no basis on which to judge the criticality of items and amounts thereof requested by the Israelis."

Defense officials, nevertheless, filled most of Israel's requests on blind faith, although this meant stripping certain U.S. units. Here are other highlights from the secret GAO report:

—"The two principal types of tracked vehicles furnished to Vietnam and Israel in large quantities wee tanks and APCs (armored personnel carriers). As of June 30, 1974, the Army had a shortage of 4,943 tanks and 1,822 APCs." This reduced the inventory of tanks, for esample, 50 per cent below the minimum Army requirements.

—The 'rmy keeps equipment in Europe for U.S.-based troops, who would be airlifted across the Atlantic in case of an emergency. "To respond to Israel's requirements," states the study, "the Army withdrew 368 M-60 series tanks from this stock as well as 500 APCs." This cut deeply into the stockpile that is supposed to be held in Europe for U.S. use.

—Because of the shipments to Vietnam and Israel, according to the study, "the total requirements for APCs will not be satisfied until about 1980."

—Tactical radio components were furnished to Israel during the Middle East war. The government auditors claim this "had the effect of further aggravating a critical shortage which had existed for several years."

—The Air Force also depleted its "on-hand, available stocks" to supply Israel, thus leaving itself "far short of the computed war reserve requirements in several instances."

—The Tactical Air Command, for example, "was required to withdraw 34 F-4E aircraft from its active squadrons and to furnish them to Israel, thus uncreasing TAC's worldwide shortage to 116 F-4 aircraft."

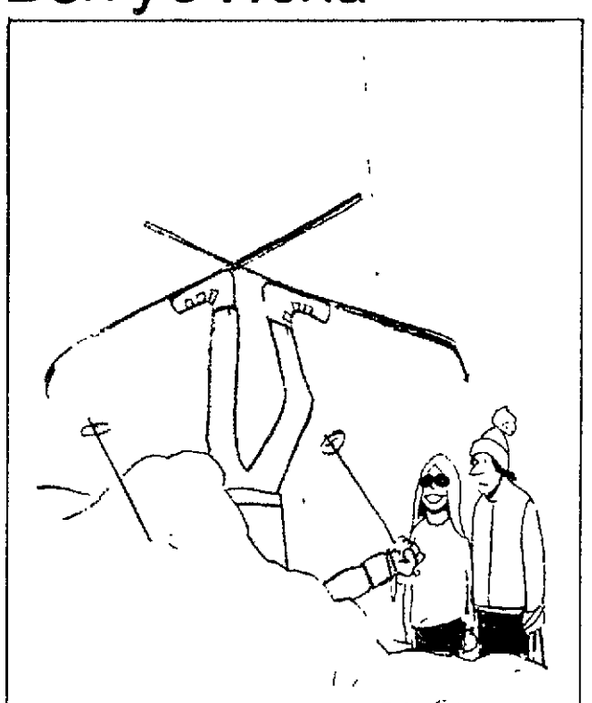

—During the 1973 Middle East war, 400 Maverick air-to-ground missiles ""were withdrawn from stock and sent to Israel." This amounted to "50 per cent of the missiles on hand," charges the report.

—Another air -to-ground missile, the Shrike, is used chiefly to knock out the radar systems of anti-aircraft missiles. "In October, 1973," reports the GAO, "Israel requested slightly more than 1,000 Shrike missiles. Although only 300 Shrikes were delivered to Israel, at the time the Air Force had only 22 per cent of its requirements."

—The U.S. has stopped producing Sparrow intercept missiles, which are used to blast enemy planes out of the sky. Although the U.S. had none to spare, the Israelis requested 180 and received 80 Sparrow missiles during the October, 1973, war.

Footnote: The Pentagon acknowledged that the GAO audit was "an impressive overview of the impact of aid to Israel and Vietnam." But Defense officials called the report "incomplete" because of an "inadequate analysis."

Flower Children's Last Trip

The hippie counterculture died quietly in the night. ' few survivors wander the streets spaced out. These are no-bra girls with matted hair, cut-off jeans and hairy legs. The men are pale and bearded, doorknob shoulders, youths with the wistful wet eyes of hungry mongrels.

It was 15-years-old, a world-wide movement of peaceniks and beatniks addicted to a cacophonous sound called rock 'n' roll. Allen Ginsberg was its father; Bob Dylan its mother, Its philosophy was drugs, music, sex, unemployment.

The hippie movement's enemy was The Establishment. This doomed the counterculture because nothing is strong enough to kill The Establishment except The Establishment. It is a credit to the hippies that the protest lived to surpass the emotional age of its proponents.

At best, they were simplistic nomads. They live in communes, sleeping on the creaky floors of wretched houses with partners they barely knew.

DEEP STARE

They dropped acid because it gave them an expanded awareness. Small daisies became huge sunbursts. A cracked plaster wall was transmuted into a heavenly mural. It enabled hippies to stare behind the eyes of other men into their souls.

They went away on LSD. Some did not come back. Others came back and went away again, not wanting to. Life became a trampoline. Still others had a bad trip, returning to scream hysterically as they clawd at imaginary rats crawling up their legs.

They wanted most of all to "be in tune with nature." Living poor is a long limping walk to nowhere. They called it the good life. They met by the hundreds of thousands at rock concerts and in peace marches.

Some of these ended with riots. Crew-cropped cops beat and busted the flower children. They bled in gutters like bags of rags. They fought against the war in Vietnam chanting: "LBJ, LBJ, how many kids you kill today?"

The blondes tried black men and the black girls tried honkies. Both were disappointed. Sex, especially in the dark, is colorless. They lied to each other and called it love. It was a pathetic exercise in license.

The Beatles sang their song. The hippies stripped all the culture from their skin and enjoyed their nakedness. They had babies and everyone knew who the mother was. Timothy Leary was the godfather.

Poets who couldn't rhyme wrote verse. Young men learned to weep as well as to laugh. Rip-off artists, rapists, junkies and dealers infiltrated the movement until few culd detect the genuine from the spurious garbage.

The movement began to freeze. It stared wistfully, hopefully at a cold sun. The glitter of filth began to decay. Small groups were chased from unemployment insurance lines. Some surrendered and went home. A few were frozen in space, lying in parks fingering a loose thread on a garment for hours.

Some died, lying unclaimed in a medical examiner's cold room. Many ate their own guts and whimpered for help. Others enrolled in colleges and hoped to study forever, without ever graduating. The move movement had gangrene.

PRACTICAL RETREAT

The deepest humiliation was taking a bath and getting a haircut. The males used the word "man" excessively to make sure they were. In order to get jobs, some had to relearn simplistic English. The army of love began its horrifying retreat from the scented world of unreality to the naked bulb of the practical.

No one wanted that trip. The flower children were left with no other place to go. They went home holding their ears against lectures, weeping to stifle the whip-words cutting across the dining room table. It was enough, they felt, that the freak had come home.

They kept their music. The records, the tapes, the raucous beat became albums of old family photos. It made them all young again, all one.

Some have not surrendered. There may be 10,000 sleeping in parks and parking lots, the great mass of hippies they became middle-aged overnight . . .

Throw A Dessert Party!

NEW YORK

Looking for an easy and economical way to entertain? Try a dessert and coffee party! Your invitation will be a welcome treat for friends and neighbors and means minimal preparation for you.

A dessert party can be as formal or informal as you like, a spur of the moment invitation, or a large affair planned well in advance. You might choose to hold your party following some other function which many of your guests will attend — a performance by the local theater group or a P.T.A. meeting. On the other hand, you can simply invite friends to your house for an enjoyable evening with some tempting refreshments.

Whether invitations are verbal or written, be sure to state "dessert and coffee" so guests know they should have dinner at home. Plan two or more desserts depending on the number of people expected.

Friends will have a hard time deciding between the two tempting desserts shown here. The Mocha Almond Angel Cake is light and airy, but the creamy frosting makes it sinfully rich and delicious! Our unique Lemon Yogurt Pie sits in a scrumptious graham cracker crust with a doubly flavorful filling made of lemon yogurt and gelatin. Both desserts are easy and economical to prepare and they are low in cholesterol and saturated fat which is so important to many diet-conscious people today. Fleischmann's 100 per cent Corn Oil Margarine makes it possible without sacrificing a bit of flavor.

Plan a dessert party during the holidays, or any time you want to wish your friends a warm welcome!

Mocha Almond Angel Cake

6 tablespoons softened Corn Oil Margarine
1 box (1-pound) unsifted confectioners' sugar
¼ cup cocoa
½ teaspoon instant coffee
3 tablespoons skim milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 10-inch angel food cake
Sliced almonds

In a small bowl, blend together margarine, confectioners' sugar and cocoa. Dissolve instant coffee in skim milk. Add to margarine mixture with vanilla extract. Beat until smooth and spreadable.

Use to frost 10-inch angel food cake. Garnish top of cake with sliced almonds. Makes one 10-inch tube cake.

Lemon Yogurt Pie

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup melted Corn Oil Margarine
1 package (3-ounce) lemon gelatin
1 cup cold water
1 cup lemon yogurt

Combine graham cracker crumbs, sugar and melted margarine. Reserve one tablespoon of mixture for topping. Press remaining crumb mixture firmly against sides and bottom of 8-inch pie plate. Refrigerate crust at least 15 minutes.

Meanwhile dissolve lemon gelatine in boiling water. Add cold water. Chill until slightly thickened. Add yogurt and beat with rotary beater until thoroughly blended. If mixture is thin, chill until of mounding consistency. Spoon into prepared crust. Sprinkle top with reserved crumbs. Chill until firm. Garnish with lemon slice, if desired. Makes one 8-inch pie.

Old Country recipes are still being made, but many American shortcuts or variations taste just as good — if not better. For instance, Black Forest Cake. This cold souffle, made with Knox Unflavored Gelatin e and the traditional kirsch, cherries and chocolate, is crowned with chocolate curls, whipped cream and more cherries — quite as spectacularly as the German cake!

Riz l'Imperatrice is another classic dessert with an easy variation fancy enough to become a custom. Rice and vanilla are added to a gelatine custard; then candied fruit marinated in liqueur is folded in with whipped cream

The most luscious of all gelatine desserts probably didn't originate in Bavaria as the name would imply, but the French claim credit for invention. In Almond Brittle Bavarian, ice cream substitutes for eggs. The brittle isn't Bavarian either: the crushed almond candy recipe comes from Scandinavia!

BLACK FOREST SOUFFLE

1 can (16 oz.) sour pitted Cherries, drained
5 tablespoons kirsch
4 squares (1 oz. ea.) semi-sweet chocolate
2 enveloped Knox Unflavored Gelatine
¼ cup sugar
3 eggs, separated
2 cups milk
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
2 cups (1 pt.) heavy cream

Reserve ½ cup cherries; chop remaining cherries and marinate in 2 tablespoons kirsch

Make enough chocolate curls for garnish (using about ¼ oz. chocolate).

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine and ½ cup sugar. Add egg yolks beaten with milk, and chocolate squares (about 3¾ oz.). Stir over low heat until gelatine dissolves and chocolate melts, about 5 minutes; add remaining 3 tablespoons kirsch and vanilla. With wire whip or rotary beater, beat mixture until chocolate is well blended. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

In large bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar and beat until stiff. Fold in gelatine mixture.

In medium bowl, whip 1½ cups heavy cream and fold into gelatine mixture with chopped cherries and kirsch.

Turn into 1-quart souffle dish with 3-inch collar; chill until set, about 4 hours. Remove collar; to garnish, top with remaining heavy cream, whipped, reserved ½ cup cherries and chocolate curls. Makes about 10 servings.

ALMOND BRITTLE BAVARIAN

½ cup sugar
¼ cup chopped blanched almonds
1 envelope Knox Unflavored Gelatine
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
1 cup vanilla ice cream, softened
1 cup (½ pt.) heavy cream, whipped

In small saucepan, melt sugar over medium heat, stirring constantly, until syrupy and light brown in color; stir in almonds. Pour onto greased baking sheet; cool. Between waxed paper, crush brittle fine; reserve 2 tablespoons.

In small bowl, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over cold water; let stand until moistened. Add boiling water and stir until gelatine is completely dissolved; add ice cream and stir until melted Let stand until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon, about 7 minutes; fold in whipped cream and brittle. Turn into dessert dishes or 1-quart bowl and garnish with reserved brittle; chill until set, about 2 hours. Makes about 6 servings

RIZ L'IMPERATRICE

½ cup chopped mixed candied fruit
3tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur
2envelopes Knox Unflavored Gelatine
⅓ cup sugar
3 eggs
2 cups milk
2 cups cooked rice
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup (½ pt.) heavy cream, whipped

In small bowl, marinate candied fruit in liqueur.

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine and sugar; blend in eggs beaten with milk Stir over low heat until gelatine dissolves, about 5 minutes; add rice and vanilla. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

Fold in fruit with liqueur and whipped cream. Turn into 6-cup mold and chill until firm, about 4 hours. Unmold and garnish, if desired, with additional whipped cream and candied fruit. Makes about 10 servings.

About Antiques

Painted Canvas Floor Coverings

You will probably never find a genuine antique Painted Canvas Floor Covering—or even a remnant of one. Very few of the pioneer hand-painted forerunners of today's vinyl or linoleum tile floors have survived since their popularity during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Because rugs were not generally available to our pioneer forefathers, the art of painting designs on room-size sailcloth became necessary and fashionable. Heavily sized with up to a dozen coats of a linseed oil-based filler, these floor coverings were decorated on one side with a geometric design painted with artists' oil colors. The result was a durable and beautiful covering.

Designs usually took the form of the inlaid marble floors of the time, with the difference being that a floor covering artist had a wider range of colors to choose from.

With the arrival of domestic and imported rugs around 1750, the demand for Painted Canvas Floor Coveings soon diminished. The use of sailcloth then went back to the sailmaker.

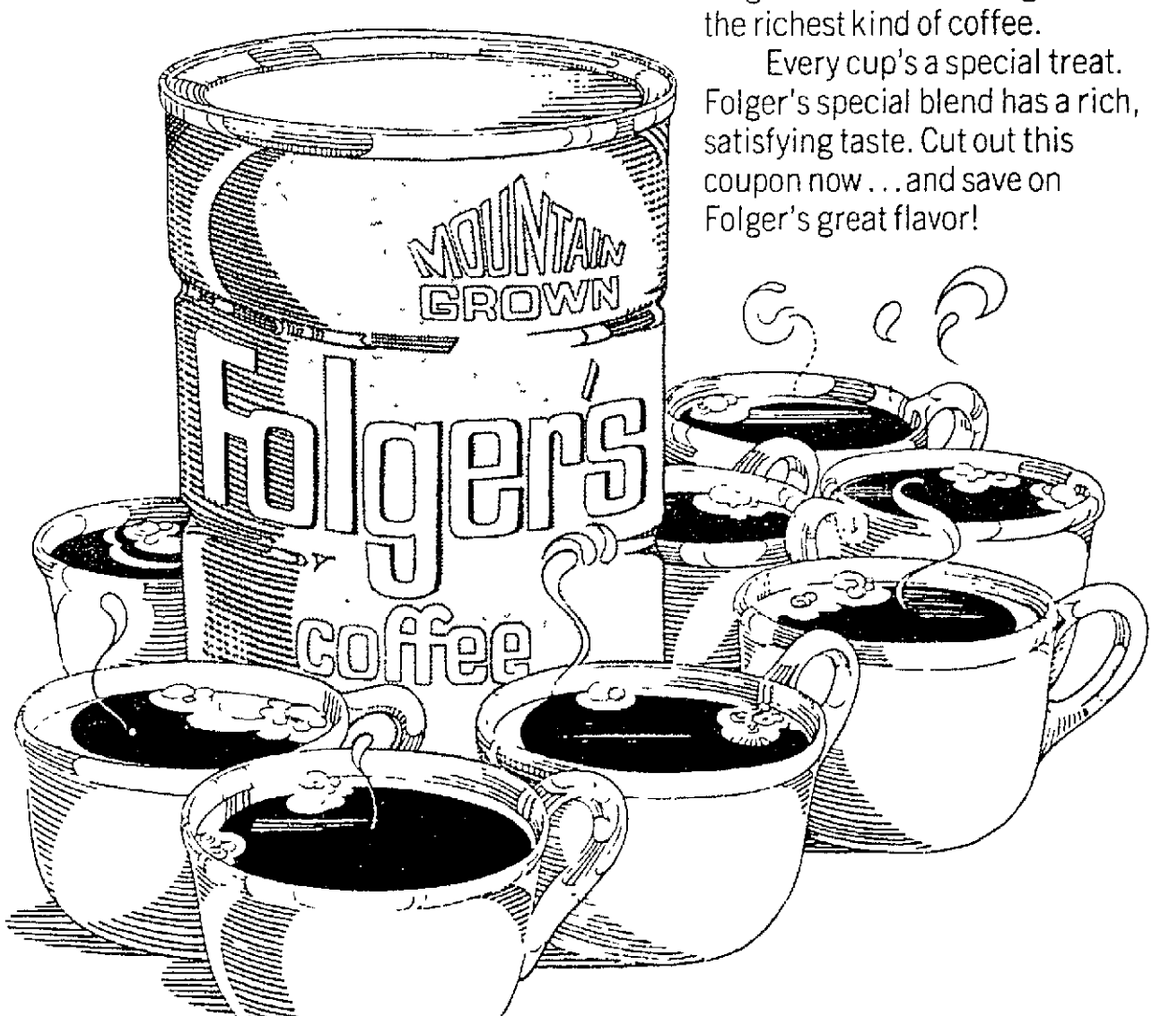

To add an authentic touch to a room of antiques, some of today's decorators and antique lovers are either making their own reproductions of these old covering or purchasing some of the ready-made examples now being manufactured.

To accent an antique grouping with one of these Painted Canvas Floor Coverings you might decide to try making one yourself. For starters, a hall runner or small mat might be appropriate. If you are exceptionally artistic you might even try to paint a canvas floor cover pattern to match a design on one of the antiques you already own—perhaps a favorite dinnerware pattern'

Lord Snowden: A Royal Passion for Photography

By Marian Christy

LONDON—Princess Margaret's husband, Lord Snowdon, is seated behind a king-size desk in a cluttered Kensington Palace office that's obviously private property. The nonroyal room is punctuated with posters, costumed dolls, modern painting and miles of book-studded shelves.

A uniformed butler, who could have stepped out of the pages of an Agatha Christie mystery, is serving demitasse coffee. The former Anthony Armstrong-Jones is painstakingly dribbling tiny drops of menthol magic called the White Flower of China into the coffee.

"This stuff really clears the head," said the 45-year-old Snowdon with a smile.

Photography is a passion with this controversial member of England's royal family. His camera has captured fashion photos for bride magazines as well as poignant pictures of people confined in Britain's mental institutions.

Occasionally there are close calls. Recently Snowdon had planned to join British auto racing champion Graham Hill and his team of six on a private plane flight from Marseilles to London. Snowdon, who was to take photos of Hill en route, canceled at the last moment. He felt he had enough photographs from a previous session.

The decision not to go saved him from perishing in the crash of that plane on a north London golf course while its pilot tried to land in heavy fog. Everone on board was killed.

He changes the mood by smiling broadly and talking about his "background credentials."

"I almost went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology," Snowdon says, "but I landed at Cambridge's Jesus College to study natural science. Well, that lasted about 10 days. I found chemistry utterly impossible!

"I changed to architecture but I spent too much time on boat racing. Thank heavens we won the Oxford-Cambridge boat race in 1950! But, alas, I failed my exams. I was told to 'get on' for a year and then come back. Of course I never returned. Frankly, I've always regretted that."

Instead, Snowdon drifted into photography.

"I worked in a chemist's shop doing enlargements fr other photographers," he says about his first job. "Then I decided to open my own shop. The rent was $8 a week, but I was on my own."

Snowdon specialized in portraits. Eventually Vogue and Harper's Bazaar began printing his pictures, and the royal family took notice. When Princess Margaret's 29th birthday photos were released to the press, they carried Snowdon's byline.

It was the beginning of a two-year courtship.

On May 6, 1960, Snowdon married Princess Margaret at Westminster Abbey and his name became a household word.

Snowdon, apparently sensitive about what Londoners call his "floundering marriage," will not answer questions about his relationship with Princess Margaret, 45, or Queen Elizabeth. Gossip is that there's a divorce in the offing.

> "As a photographer, I merely catch a moment in time, I am totally separate from the subject. In a way, I'm a fly on the wall."

Apparently Snowdon's nonphotographic forays are not always received with relish by Her Majesty's subjects.

Last year he invented a wheelchair on a motorized platform to enable a disabled person to maneuver from room to room. "This little invention irritated wheelchair manufacturers who were complacent about updating their designs," says Snowdon.

In 1965, he designed the aviary for the London Zoo. "I was criticized like crazy. The aviary, which is created to give the illusion that birds are in the wild rather than cages, was called 'rotten' by the press. But, you see, it eventually won serious praise in the Architectural Review, and from then on it has been treated more or less reverently.

"I worked three years on it, 16 billion people have seen it, and I got paid the sum total of $260."

What is it like being Lord Snowdon, the photographer, the occasional fashion designer and the inventor? Can the fact that he lives in Kensington Palace and is the husband of Princess Margaret be a detriment as far as his work is concerned?

"When you stick your neck out—and I do—you take a chance," he says. "What hurts most is the irrelevant criticsm. I like to think that I take no notice of critics I don't admire. It isn't true of course! I sop up all the criticism, regardless of the source. But I'm trying to be tough-skinned about nasty things said or written about me. I tell myself that a bad notice is better than no notice at all."

Snowdon, who has published five books of his photographs, says successful photography "takes a lot of luck."

When he was assigned to photograph Mike Todd, Snowdon says, a servant slammed a heavy door and Todd grimaced at the loud bang. "You see, Elizabeth Taylor was asleep in the next room and Todd didn't want the harsh noise to awaken her. The instant he frowned, I clicked. The picture was done in 15 seconds flat. That's pure luck.

"I have no particular, easily recognizable style. If you look through a batch of photographs, you could never pick the ones done by Snowdon. As a photographer, I merely catch a moment in time, I am totally separate from the subject. In a way, I'm the fly on the wall."

On an occasional twinge of insecurity:

"I tend to think I've snapped a nice picture and when I see the finished photograph, I'm disappointed. When I'm working, I have an intense desire to get the negatives processed immediately. Then, when the brown envelope is delivered to my desk, I tear it open and—well, sometimes my reaction is agony. I don't have what I thought I'd captured. Unfortunately, the older you get, the more nervous you are about achieving excellence."

Some of Lord Snowdon's critics have sneeringly labeled him Lord Bountiful—and that bothers him. His subjects, he says, are available to other photographers. When he goes to old age homes, mental hospitals or clinics for battered children, he says, there are no special advantages.

"The last thing I want to be known as is a do-gooder," he says. "But I know when I delve photographically into life's deepest social problems, people are bound to call me a voyeur. I consider myself an illustrator. Unfortunately there is only a hairline difference between the two."

Recently Snowdon's work has been exhibited in major cities. In two-day shows in Cologne, New York, and London, nearly a half million people saw Snowdon's poignant photos on the subject of "loneliness."

Snowdon and Margaret have a son, Lord Linley, 14, and a daughter, Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 11. Official photographs of his wife, children and other members of the Royal Family are done by other photographers—most often Norman Parkinson. "I only take snaps of my children," admits Snowdon.

Why is Snowdon, the photographer, banned from these family assignments? There is a moment of reflective silence.

"I would be justifiably criticized," he says. "The photographers would complain that I, Lord Snowdon, had been given special preference. So, at times, I let the others take the picture."

A Compost Heap Is A Lot of Rot

A new 20-page booklet written in co-operation with the Soil ssociation, for home gardeners interested in learning about garden compost, is available free from Rotocrop, manufacturers of compost bins. Entitled "A Lot of Rot on Gardens", the booklet explains in clear non-scientific terms how garden compost can act as a soil conditioner and a fertilizer to improve the growth of both flowers and vegetables without the need for chemical fertilizers.

The Soil Association, with headquarters in England, is a non-profit organization founded by the late Sir Alfred Howard, pioneer of organic methods of cultivation.

The booklet first explains that a garden compost heap is a man-made device by which the natural process of decomposition is speeded up so that animal and vegetable waste can be used to improve the soil and make plant nutrients more readily available to growing plants. "Compost made from a good variety of common ingredients can directly supply your plants with all the nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium they need, as well as many other minerals" states the introduction. It also goes on to explain that compost can be used as a mulch to create a weed-free blanket between rows to protect plant roots from drought and cold, and that compost is a soil conditioner, adding fibrous qualities to the soil. This encourages earthworms which enrich the ground with their casts.

Good composting matrials to use from the garden include remains of vegetable crops, weeds, lawn clippings, leaves and hedge trimmings. Tough stalks like cabbage stems, and thick fibrous roots of perennial weeds are best smashed or shredded before use.

Useful household wastes to use include wood ashes from your fireplace, orange peels, egg shells, coffee grounds—even old wool and cotton rags, providing they are well mixed together with other ingredients and moistened.

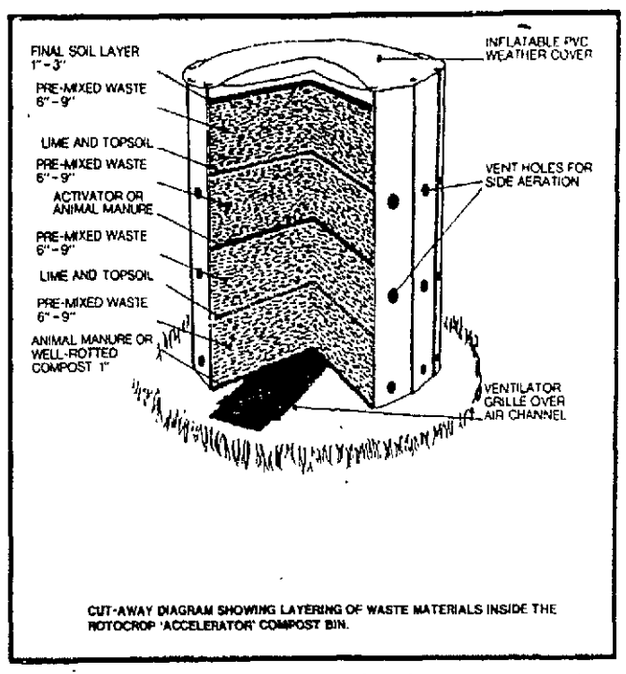

From the farm, straw and animal manures are excellent materials for composting.

The booklet further advises that thick layers of any one material should be avoided—especially impermeable layers of sawdust, grass clippings and leaves. These should be mixed with other waste material to improve air flow and drainage of moisture.

Although moisture is essential in a compost pile, too much moisture in the form of a sodden or waterlogged condition will suffocate the heap and cause putrefaction.

Aeration is also vital. Too little will turn the heap into a putrid mess, and too much may cause rapid heat and moisture loss.

A major ingredient in the success of a compost pile is nitrogen. In spring and summer there is plenty of nitrogen in grass clippings, young leaves and weeds, but in fall this is almost totally absent. To provide the extra nitrogen needed there are some excellent natural sources. Animal manures (especially horse, cow, sheep, pig, poultry and rabbit) are good examples. So are dried blood, bone meal, hoof and horn meal and sewage sludge. These extra sources of nitrogen are known as "activators".

CUT-AWAY DIAGRAM SHOWING LAYERING OF WASTE MATERIALS INSIDE THE ROTOCROP 'ACCELERATOR' COMPOST BIN.

The booklet also advices for acid soil areas a sprinkling of lime. Activators and lime should be applied between layers of waste materials alternating the lime and nitrogen source. After the sprinkling of lime a layer of ½ inch of soil effectively absorbs any liberated ammonia and conserves it until the micre-organisms responsible for decomposition are ready to use it.

The average home gardener is advised to use a compost bin made to preserve heat generated by biological action, and designed to control aeration and moisture content. An Accelerator type bin is recommended, made of sliding panels with a removable insulated cover, and aeration holes around the sides.

The Accelerator compost bin is an easy and hygienic method of collectiong garden and kitchen wastes and turning them into good compost quickly. Made from attractive green interlocking panels, it is a self-contained unit that holds waste materials, speeds decomposition, and produces rich, clean, odorless compost for adding directly to the garden.

For a copy of the free information booklet on making compost, write: Rotocrop, 58 Buttonwood Street, New Hope, Penna. 18938.

Choosing and Using Your Doctor

By Alison Goddard

New York (MW) — How do you judge a good doctor?

"If I felt intimidated about calling my doctor with a problem — he wouldn't be a good doctor."

"I want someone who'll treat me and answer my questions without putting me down . . . who'll talk to me and listen to me."

"I look for a doctor who takes a complete history and with whom I feel comfortable enough to tell the truth in all areas, knowing he'll keep my confidence."

"I believe a physician's competency is directly connected to how he relates to his patients."

If you are a woman over forty, with years of experience in seeking medical treatment, your response to the question is apt to be like those of the women quoted above. All are patients of Marvin Belsky, an internist who invites them to speak out at three-hour "feedback sessions" in his Manhattan office on alternate Thursday nights.

"I can learn from patients just as they can learn from me," Dr. Belsky explains. "But I don't believe everything I hear from them — and vice versa." He thinks his group sessions encourage patients to think more about what they want in their health care — and then to demand it.

"Fateful Decision"

"Next to choosing a mate," Dr. Belsky said at a recent session, "choosing a doctor is the most fateful decision we make. Our lives may be at stake. Yet we often make the selection without preparation or knowledge."

Discussions of this theme at his feedback meetings have become the basis of Dr. Belsky's new book, "How to Choose and Use Your Doctor" (Arbor House, $7.95). Its main aim is to puncture what he calls "the medical mystique" — an aura of power and expertise that overwhelms many patients and keeps them from evaluating their doctors. Such awe — as evidenced by the gripes of patients attending Dr. Belsky's sessions — can later change to alienation and even rage.

One woman complained that doctors always gave her "the runaround." Another told of going to four physicians with symptoms, only to be told she was "neurotic." Finally, a fifth diagnosed her condition as hypoglycemia.

There were tales of "outrageous referral fees," and a consensus among Dr. Belsky's patients that as women, they were talked down to and considered "overly emotional" by many doctors. In each case, Dr. Belsky asked: "What do you think the doctor should have done? Why didn't you tell him how you felt?"

"Examine" Your Doctor

He goes a step further in his book, specifying just what people should demand of their physicians. "Start by choosing a doctor who is connected with a teaching hospital. Ask him — or her — how he's keeping up with the medical profession. Is he attending meetings, reading professional journals? Find out just what his fees are."

Dr. Belsky suggests that the patient's assessment include the following questions: How is the waiting room run? Is the doctor always behind schedule on appointments? (A Belsky hint — telephone the office before coming in for your appointment to see how the doctor's schedule is running.) Does your physician take a complete medical history? Does he or she listen to your description of symptoms and then explain the diagnosis and any instructions carefully?

"Speak up. Be assertive." Dr. Belsky charges his patients. "If you're disgusted, let the physician know it. The best advocate of your rights is you. Forget the medical mystique. You owe it to yourself to be a questioning, well-informed patient."

Cutting Down on Blood Fats

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband recently learned he has too many triglycerides in his blood. His count was 316.

We can't find much information on triglycerides and wondered if you could help us. What is the difference between triglycerides and cholesterol, since they are both fatty substances? Also, where could we get more information concerning triglycerides? He is on a no sugar, no starch, and no fried foods diet.

DEAR READER — I get that question often. No wonder since heart and vascular disease is the most common serious disease we have in our culture.

Cholesterol is a waxy substance from the bile. It is not really a fat. It has a yellowish mushy consistency. It is transported with fat (triglycerides) into the artery wall. A greater amount of cholesterol than fat remains in the wall and causes the cholesterol deposits that cause heart and vascular disease in man.

Triglycerides are simply fats. The fat you eat is usually made up of fatty acids connected to glycerol (glycerine). Three fatty acids connected to glycerol is a triglyceride. That is what you find in animal fat and most vegetable fats. Look on the food labels now appearing and you will see the terms monoglyceride, diglyceride and triglyceride. That means one, two or three fatty acids attached to the glycerine. It is all fat, and that is what you want to know.

The fatty acids can be saturated fat or unsaturated fat. The cholesterol, fat (triglycerides), and a blood protein combine to form a soluble substance in the bloodstream called a lipoprotein. If you want more details on triglycerides and cholesterol, write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.J. 10019. Send 50 cents, a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and ask for The Health Letter number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing about my son. He has erthropoietic protoporphria. It was not diagnosed accurately until he joined the Marines when he was 18. He was medically discharged after 40 days of hospital examinations and is now going to school at the university.

I understand this is a metabolic disease and part of the problem is an allergy to the sun. I am wondering if anything in the nature of a diet could improve the condition.

Life without the sun is not an easy adjustment, and I'm wondering if he should have some type of vitamin supplement.

DEAR READER — Yes, that is a rare disease all right. It was only described a short time ago. It belongs to a group of disorders involving pigment formation in the body. The pigment in the type of disorder your son has is caused by excessive pigment formation by the liver and a small amount from the formation of red cells.

The form he has causes what might at first appear as an intense, sudden reaction to the sun, with reddening and swelling of the exposed areas. Prolonged exposure can lead to an eczema-like appearance which gradually heals and may even leave scarring.

I am happy to tell you that this form of porphyria usually doesn't cause any serious disability nor affect the outlook for life expectancy. So, your son should live a healthy, normal life — except if he wants to protect his skin he will have to avoid the sun.

I am less happy to tell you that this is the only treatment other than symptomatic measures when sun exposure causes problems.

Dear Abby

Hubby Holds Car Keys Till Wife Votes Wallace

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is mean. He bought me a new Chevrolet, then wouldn't give me the keys until I signed a pledge to support George Wallace in '76. He and I never agree on anything, including politics.

Abby, I don't think this pledge should be binding since he forced me to sign it. My preacher says it is not binding as it was signed under duress.

I'm afraid to tell my husband what the preacher said since he doesn't think too much of the preacher and might make me sign another pledge to quit attending "that damn fool Baptist Church."

I value your opinion. Should I support Mr. Wallace? I don't like him, but then I don't like anyone else either, including my husband.

C.M. IN TUSTIN, CALIF.

DEAR D.M.: The secret ballot is an inalienable right in the U.S.A. You can't sign it away, and your husband can't force you to.

The "pledge" he demands is both absurd and unenforceable. Vote for the candidate of your choice.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter about Pisher the Poodle: Of course, I believe dogs understand what is being said to them.

Even though we provided a sitter for Ferdinand, our English bulldog, during our absence, he was very much annoyed with us upon our return.

He ignored our warm and friendly greetings, and wouldn't even come near us for days.

Then, my husband finally cornered him and explained in detail that we had to leave him and go to England because we weren't able to find a collar large enough for him here.

It took Ferdinand a long time to buy that story, but eventually he was wagging his tail and happily rejoined the family.

VERA IN NEWPORT

DEAR VERA: Next time, explain to your English bulldog where you are going and why, and you won't get the cold shoulder on your return.

DEAR ABBY: I am a healthy, active 76-year-old woman, and nobody takes me for a day older than 60. I lost my husband four years ago have have dated many interesting, eligible men since, but I never considered remarrying — until I met Julius.

He is a handsome, 69-year-old southern gentleman-type who was much too proper to go beyond a kiss before marriage.

To cut a long story short, Julius and I were married two months ago, and much to my surprise, I discovered that he didn't know the first thing about satisfying a woman. He had been married twice, so I couldn't understand it.

It doesn't seem possible for a man whose kisses promised so much to be so totally inept when it comes to lovemaking. (He's unbelievably selfish.)

Perhaps the bedroom performance shouldn't be so important to a woman my age, but it is.

I pretend that he is a good lover, but he's miserable. How can I let Julius know that he's not satisfying me without hurting his ego?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: An improved martial relationship is more important than Julius' ego. You do him no favor by pretending satisfaction. If he's able to satisfy himself, he's able to satisfy you. Some honest dialogue can make him more sensitive to your needs. You can be effective without being cruel. Start talking.

The Second Forty

Tempest in a Dishpan

Have you a problem as a mature woman, or with one? For advice write Margaret Brookfield, Information Center on the Mature Woman, 515 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

*****

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I am 15 years younger than my husband, who recently retired. I'm still working and thoroughly enjoying the contacts my job gives me and sometimes bring a colleague home to dinner with us.

I enjoy whipping up a quick meal on such occasions, but if I leave the dishes for my husband to do the next morning, he gets very unpleasant and claims that I'm emasculating him. Is this fair?

Y.W.

Dear Y.W.

Of course it isn't fair — but is everything?

One question: do you bring your husband and his interests into the conversation at these dinners, or do you and your colleague "talk shop" and leave him out in the cold?

After their retirement many men suffer a loss of self-esteem. This may be the case with your husband, and expecting him to do the dishes after you've entertained your working companion may be rubbing salt in his wounds.

Your husband needs to have his ego built up. Try inviting his friends over for special evenings now and then. Once he feels more confident and involved, the task of doing the dishes will fade into its proper perspective.

As another solution, if it's not too expensive, consider buying a dishwasher.

* * *

Nay-Saying Approved

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

A hearty "well-done" to your recent correspondent who had dared to say "no" to another woman who wanted to move in with her and "amen" to your endorsement of her action.

I fell into the trap of saying "yes" when my daughter asked me to take care of my grandson — age 5 — so she could take a part-time job. When I found that I just couldn't keep up with an active youngster and canceled the deal, we had a most unpleasant scene. We're reconciled now, but it would have been much easier if I'd just refused at the beginning.

D.C.

Dear D.C.:

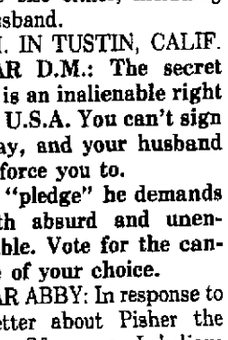

It's not always possible to know at the outset that you're going to regret saying "yes." You may even have thought it would be fun to take care of your grandson, but, if at the very beginning, you didn't want to do it, then you should have said so.

On the other hand, you were right in canceling the arrangement once you found it too taxing, and your daughter should have taken your decision in better grace.

One of the nice things about getting older is being more sure about what we really want to do — and don't.

U.N. Rating At Low Point

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J.

The public's rating of the United Nations' performance has declined to a 30-year low point following passage of a resolution condemning Zionism as a "form of racism and racial discrimination." The great majority of Americans, however, continue to favor retaining U.S. membership.

In the latest survey, 33 per cent say the United Nations is doing a "good job" in trying to solve the problems it has had to face, while 51 per cent say a "poor job."

The proportion currently giving the UN a favorable rating is down 8 points from a survey completed in January of the current year. That survey showed 41 per cent saying the UN was doing a good job and 38 per cent saying a poor job.

Although the performance rating given the UN is at a low point, three Americans in every four believe the U.S. should not give up its membership in this organization.

The United Nations General Assembly in November approved, by a vote of 72 to 35 with 32 abstentions, a resolution describing Zionism, the movement to establish a Jewish nation in Palestine, as a "form of racism and racial discrimination."

The UN action touched off debate on U.S. participation in the world body, with some political leaders proposing a cancellation of voluntary U.S. contributions to the UN and others saying we should resign from the 30-year-old organization.

Following is the question dealing with the performance of the UN:

"In general, do you feel the United Nations is doing a good job or a poor job in trying to solve the problems it has had to face?"

Here are the latest results and trend since 1967:

Gallup Poll

Results from surveys prior to 1967 are based on comparable questions and show favorable performance ratings far outweighing unfavorable ratings.

Following is the question asked concerning our membership in the UN in surveys over the last quarter-century, with the trend:

"Do you think the United States should give up its membership in the United Nations, or not?"

Views Of Opinion Leaders

An earlier Gallup survey of opinion leaders from 70 nations of the free world indicated that most would favor the UN's taking on new roles. These include the creation of a permanent United Nations peace-keeping force and the establishment of universities in major areas of the world.

Some critics of the UN reached in the survey felt that the organization's effectiveness had been seriously curtailed by the veto powers of the Security Council and by the voting rules in the General Assembly, which give as much weight to the vote of smaller nations as to the vote of larger ones.

The opinion leaders interviewed in that survey favored, by more than a 2-to-1 margin, limiting the veto powers of the Security Council. A closer vote was recorded on changing the voting rules to give less weight to the vote of smaller nations, with 48 per cent favoring such a change and 43 per cent opposed.

The latest results for the general public are based on interviews with 1,507 adults, 18 and older, taken in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 21-24.

Staubach Just Threw and Hoped

A Sad Day in the Tarkenton Family

Fran Tarkenton (L), a quarterback of the Minnesota Vikings, is not a happy man after his team was defeated, 17-14 by the Dallas Cowboys in Sunday's NFC playoffs, and he had yet to learn that his father, Dallas, 63, died of a heart attack while watching the game in Savannah, Ga. The Reverend Tarkenton (R), is shown in a 1973 photo. (UPI)

Pearson Did Rest

(United Press International)

Desperation is when you are four points down and 50 yards away from pay dirt with less than 30 seconds remaining in the game against the best defensive team in the National Football Conference.

That's when it's nice to have luck on your side...as the Dallas Cowboys found out Sunday in their shocking 17-14 upset of the defending NFC champion Minnesota Vikings in the opening round of the NFL playoffs.

Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach, his team trailing 14-10 in the 59th minute of the game, took the snap from center in the shotgun formation and fired a long desperation pass to Drew Pearson into the teeth of Minnesota's prevent defense.

Pearson and defensive back Nate Wright both pulled up short at the five yard line with Pearson taking a stride back upfield toward the underthrown ball and Wright tumbling to the ground. A surprised Pearson snagged the ball waist high and gingerly steppped past the fallen defensive back into the end zone for the winning points.

"You just have to throw it up there and hope the receiver can outjump the defense or just get lucky," explained Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He did."

In the other playoff game Sunday, Oakland nipped Cincinnati 31-28. On Saturday, defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh dumped Baltimore 28-10 and Los Angeles routed St. Louis 35-23.

Dallas will visit Los Angeles for the NFC championship and Oakland will travel to Pittsburgh for the AFC title game next Sunday to determine the participants in Super Bowl X Jan. 18 in Miami.

"The pass was underthrown and I had to come back for it," Pearson said of the reception which denied Minnesota a shot at a third straight Super Bowl appearance. "All along Roger (Staubach) kept asking me if I could get deep. Finally we ran out of chances. I told him this was the time.

"I gave Nate Wright an inside move and we were even when the ball was thrown," he added. "It felt like he bumped me. Anyway, we both saw it was short and both tried to hold up. I reached back and got it on my hip.

Minnesota Coach Bud Grant saw the play differently.

"It was clear as night and day that Nate was pushed," Grant said. "But that's the ball game. It's the old basketball play. push off and jump up to the ball."

The Cowboys effectively muffled NFC leading quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who passed for just 100 yards in his worst game of the season. Tarkenton's father, the Rev. Dr. Dallas Tarkenton, suffered a fatal heart attack while watching the game on television at home in Savannah, Ga. He was 63.

Minnesota picked up just 214 in total offense and the Vikings's first touchdown came on a drive of just four yards — following a Cliff Harris fumble of a Neil Clabo punt.

Minnesota's second touchdown, with 5:11 left in the game, culminated a 70-yard drive with Brent McClanahan plowing in from the one.

Dallas also had a four-yard touchdown run by Doug Dennison in the third quarter and a 24-yard field goal by Toni Fristch earlier in the fourth quarter.

Ken Stabler threw three touchdown passes to push Oakland out to a 31-14 lead before Ken Anderson found his passing arm with two fourth quarter touchdown tosses to pull the Bengals within three points.

Stabler hit Mike Siani with a nine-yard touchdown pass and Bob Moore with an eight-yard scoring strike to help stake the Raiders to a 17-7 halftime lead. Pete Banaszak added a six-yard touchdown run in the third period and Stabler found reserve tight end Dave Casper for a two-yard touchdown pass and what proved to be the winning points early in the fourth quarter.

Anderson hit Charlie Joiner with a 25-yard touchdown pass and found Isaac Curtis with a 14-yard TD toss a short time later to pull the Bengals back into contention late in the game. Stan Fritts and Lenvil Elliott scored on short runs for the first two Bengal touchdowns.

"We never expected it to be easy," said Oakland Coach John Madden. "Cincinnati is a very explosive team and you never really can keep the Bengals under control even with a big lead. But in the end it came down to our defense against their offense and we prevailed."

Pittsburgh relied on a magnificent defensive effort plus the running of Franco Harris in disposing of Baltimore. The Steelers limited the explosive young Colts to 154 yards in total offense—just one more yard than what Harris himself accounted for on the ground.

The Colts, who turned around from a 2-12 season last year to 10-4 and the playoffs this year, played more than three quarters of the game without quarterback Bert Jones, who strained an arm in Baltimore's first series when he was accidentally kicked by a Pittsburgh defender.

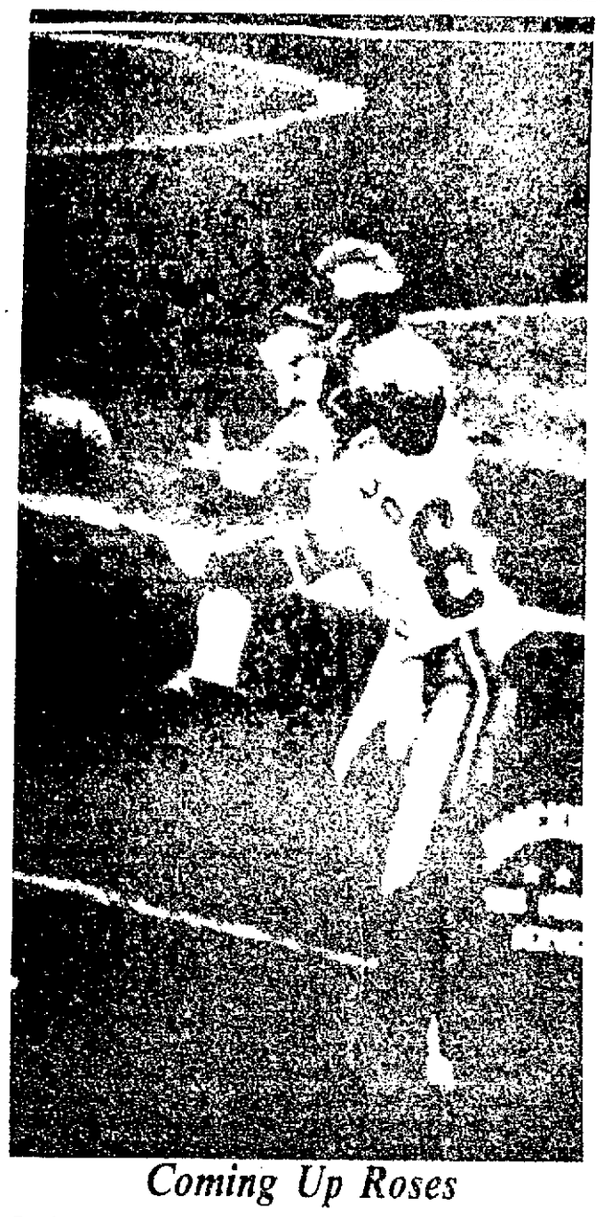

He was relieved by Marty Domres, who threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Glenn Doughty for Baltimore's lone touchdown as the Colts stayed within four points heading into the fourth quarter.

Los Angeles throttled St. Louis defensively in the first half, running out to a 28-9 halftime lead. The Ram defense scored two touchdowns on interceptions in the first half before turning the game over to the offense and Lawrence McCutcheon.

Jack Youngblood returned an interception 47 yards for one Los Angeles touchdown and Bill Simpson carried one back 65 yards for another Ram score to decide the contest in the game's initial 30 minutes.

McCutcheon, who sat out the Rams' regular season finale against Pittsburgh, rushed for a playoff record 202 yards in 37 carries to help the Rams win their seventh straight gave.

"I wasn't aware of how many yards I had," said McCutcheon. "I knew that I had carried the ball a lot because I got tired at the end. The most I had carried it previously was 39 times in college.

Coming Up Roses

Landry Reacts: "A Miracle"

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Coach Tom Landry of the Dallas COwboys had a new synonym for victory today.

"A miracle," he said.

Landry spoke of the Cowboys' come-from-behind 17-14 triumph over the Minnesota Vikings, which put [illegible] the championship [illegible] National Football [illegible] at Los Angeles [illegible]

Only 24 seconds remained when Drew Pearson, who caught only four passes in the game, all of them in the last 111 seconds, took the ball away from two Minnesota defensive backs, Terry Brown and Nate Wright, for the decisive touchdown.

"Our only hope was to throw and hope for a miracle," Landry added.

But he said he felt victory was deserved since he believed the Cowboys outplayed the Vikings all the way.

"I can't believe it yet," Landry said of Pearson's game-winning catch. "But it was a situation where it was called for and you hope when the defense is playing deep in a prevent that you can throw it up there and your receiver will outjump the defense or just get lucky."

Pearson said Roger Staubach's pass for the winning touhdown was underthrown and "I had to come back for it."

He confessed he had told Staubach that he "could get deep" and "this was the time" for the bomb.

"It was the most important catch of my career," he said. "We dominated the game and should have won it."

"We both saw it was short and tried to hold up" Pearson said. "I reached back and got it on my hip. Our chances were slim and none. Even though everybody's talking about the last touchdown, we deserved to win."

Coach Bud Grant of the Vikings and his players believed it was a bum decision by the officials which gave Pearson the score.

Grant, declaring it a "one time in 100" catch, charged that Pearson pushed Wright and was guilty of offensive interference as both of them tried to get the ball.

"A receiver will get away with that one time in 100 chances," Grant said. "He has nothing to lose because if he's caught the ball simply goes back and you try again. It was the old basketball play. You push off and jump up for the ball."

The Vikings, though, benefitted by another break on a [illegible] and Minnesota's Jerry Beaman intimidated Harris before he had a chance to field the ball. But Cowboy lineman Pat Donovan thought it had hit Harris, which would have been a fumble, tried to recover the ball but lost it, and Fred McNeill recovered for the Vikings on the Dallas 4.

That was Harris' view of the incident.

"I had to back off," he said. "It didn't touch me, but there was a lot of confusion."

The Cowboys contend Beaman interfered with Harris' right to catch the ball, but referee Chuck Heberling said Beaman was blocked into Harris by a Dallas player.

Still the Vikings took three plays before Chuck Foreman plunged across from the one for a touchdon and a 7-0 lead. Thereafter the Vikings got across the 50 into Dallas territory only twice, scoring a touchdown in the final period when quarterback Fran Tarkenton directed a 76-yard [illegible] play march which ended when Brent McClanahan [illegible] one yard [illegible] and [illegible] to Minnesota [illegible]

It was [illegible] per[illegible] Landry said. "Our defense played some good games but some not so good. In this one, they got it all together. To hold Minnesota to 17 points is remarkable."

Dallas dominated the game statistically, [illegible] Tarkenton completed 12 of 25 passes for 100 yards and was sacked four times [illegible] while Staubach [illegible] 17 of 29 passes for 214 yards and was sacked [illegible]

It Wasn't Easy for Raiders

OAKLAND (UPI) — The road to the AFC Championship game didn't prove a joy ride for either the Pittsburgh Steelers or the Oakland Raiders — the two clubs everyone figured right from the start would be there at the end— so what can fans expect of their big meeting next Sunday?

Ken Anderson, the Cincinnati Bengals' fine quarterback whose team was beaten by the Raiders 31-28 Sunday in the opening round of the conference playoffs, for one, thinks next Sunday's game will be a tough as they come.

"They are two great teams, and it should be a good game," Anderson said. "I think it is so close it is tough t give an edge to either one. Pittsburgh will be at home and maybe that will make a difference.

The home field didn't mean anything to the Raiders a year ago when they hosted the Steelers in the title game and went down, 24-13. so naturally, they don't think it will amount to much for Pittsburgh this time.

The Steelers, playing a Baltimore team that had to go most of the way without its No. 1 quarterback (Bert Jones), huffed and puffed their way to a 28-10 victory on Saturday. The Raiders had as tough a time holding off the Bengals on Sunday. They have the added disadvantage of a day less of practice and the loss of nearly a day in traveling to Pittsburgh.

The Steelers, as defending Super Bowl champions, more than likely will be the favorites in the conference title game, which seems about right.

Most Cincinnati players wondered what will happen when the Raiders go with three three-man down linemen defense against the Steelers.

"Anyway you look at it, it should be a close game," said Bengals tight end Bob Trumpy. "It'll certainly be a game worth watching. It'll also be interesting to see how Oakland's three-man defensive line does against Franco Harris."

The Raiders's three-man defensive line is more exaggerated than real. Rarely do the Raiders wind up with only three men up front. It's something they give the opposition to think about and more often than not they wind up with five men up front by the time the ball is snapped.

Last year in the title game Oakland didn't stop Harris or Rocky Bleier, Franco's running mate, so it seems obvious the Raiders will have to come up with a defense that can. Otherwise, the 1975 title game may be a repeat of the 1974 edition.

"Obviously, we will have to do something about Harris," said Raiders' coach John Madden. "He is the man who makes their offense go. If you stop him you have a pretty good chance to win the game."

Sunday's victory over Cincinnati showed quarterback Ken Stabler and linebacker Ted Hendricks at their best. Stabler completed 17 of 23 passes for 199 yards and three touchdowns, while Hendricks sacked Anderson four times — the last during a crucial final series of downs which saw the Bengals give up the ball at the Oakland 38 with a little more than three minutes left in the game.

"We never thought for a moment the Bengals would be easy," said Stabler, "and the Steelers will be tougher yet. We had no set plan on what we would do offensively against Cincinnati. We went with what their defense dictated. I guess you could say we might play it the same way again. We know Pitsburgh will be tough. The Steelers always are and we always have good games with them. They're a great team with great personnel."

Hendricks thought his performance against the Bengals may have been his best as a pro.

"I joined the Raiders because of their playoff potential," said Hendricks, who played out his option at Green Bay and cost Oakland its No. 1 draft choice plus one other pick. "This game (against Cincinnati) made it all pay off. Naturally, I'm pleased. Four quarterback sacks seems like a nice day's work. Doesn't it?"

Stabler threw scoring passes of nine yards to Mike Siani and eight yards to Bob Moore and old George Blanda booted a 27-yard field goal for a 17-7 halftime lead, which became 31-14 early in the final quarter after a six-yard smash by Pete Banaszak and a two-yard pass from Stabler to Dave Casper.

But Anderson hit Charlie Joiner with a 25-yarder and Isaac Curtis with a 14-yarder to draw Cincinnati to within three. Then, the Oakland defense, led by Hendricks, took over when it seemed the young Bengals would turn things around in the closing minutes, and that was it.

The victory sent the Raiders into their seventh league or conference championship game. They have won only once in the big one — in 1967 — but went on to lose to the Packers in the Super Bowl.

"None of this means a thing if you don't get to the Super Bowl," said Raider managing general partner Al Davis. "We've been down this road a lot of times. Let's hope we can go all the way for a change."

Those Bengals Won't Fade Away

OAKLAND (UPI) — Paul Brown's best Cincinnati Bengals' team is through for this season after losing 31-28 to the Oakland Raiders in the AFC playoffs Sunday, but they left enough claw marks to indicate they like it near the top and intend to stay there.

In fact, the Bengals knocked the Raiders out of playoff picture with a last quarter flurry after Oakland fans and a nationwide television audience thought the game was won.

Down 14-31 in the last period, the Bengals came roaring back with two quick touchdowns as quarterback Ken Anderson suddenly got hot. They then failed to capitalize on one good chance and a long shot and Oakland sewed up a shot at the AFC championship against Pittsburgh next Sunday.

There were almost five minutes left in the game when tackle Ron Carpenter pounced on an Oakland fumble on the Raider 37-yard line. But Ted Hendricks sacked Anderson for the fourth time for a six-yard loss and three straight passes failed to get a first down.

That was the last time Cincinnati had the ball in the 1975 season.

"I thought a key to the game was our not getting that first down. We had a big opportunity and couldn't take advantage of it," Anderson said.

The Bengals' long shot chance came with 50 seconds left. Oakland was forced to punt from the Cincinnati 48. The Bengals put on an all-out rush and nearly blocked Ray Guy's punt. But they were called for running into the kicker and Oakland ran out the clock.

"It was the last actual real chance we had," Brown said after the game. "It was a calculated risk and we came close. There were only seconds left and blocking the kick was about the only shot we had at that stage."

"We got overpowered for a period of time there," said Brown, "but we finally got back into the game. I told the team I was proud of them. They lost to a splendid team— and on their home grounds too."

Cincinnati is perhaps the team best able to assess next Sunday's Pittsburgh-Oakland game. The Bengals played each twice this year, losing both to the Steelers and splitting with Oakland.

Official Is Kayoed

BLOOMINGTON, MINN (UPI) — A whiskey bottle thrown from the stands struck a National Football League game official in the head and knocked him unconscious Sunday in the final seconds of the Dallas Cowboys-Minnesota Vikings football game.

A league official called for better policing to avoid other such incidents.

Armen Terzian, field judge of the game, was standing near the Vikings' end zone with less than 24 seconds to play in the game after Dallas had scored to take the lead when he was hit.

The bottle hit him on the forehead and bounced more than 30 feet, almost [illegible] the players who were lined up for an attempted conversion.

Later, Terzian, athletic director of the San Francisco high school system for the last 15 years, said that he had "just thrown a whiskey bottle at the field" when he was hit.

Referee Chuck Heberling said that "there were other bottles and cans thrown on the field before the incident."

Jack Reader, NFL supervisor of officials, said, "We need better police at these games. Without it there are going to be other serious incidents and this is going to happen again."

Vikings' president Max Winter offered a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the man who threw the bottle which hit Terzian. The bottle was thrown from the bleachers near the Minnesota end zone.

A spokesman [illegible] was [illegible] Terzian's forehead [illegible] the head. He was [illegible] the dressing room and obviously was shaken when he participated in a postgame news conference.

Drew Pearson Cashed in Against 100-1 Odds

BLOOMINGTON, MINN. (UPI) — Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson cashed in a 100-1 gamble for the winning touchdown against the Minnesota Vikings Sunday, Vikings' Coach Bud Grant said after the 17-14 defeat.

Grant said there was no question that Pearson committed offensive interference on Vikings' defensive back Nate Wright before Pearson caught the 50-yard touchdown pass from Roger Staubach that won the game.

"It was clear as day and night that Nate was pushed," Grant said, "but that's the ballgame. From our side of the field there was absolutely no question Nate was pushed."

"A receiver will get away with that one time in 100 chances. He has nothing to lose because if he's caught, the ball simply goes back and you try again. It was the old basketball play, you push off and jump up for the ball."

Grant would make no comment on the officiating. Only a week ago he was fined an undisclosed amount by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for a declaration that many league officials were "amateurs" and that they should be made full time professionals in their jobs. Sunday, about the officiating, he said, "I have no comment. There's too big a club over my head."

"I'm stunned," Wright said. "That's all I can say. I thought I had an interception and the next thing I knew I was on the ground. What a way to end a great season."

Strong safety Terry Brown, also covering Pearson on the game breaking play, said, "It doesn't matter now. I was running side by side with Pearson and he pushed Nate down. I saw it. Two officials were there, but they said, 'no.'

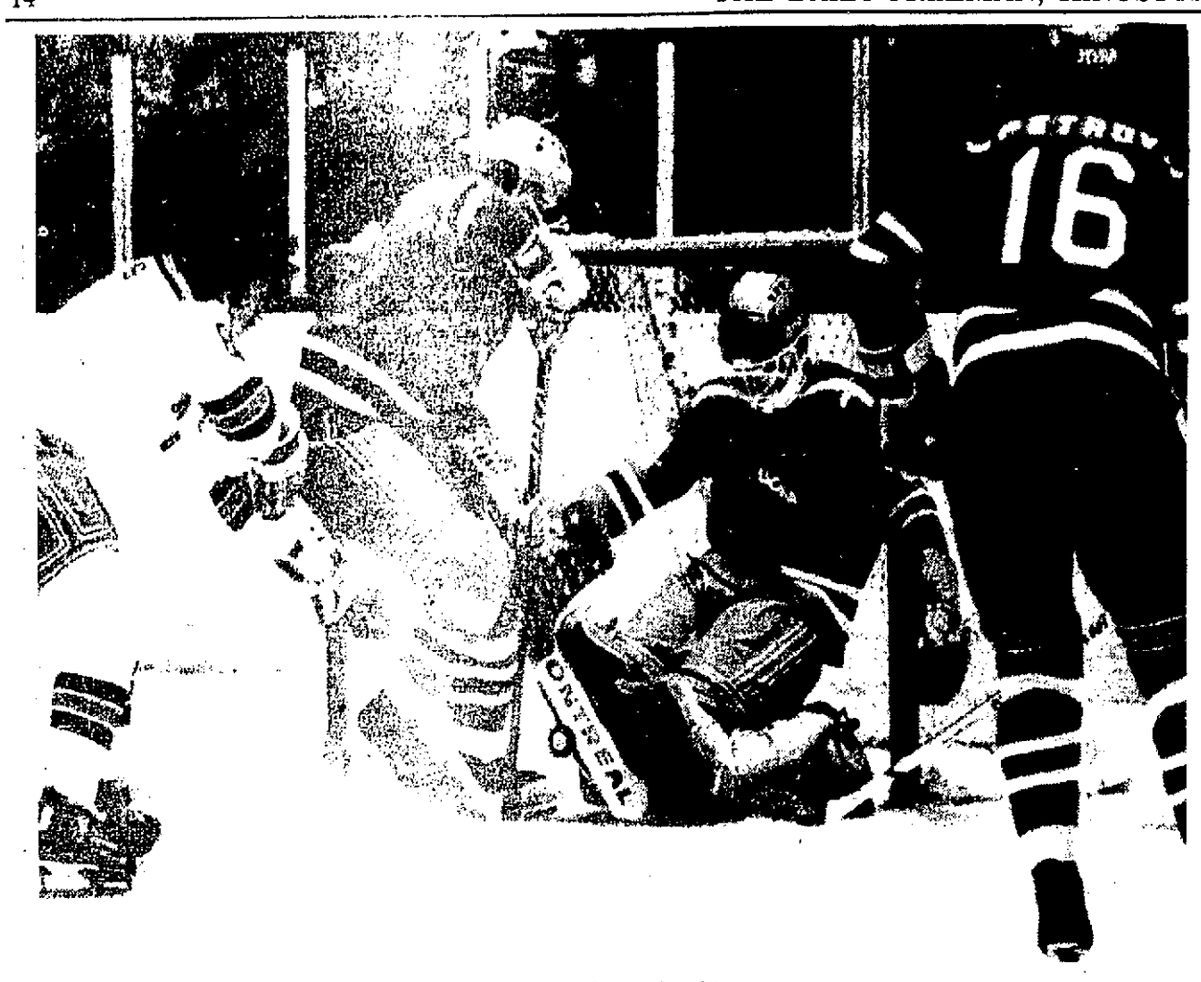

"It's really a heck of a way to lose a game. I would rather lose 20-0 than this way. We have to accept defeat but it was a bad call," Brown said.

Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who said he had a "clear view" of Pearson's catch, added, "the outcome of the game was in the hands of the officials. You can tell as well as I did that he interfered with Nate. Two officials were right there but they wouldn't call it. The whole game boils down to that one play."

Tarkenton said the Vikings "never did run the ball very well, but in playoff games it always seems the defenses take over. Daltas played their typical strong defensive game and they played it well.

"Our running game didn't start off very well and they put plenty of pressure on me. The only good drive we had all day was in the fourth quarter which led to our second touchdown. We finally made some plays on that drive."

Vikings' running back Chuck Foreman gave credit to the Dallas defense, but said the result "was the most shocking thing that has happened to me since I started playing. The official just blew the call on Nate. I know people make mistakes and all but nothing as obvious as this."

Stopped at the Net

Rangers Got Hockey Lesson

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet Army hockey team came to the United States hoping to learn something in their games with National Hockey League teams. Sunday night, though, it was the New York Rangers who absorbed a lesson in how to play precision hockey.

"We didn't expect to win so easily. We anticipated facing a very strong type of hockey," said smiling Soviet Army coach Konstantin Loktev, speaking through an interpreter after the Army team thrashed the Rangers, 7-3. Our principle is to learn something everywhere we play. Victory is just a matter of fact—though we're very willing to win."

"Let's face it, they were ready for us or they wouldn't have come here," said Rangers coach Ron Stewart. "If their players don't move, they don't get the puck. They never give the puck to the man standing still. They move the puck better than we do."

The Rangers took command in the opening moments, aggressively controlling the puck. Steve Vickers netted a backhander past Army goaltender Vladislav Tretiak only 21 seconds into the contest.

But it didn't take the Russians long to retaliate. With Doug Jarrett off for hooking, Boris Alexandrov shot Vladimir Petrov's rebound past the Ranger netminder [illegible] at 4:04 of the first period and, 1:15 later, Vladimir Vikulov scored from point-blank range.

By the end of the first period, the Russians had a 3-1 lead, adding a goal by Valeir Kharlamov, and extended the margin to 7-1 early in the third period after Petrov's second goal. Late tallies by Rod Gilbert and Phil Esposito, who assisted on New York's first two goals and took 10 shots altogether, made the score more respectable.

"They're very mobile," said Gilbert. "We couldn't forecheck them. But every team which sees the film of this game can benefit from our mistakes, especially how to defend against the long pass."

"We were not ready for this game, not at all," said Esposito. "I don't think they dominated us. They were shooting out blind from their zone and we were getting caught."

"The Rangers looked very heavy (sluggish)," Loktev said. "If they'd waited, instead of going in with just one or two forwards, they'd have improved more. The type of hockey the Rangers played was more individualistic; we had five men playing together. My opinion is Team Canada (which edged the Russians 4-3-1 in 1972's series) was stronger."

Asked what it would take to beat the Russians, Loktev smilingly responded, "You must be Russian to beat us."

"I reserve my comment until they play some of the better teams," Vickers responded candidly. "I don't think even if we played our best game we would have beaten them".

NHL President Clarence Campbell, who before the series began described it as "the most important and meaningful series in international hockey," downplayed the result as only a victory over a mediocre NHL club.

"It was tough the series opened with the team least likely to win playing their strongest team," Campbell said of the Rangers, who went into the game with 34 points, a total higher than only eight of the 17 other NHL clubs.

"That's the luck of the draw. I'm not embarrassed for the NHL. If we beat their fifth, sixth, seventh or eighth place team I wouldn't take any credit. I have to see them play more rugged teams. They're playing three more, you know."

The Army team next plays at Montreal on Wednesday, followed by games at Boston on Jan. 8 and the finale of the eight-game series in Philadelphia on Jan. 11 against the Stanley Cup champion Flyers. The Soviet Wings, runnersup to the Army team in the USSR national championships, opens its series tonight in Pittsburgh. They then visit Buffalo next Sunday, Chicago on Jan. 7 and the New York Islanders Jan. 10.

Gator Bowl Tonight

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Keep an eye on Florida's No. 35 in tonight's Gator Bowl game. That's what the Maryland defense is going to be doing.

No. 35 for Florida is Jimmy DuBose, a 215-pound senior fullback who rushed for 1,307 yards this fall, just five yards shy of the Southeastern Conference record, ripping off 204 yards against Florida State and topping the 100-yard mark in five other games.

"Jimmy DuBose is the picture perfect fullback," said Florida Coach Doug Dickey. He has the power to run over people and, when he gets into the open field, he runs like a halfback."

DuBose is the main reason the 14th-ranked Gators are favored over the 19th-ranked Maryland Terrapins in tonight's nationally televised Gator Bowl game (ABC, 9 p.m. EST).

Georgia, which plays Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day, held DuBose to less than 100 yards and upset Florida, 10-7, in the Gator Bowl Stadium in early November.

"That's just how we figured it," Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said after that game. "To beat Florida, you've got to at least partially neutralize Jimmy DuBose."

With DuBose setting the pace, Florida led the Southeastern Conference in total offense this past fall, averaging 405 yards per game while posting a 9-2 mark — the first time the Gators won nine games in regular season play. DuBose averaged nearly seven yards a carry.

However, if Maryland devotes too much time to DuBose, Gator speedster Tony Green (No. 20) could come back to haunt them. Green, a sophomore who took a back seat to DuBose this season, rushed for 475 yards in 1974 when Florida beat Maryland, 17-10, at Tampa, Fla.

"I don't think they'll be looking for me this year," said Green. "Why should they? I haven't had the sort of season I had last year. They'll be watching for DuBose inside. I'd be very surprised if they are worried about me and, although I've only been a step away several times, I'd be surprised if I had a good night against them again."

Florida isn't favored by much tonight. Maryland (8-2-1) has a pretty good offense of its own. The Terrapins don't have a Jimmy DuBose, but they averaged 375 yards a game enroute to their best season in 20 years.

Tailbacks Jimmy Franklin (No. 44), Rick Jennings (25) and Steve Atkins (38) each has averaged better than five yards a carry and fullback Tim Wilson (14) has done almost as well.

Also, the Florida defense, which already had lost two linebackers, may have lost two starting defensive linemen last week. Tackle Darrell Carpenter sprained a knee in practice and end Joe Allen sprained an ankle when he slipped on a stair at the motel where the team stayed before the game.

PBA Opens 1976 Tour

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — The Professional Bowlers Association kicks off its 1976 winter tour today as qualifying begins in the $75,000 Open at Bowling Square.

Earl Anthony, the crew-cut veteran from Tacoma, Wash., won [illegible] and seven tournaments [illegible] single-year records on the pro bowling trail in 1975 and he's the defending champion here. He was the first man crack the $100,000 barrier.

His main competition figures to come from Larry Laub of San Francisco, who won at Arcadia in 1974; Roy Buckley of Columbus, Ohio, who was the PBA's hottest bowler in the fall, and Marshall Holman of Medford, Ore., who captured the Hawaiian Invitational two weeks ago.

Another qualifying session is scheduled Tuesday with the top 24 scorers moving into the finals. The bowlers will have New Year's Eve off and compete Thursday and Friday before a cut to the final five players.

They'll meet Saturday for the title on national television (ABC).

SAUGERTIES

Annaliese Kime, a consistent leader in the Sawyer Women's Bowling League, rolled her second 600 series of the season and nailed down her second position on the Top Ten list.

Kime hit 227 and 213 this time and decked a 605, the tenth best women's series of the season. Her previous 619 ranks fourth on the list.

There have now been a dozen 600 triples recorded by area women bowlers. Joan Jameson's 645 tops the pack. Sis Balash, with 615 and 603, is the only other bowler to roll a pair.

Maryann Maines was the Sawyer Women's runnerup with a 474 set. She was followed by Judy Plock at 451, Dot Peters with 448 and Debby Van Wart with 443.

Flyers Suffer Through Poor One

(United Press International)

Although the New York Rangers suffered a thrashing from the Soviet Army Sunday night, the National Hockey League may have been spared further embarrassment by the luck of the schedule.

Instead of leading off an eight-game Russian invasion by matching the two national champions, the schedule makers saved that showcase event for the finale. It proved a fortunate move since the Soviet Army was highly impressive in opening its North American exhibition tour with a 7-3 rout over the Rangers, while the Philadelphia Flyers suffered through one of their poorer efforts in dropping a 4-2 decision to the Boston Bruins.

It was only the fifth loss in 35 games for Philadelphia.

The Stanley Cup champion Flyers, whose coach Fred Shero is the leading NHL exponent of the Soviet style of hockey, will host the Russian champion Soviet Army on Jan. 11. Boston also will get a crack at the Army team on Jan. 8.

There were three other NHL games played Sunday night with Vancouver edging Detroit, 3-2; Kansas City beating California, 3-1, and Buffalo skating to a 2-2 tie against Chicago.

In the World Hockey Association, Calgary beat Winnipeg, 6-4; San Diego beat Minnesota, 2-1; Phoenix beat Denver, 5-3; Cincinnati beat Indianapolis, 4-1; New England beat Cleveland, 4-0, and Quebec beat Toronto, 6-1.

Bruins 4, Flyers 2

Soviet Wings 7, Rangers 3

Vladimir Petrov and Vladimir Vikulov, both veterans of the Russian team that played against Team Canada in 1972, each scored two goals to lead the Soviet attack. Phil Esposito, one of two Rangers to play on Team Canada, had a hand in all of the New York scoring with a goal and two assists.

WHA

Danny Lawson scored two goals in the opening minute of play to start Calgary on its way over Winnipeg; Gary Bredin and Ray Adduono scored 2:25 apart in the second period to provide San Diego with both its goals against Minnesota; Phoenix handed Denver its fourth consecutive loss behind a pair of goals from Del Hall; Cincinnati scored two goals in each of the first two periods to beat Indianapolis and snap a three-game losing streak; Tom Webster had a goal and two assists and Christer Abrahamsson registered his second shutout when New England beat Cleveland; and Quebec coasted over Toronto with Marc Tardif notching his 33rd and 34th goals of the season as well as his 38th assist.

Two on One, Successfully

Boston Bruins' goalie Gil Gilbert (1) and Gary Doak (25) successfully protect the goal from Philadelphia Flyers' Dave Schultz (8) in NHL action at the Spectrum Sunday. (UPI)

Canucks 3, Red Wings 2

Vancouver raced to a 3-0 lead in the second period on goals by Garry Monahan, Don Lever and Bobby Lalonde, and then withstood a third period rally by Detroit. Nick Libett and Dan Maloney scored for the Red Wings, but they couldn't get the equalizer.

Scouts 3, Golden Seals 1

Guy Charron and Wilf Paiement each had a goal and two assists to lift Kansas City over California. Scouts' goaltender Dennis Herron was credited with 42 saves, allowing only one shot by Dave Gardner to get by him.

Sabres 2, Black Hawks 2

Stan Mikita scored on a power play with 1:48 left to play to lift Chicago into a tie. It was Mikita's second goal in 1:08 left to play and Bobby Schmautz followed with his second goal of the night into an empty net. "They took us a little lightly because of the 8-1 game they had here against us earlier this season," Bruins' Coach Don Cherry said of Philadelphia. "Maybe they were a little overconfident. But you've got to admit we played top notch hockey."

UCLA: No Problems

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The UCLA football team, having straightened out its problems with Coach Dick Vermeil, has developed a "desire to win" attitude as kickoff time draws nears for its Rose Bowl football game with No. 1 ranked Ohio State New Years Day.

Bruins' quarterback John Sciarra and noseguard Cliff Frazier said Sunday that the team's attitude has changed in the past week from one of carefree indifference to all-out dedication to beating the Buckeyes.

The two players admitted that immediately after the Bruins 25-22 triumph over Southern California in the season finale, the Bruins had looked forward to a period of fun and parties.

Sciarra, who was chairman of UCGA's unique players' executive committee, said the players had protested the tough workouts that Coach Vermeil had programmed because, "We thought preparing for the Rose Bowl game would be fun. We had heard that the 1972 USC team only had six workouts when it ripped Ohio State apart in the Rose Bowl.

"But that Trojan team was one of the greatest in collegiate history, which we are not."

Dave Price, Pacific-8 Conference public information director, recalled that USC had 10 to 12 workouts, not six, that year.

"I now think we were a little childish," said Sciarra. "I look back now and see the coach was right. We are well prjpared for the Rose Bowl game now." But, Sciarra said the attitude has changed in the past week.

Pointing to his Rose Bowl wristwatch which was given to him a few days ago, Sciarra said, "When I look at this watch in the future I would much rather have it remind me of a victory instead of a defeat."

Frazier said he felt that UCLA will be better prepared defensively for Ohio State since their regular season 41-20 loss to the Buckeyes.

"We don't plan to do anything different on defense in the Rose Bowl game than we did against them before," said Frazier. "We were making too many mistakes in the first game. We players weren't fulfilling our assignments properly.

"I have confidence that we will do it this time."

Frazier said that quarterback Cornelius Greene and two-time Heisman Trophy winner tailback Archie Griffin had hurt UCLA most in their first meeting.

Greene had an offense total of 218 yards, 120 rushing and 98 passing and Griffin 160 rushing in 21 carries, in that game.

Both Frazier and Sciarra said that running back Wendell Tyler, who has just had a cast removed from his left wrist, broken in the Stanford game, had a super workout Saturday.

"He has that great speed to be there for pitch out on the option play," Sciarra said. "When he turns a corner there's not too many who can catch him."

Both UCLA and Ohio State will hold workouts every day through Wednesday. However, they will begin to taper off the intensity of their drills Monday.

Olympic Team Scores a First

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The U.S. Olympic hockey team won the Walter A. Brown International Hockey Tournament here, the first time the U.S. has won in the 16-year history of the event, by beating Spartak of the USSR 6-5 Sunday.

Spartak, which includes on its roster some of the USSR national team, is Russia's best club team. The Soviets had leads of 3-0 and 5-4, but Gary Ness, of Bemidji St. (Minn.), scored the winning goal on a 40-foot slapshot with 34 seconds left in the game.

Dodgers Trade With Mexico

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers today announced they have made a two-for-two swap with Monterrey of the Mexican League, acquiring righthander Cesar Moreno and catcher Fernando Camargo.

The Dodgers gave up pitcher Ron Allen and catcher-outfielder Lee Robinson in the trade.

Moreno, 20, and the 19-year-old Camargo were assigned to the Dodgers' Albuquerque Pacific Coast League farm club.

Cavaliers Now Finest Show in Cleveland

By United Press International

More than 55,000 fans have jammed their way into the Coliseum to see the last three Cleveland Cavalier games, but Bobby Smith remembers when things were very quiet.

"We have really come a long way," said Smith, who spent most of Sunday's game on the bench nursing a sore knee as the Cavs whipped Buffalo 111-83 to make it nine victories in their last 10 games.

"I remember the 1,500 crowds and the many times all you could hear was the bouncing of the ball on the floor," said Smith, who is the only original member left from the expansion Cleveland team that started in the National Basketball Association back in 1970.

With Smith on the sidelines, Dick Snyder took over and the sharpshooting guard connected on 15 of 24 from the field in tossing in his season high of 36 points. Snyder now needs only 43 more points to hit the 10,000-point mark in his career.

Cleveland is 11-4 since Nate Thurmond was obtained from the Chicago Bulls and the big center calls the Cavs' potential "unlimited."

"We won seven straight, then lost a tough one to Atlanta Friday, but we bounced back to beat Washington Saturday and came home to knock off the Braves," said Thurmond. "That is the sign of a solid team."

Jim Chones chipped in with 23 points for the Cavs, while Bob McAdoo paced the Braves with 26 points.

In other NBA games Sunday, Milwaukee edged Phoenix, 88-85; Boston beat Los Angeles, 123-113; Detroit drubbed Kansas City, 103-87; Portland put away Golden State, 96-92, and Seattle outlasted Houston, 116-106.

Over in the ABA, Denver shaded Indiana, 110-105, and St. Louis downed Virginia, 102-97.

Bucks 88, Suns 85

Junior Bridgeman's jump shot with 3:48 to go gave the Bucks the lead for the first time since the opening seconds of play and they went on to hand Phoenix its fourth loss in the last five games. Jim Price led the Bucks with 20 points, while Bridgeman had 15 and Elmore Smith 17.

Celtics 123, Lakers 113

Dave Cowens scored 17 of his 23 points in the last 18 minutes as Boston won its 11th game in the last 12. John Havlicek also had 23 points for Boston and JoJo White contributed 22.

Pistons 103, Kings 87

Curtis Rowe poured in 29 points as the Pistons saddled Kansas City with its ninth straight loss. The Detroit victory was achieved mostly without the services of 6-11 center Bob Lanier, who was ejected from the game in the second quarter after grabbing referee Richie Powers and later spitting on the floor.

Sonics 116, Rockets 106

Freddie Brown scored 23 points, including eight late in the fourth quarter, to pace the Seattle victory over Houston. A three-point play by Joe Meriweather brought Seattle to within 99-95 with 4:04 to play and the Sonics, led by Brown's four buckets, outscored Houston 13-3 over the next three minutes.

Trail Blazers 96, Warriors 92

Guards Geoff Petrie and Lionel Hollins combined for 18 assists while Portland outscored the Warriors 10-2 during a five-minute span in the fourth quarter to put away the game. Petrie led all scorers with 24 points and Lloyd Neal added 19 points and 11 rebounds for Portland.

Spurs 110, Pacers 105

Dan Issel poured in 29 points and rookie David Thompson added 23 to lead the ABA-leading Nuggets to victory over Indiana. Veteran Ralph Simpson, with 18 points, clinched the game for Denver with a pair of free throws in the final two seconds.

Spirits 102, Squires 97

Ron Boone's 24 points led a balanced scoring attack Sunday night to help the Spirits hand the Squires a fifth straight loss. Marvin Barnes had 21 points for St. Louis, and Caldwell Jones and Freddie Lewis contributed 12 each. Virginia was led by Mel Bennett and Willie Wise with 23 points each.

Big Boys at Play

GM Upset

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — New York Islanders' general manager William Torrey said Sunday that he was upset over the cancellation of last Friday night's National Hockey League game in Detroit with the Red Wings and that his team was in no way responsible for the action.

The game was cancelled because of a severe snowstorm but Torrey said the Islanders had arrived in Detroit prior to the cancellation and were prepared to play the game.

"Contrary to published reports, at no point did the New York Islanders or anyone connected with the Islanders organization agree to cancel the Friday Dec. 26 contest with the Detroit Red Wings," Torrey said in a prepared statement.

High Score Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — In the first Ohio State-UCLA meeting in October, the teams ran up a whopping total of 61 points. The Buckeyes won that one in a breeze 41-20.

Dick Vermeil, the Bruins' young coach, anticipates another high-scoring game in the Rose Bowl rematch on New Year's Day.

"Both teams are going to score in the 20s," he predicted Sunday. "If we can score four touchdowns, I think it'll be a pretty tight ball game."

Nose guard Cliff Frazier told a Huntington-Sheraton Hotel news conference UCLA will be better prepared defensively for Ohio State this time.

"But we don't plan to do anything different on defense in the Rose Bowl game than we did against them before," he added. "We were making too many mistakes in the first game.

"We weren't fulfilling our assignments properly. I have confidence that we will do it this time."

Quarterback John Sciarra said the Bruin football team had changed its attitude this week. He earlier headed a unique players' committee that protested UCLA's tough Rose Bowl workouts to Vermeil.

"We thought preparing for the Rose Bowl game would be fun," he said. "We had heard that the 1972 University of Southern California team only had six workouts when it ripped Ohio State apart in the Rose Bowl.

"But that Trojan team was one of the greatest in collegiate history, which we are not.

"I now think we were a little childish. I look back now and see the coach was right. We are well prepared for the Rose Bowl game now."

Pointing to his Rose Bowl wrist watch, Sciarra said, "When I look at this watch in the future I would much rather have it remind me of a victory instead of a defeat."

Ohio State had a hard, two-hour workout Sunday and then was hosted at a dinner by the Big Ten Club where Bob Hope was master of ceremonies.

Bell to Vault

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Arkansas State's Earl Bell, who won the NCAA pole vault title at 18-1 in Provo, Utah, in June, will compete in the Sunkist Invitational track meet at the Sports Arena Jan 16.

Bell, a junior from Jonesboro, Ark., set a collegiate record in beating San Jose State's Dan Ripley at Provo.

Name Olympic Skaters

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (UPI) — Seven men and eight women, headed by record setters Peter Mueller and Leah Poulos, were named Sunday to the United States Olympic speed skating team.

The team was named after two weekends of competition and those selected departed immediately for a short stop in New York before going to Europe for pre-Olympic competition.

Two men and two women are repeaters from the team that represented the U.S. in the 1972 winter games in Japan. They are Dan Carroll and Charles Gilmore of Milwaukee, Poulos and Sheila Young of Detroit.

Also named to the 1976 team were Peggy Crowe, St. Louis; Beth Heiden and Lori Monk of Madison, Wis.; Kim Kostron, St. Paul; Cindy Seikkula, Minneapolis, and Nancy Swider, Park Ridge, Ill., to the women's team and Jim Chapin, St. Louis; Eric Heiden and Dan Immerfall of Madison and Mike Woods, South Milwaukee, to the men's team.

Poulos, Northbrook, Ill., who broke almost all track records in the shorter distances, could finish no better than sixth in the final event of the trials Sunday. The event, the 3,000 meters, was won by Swider in a record time of 5:01.05. She had set the old record of 5:05.05 last week.

Heiden was second, followed by Seikkula, Connie Carpenter, Madison, and Kostron.

In the final men's event, the 10,000 meters, Carroll was the winner, breaking his old record of 16:04 with a 16:03.94 clocking. Heiden was second, Woods third and Gilmore fourth. Gary Ross of Petoskey, Mich., finished fifth.

After two days in New York, where the team will be outfitted and will practice, the tea- will leave for Europe.

Giannino Race Winner

ROSENDALE — Frank Giannino beat icy roads and a field of 30 Sunday to capture the Onteora Runners Club's second annual Viking Road Race in a time of 27:25 for the five mile distance.

Giannino's Open Division triumph came over runnerup Joe Boyle of Poughkeepsie and third place Chris Chamuris. Giannino is a resident of Walden.

The poor conditions kept the turnout below last year's inaugural run, but four other participants beat the elements to win divisional titles. In the high school bracket, Al Schmidt of Pine Bush came in first in 27:52. Second was Matt Williams, and third was Bill Wilson of Kingston High.

In the time-estimation run, Spero Chumas of Arlington scored a victory with a 12 second differential. Bill Stahl of Kingston was next at :21, and Joe Keller, cross country coach at Coleman High, was third with a 1:25 mark.

Chuck Vandezande, also fo Arlington, captured the Masters Division in 32:03. He topped Bill Harris of Poughkeepsie by 1:24. Rich Impola of New Paltz placed third.

Kingston High's Eileen Casey was the lone female to attempt the distance. She clocked 35:29.

Well II Rallies to Win "B" Autumn Basketball

KINGSTON — Well II rallied from a 21-14 first half deficit to explode for a 26-point second quarter, take a 40-30 halftime lead and go on to trounce Giustino's Market 91-79 in the third and final game of the YMCA "B" Autumn Basketball League championship.

Well Wolfpack crushed Wrixon Cabinets, 118-55, for consolation honors.

Well II made it two straight over Giustino's in the playoffs and extended its unbeaten winning streak to 15 for the 1975 season.

Frank Samms set the pace for the champions with 27 points. Jim Adams added 24 and Tom Tegler 22. Gary Ostrander contributed 10.

Corey Schoonmaker of Giustino's took game honors with 32 points. Chris Nordstrom hit for 14 and Buzzy Banks for 10. Giustino's outscored the winners 31-30 in the fourth quarter when the game was well out of reach.

Well Wolfpack broke to a 28-14 quarter lead, then widened its margin to 54-25 at the half against Wrixon's.

The Jasanski brothers—John (29) and Eddie (26) combined for 55 points for the Wolfpack. Russ Wilbur added 20 and John Callahan (17) and Bernie Schaffer (18) shared 35 for the winners.

Three of the Wrixon's were in double figures, as Rich Bell led with 22 points and Craig Struble and Bill Wrixon added 10 each.

American Ketch Leads

HOBART, Australia, Dec. 29 (UPI) — The American Ketch Kialoa III took line honors and broke the record for the Sydney to Hobart blue water yachting classic Monday.

Kialoa III, based in Los Angeles and owned and skippered by Jim Kilroy, took two days, 14 hours and 36 minutes for the 630-mile race, breaking the record set by the Sydney yacht Helsal in 1973 by 10 hours 55 minutes.

Kialoa is not necessarily the outright winner of the race, which is run to a complicated hanicap formula taking into account vital measurements of each entrant. The yacht leading on handicap will not be known until later Monday.

Following Kialoa across the line was another American yacht, Windward Passage, 23 minutes astern. Ballyhoo, a Sydney sloop, was third.

The two American yachts, both more than 70 feet in length, staged an exciting duel as they neared the finish blowing out spinnakers in the fresh northeasterly winds.

Another Golden Page for St. John's

Driving for Two

Frank Alagia (10) of St. John's drives around Jack Gillooon (32) of South Carolina for a basket during their semifinal in the Holiday Festival Saturday night. Alagia, a 5-9 guard for the Redmen, sank seven critical free throws to help defeat the Gamecocks, 71-59. (UPI)

United Press International

St. John's will attempt Monday night to turn another golden page in its basketball history.

One of the most successful tournament teams the game has known, dating back to 1938, currently 17th-ranked St. John's faces first-ranked Indiana in the finals of the Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden.

Indiana is a solid favorite, of course, but over the years St. John's has made a habit of upsetting higher-ranked teams and winning tournaments. The Redmen have won a record four National Invitation Tournaments, three Holiday Festivals and several others in different parts of the country, including the Brigham Young Classic this season.

"It isn't winning that counts so much," says St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca. "It's getting a whack at the top-ranked teams that counts."

St. John's and Indiana advanced to the finals of the Holiday Festival Saturday when the Redmen defeated South Carolina, 71-59, and the Hoosiers beat Manhattan, 97-61.

Ninth-ranked Cincinnati, 10th-ranked Louisville, 12th-ranked North Carolina State and No. 16 San Francisco were the only other teams in the top 10 which saw action Saturday.

Cincinnati lost to Arizona, 71-64, in the first round of the Rainbow Classic, while Louisville downed Texas A&M, 102-88, to win its own Holiday Classic.

N.C. State kept its poise and pulled out a 79-74 victory over Auburn, with Kenny Carr's 23 points leading the Wolfpack to its seventh straight victory of the season.

Jim Williamson scored 20 points to lead Rhode Island to a 85-77 upset victory over San Francisco, the Dons' second loss of the season, in the title game of the Ocean State Classic.

On Sunday, 14th-ranked Tennessee defeated Pennsylvania, 77-70, with Ernie Grunfield scoring 36 points in the first round of the Sugar Bowl tournament.

In other big tournament games Monday night, No. 13 Washington plays Northwestern in the semifinals of the Far West Classic, while No. 19 Kansas State faces Missouri and Colorado plays Kansas in the semifinals of the Big Eight Tournament.

Frank Alagia, a 5-foot, 9-inch guard, made seven critical free throws in the final minutes of play and helped thwart South Carolina's pressure defense with his ball-handling as St. John's scored its ninth straight victory of the season.

All-America forward Scott May scored 32 points and Kent Benson, the Hoosiers' 6-foot, 11-inch center, added 19 in leading Indiana to its eighth consecutive win.

Guard Jim Rappis, who scored 24 points in the game, tallied two layups in the final minute and a half to break open what had been a tight game between Arizona and Cincinnati. The lead had changed hands 10 times in 10½ minutes of the second half before Arizona broke open the game.

Phil Bonds had 23 points and eight assists as Louisville ran up 100 points for the second straight game and easily downed Texas A&M. Louisville also got 19 points from Wesley Cox and 16 from Rick Wilson.

In other games Saturday, North Carolina State downed Auburn, 79-74; Washington beat Florida State, 69-54; Minnesota defeated Creighton, 80-74, in the finals of the Pillsbury Classic; Wake Forest topped Florida, 78-75, to win the Gator Bowl Classic; Louisiana State nipped Stanford, 89-85; Detroit toped DePaul, 74-64, winning the Motor City Classic, and Duke outscored Western Kentucky, 111-90.

Longden Won't Slow Down

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Johnny Longden, thoroughbred racing's fabled "Mr. Moneybags," will celebrate his 70th birthday in two months but he doesn't have any plans to slow down.

Despite being a millionaire a couple of times over, the English-born former riding great refuses to leave thoroughbred racing. Instead, he's ready to begin his second decade as a trainer.

"Why should I retire?" he shrugged. "I just love what I'm doing. I don't know what else I'd do if I wasn't doing this. This is a fascinating life.

"People ask me what motivates me. Well, I have a lot of goals left. I want to win every race I enter. I'd like to win the Kentucky Derby again. It's just a matter of getting the right horse."

Along with his wife and two sons, Vance, 45, and Eric, 32, Longden trains 45 thoroughbreds and makes the rounds of the California thoroughbred circuit — Santa Anita, Hollywood Park, Del Mar, Bay Meadows and Golden Gate Fields.

"John definitely would have missed riding if he hadn't stayed in the sport as a trainer," Hazel Longden declared. "But he doesn't have time to miss it now. He's up on horses every morning."

By nature, Johnny Longden is a taciturn man. In contrast, Vance Longden is outgoing.

"If you've known my dad for five years, he'll say hello," Vance explained. "He's not one to speak much. He doesn't like interviews and he rarely accepts speaking engagements. I'd say he averages one speaking engagement every three years.

"But that's deceptive, though. When he does get up and talk to a group, he's hysterical. He's a real comedian."

On April 4, Santa Anita will pay a special tribute to Longden, who will be 70 on Feb. 14. That's the date of the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano, a race Longden won in his final ride March 12, 1966, aboard George Royal.

Longden won his first race at Salt Lake City in 1927. In his remarkable 40-year career before he retired at 59, he had 32,408 mounts and piloted 6,032 winners, including 452 stakes triumphs and 25 $100,000 races. The horses he rode earned a staggering $42,665,800.

In 1943, Longden and Count Fleet ran off with the final jewel of turfdom's fabled Triple Crown by capturing the Belmont Stakes by 25 lengths. Count Fleet earlier scored victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

"They say Count Fleet never beat much but I know myself he could beat any horse I've ever seen," Longden said. "Count Fleet had all the stamina in the world. He could run two miles."

Longden scored his greatest triumph as a trainer in the 1969 Kentucky Derby. Majestic Prince, owned by Frank McMahon and piloted by Bill Hartack, beat Arts and Letters by a neck in one of the most dramatic Derbies in history.

One day after he announced his retirement as a jockey, Longden went to work for McMahon. The two since have gone their separate ways.

Longden and his wife split their time between their home here and their 40-acre ranch near Fresno, Calif. They currently have 45 thoroughbreds.

"Dad doesn't just love horses," Vance pointed out. "He loves all animals.

Gordon Family Spirit

Taking advantage of the area's latest heavy snowfall, the Ted Gordon family of Detroit demonstrated its University of Michigan football spirit by building a huge snowman with upraised arms signifying a Wolverine touchdown. Five members of the family have graduated from or currently attend the school. Michigan meets Oklahoma in this year's Orange Bowl. (UPI)

Mike Success Wins Feature

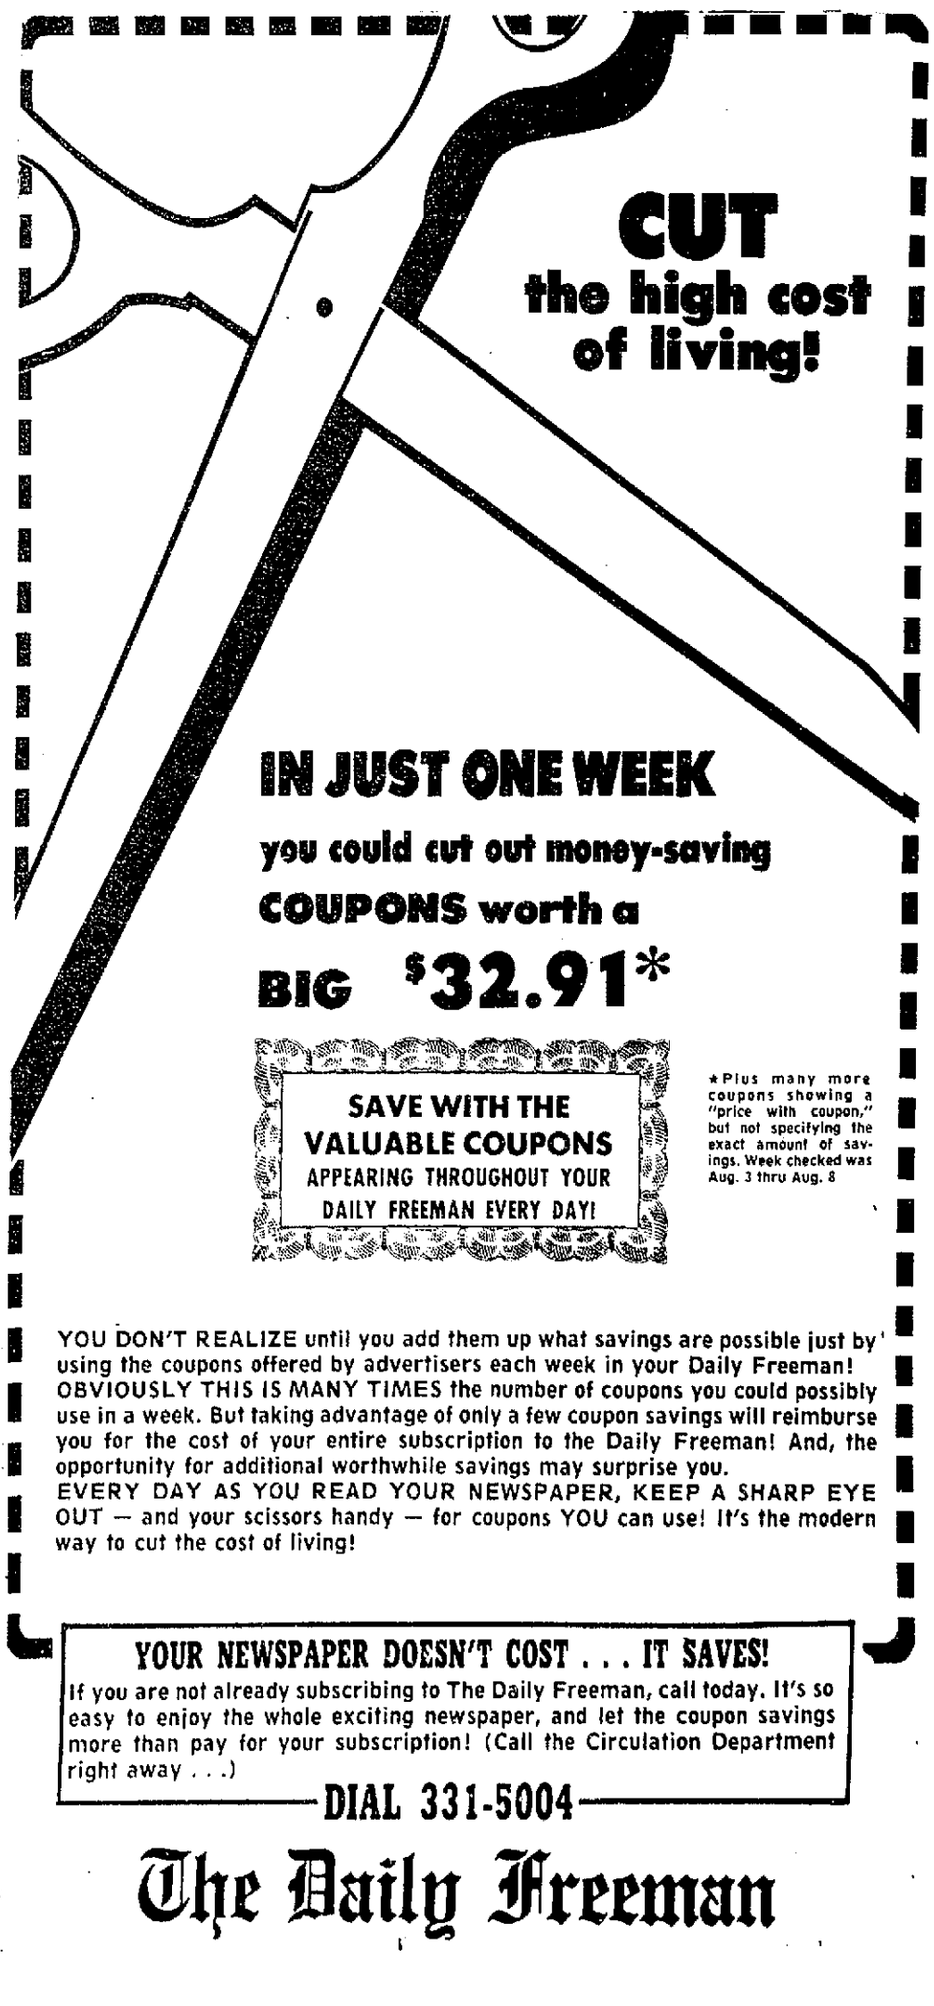

MONTICELLO

Parked out almost the entire mile, Mike Success held on to a half-length lead he gained in the final eighth to take Monticello Raceway's $4,200 pacing handicap feature Sunday afternoon in 2:05 1/5. He held off a late charge by Toby M and Trotwood Bud to pay $5.80, $4.80, $4.00.

Del Biccum drove Mike Success to his eighth win of the year.

The 4-3 daily double paid $35.60. Herve Filion drove Spring Dancer to a $3.80 triumph in the first and Ed Lohmeyer Jr., reined Golden Dreamer, $11.00, in the second.

On a point system over the first three races, Hall of Fame Day at the Mighty M, the the winner was Jim Allen with 19, Lohmeyer had 18, and trailing them were Filion, Stanley Dancer, Del Miller, Cat Manzi, John Gilmour and Marvin Maker.

The Daily Freeman

Who'd want to invest in a bunch of revolutionaries?

They didn't exactly look like winners.

But then our revolutionary army beat the British at Saratoga in 1777.

And people recognized Washington's men as an army, rather than a band of renegades.

So faith was won as well as a battle. And investments in our government's securities started picking up.

It took courage to take stock in America back then. But it paid off.

And it can do the same for you now.

Just join the Payroll Savings Plan, or buy U.S. Savings Bonds at your bank. There's no safer, easier way to build your savings.

So, buy the specially designed Bicentennial Series E Bonds.

Those brave revolutionaries would be proud.

Series E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4½% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

STONE RIDGE

Course For Agents At UCCC

Beginning Friday, Jan. 9, an intensified course of instruction preparing New York State property and casualty insurance agents for their state exams will be given by Ulster County Community College.

This announcement was made by Ronald A. Koster, associate dean of faculty for Continuing Education at the Stone Ridge campus.

The re-scheduling of this program, which previously trained Prudential Life Insurance agents for the New York State property and casualty agents' examination, will prepare agents for the exam coming up March 17, 1976.

In arranging the program, Robert H. Pawlowski, administrator of Field Training and Manpower Development at the Prudential Center in Boston, Mass., said he was especially proud of the record initiated on the Ulster Campus last spring. He pointed out that 84.63 per cent of the agents taking the course passed the state exam. The passing average in other New York State training locations is reported to be only 70.75 per cent.

This special offering of Business 231-232, Fundamentals of Insurance I & II, is also open to the general public. The program will conclude March 13, 1976. Friday night meetings will be conducted from 6-9 p.m. and Saturday sessions from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1-4 p.m.

The course will also offer six-credit hours toward an Associate Degree.

Dale Evens Is Unabashed Christian and Patroit

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dale Evans, "Queen of the Westerns" in the 40s and 50s, has written a new book, "Let Freedom Ring," for the Bicentennial year.

Dale, who is Mrs. Roy Rogers, is an unabashed Christian and patriot.

In "Let Freedom Ring" she combines both, flinging aside the tenet of separation of church and state. Dale finds the two inseparable.

"Our government was lifted out of the Old Testament," she said. "The men who wrote our Constitution believed in God and the Bible.

"This book has been in my heart for 28 years, since I started to study the Bible. When I came to the scripture about God giving the laws to Moses, I realized our government was taken from the Bible.

"My book is based on the four freedoms.

"This book has been in my heart for 28 years. Freedom begins with freedom of the spirit, not materialism."

The book is Dale's 14th. Most are inspirational volumes with strong religious and patriotic themes.

Her first was "Angel Unaware," which dealt with the true story of the Rogers' Mongoloid daughter Robin, who died at the age of 2.

"It was a taboo subject at the time," Dale said. "But I wanted to acquaint the public with the problems and needs of these children. It was a best seller.

"My autobiography, 'The Woman at the Well,' also did very well when it was published four years ago.

"I've been criticized for being a flag-waver and accused of preaching. So has Roy. But my publishers asked me to write a Bicentennial book on God and country and that's what I've done."

Dale is more matronly than in the days when she rode the range with Roy in movies and in 101 episodes of the Rogers' television series.

Her hair is gray and she has 15 grandchildren and a great-grandchild. Dale, 63, has a serene smile and the fervor of an evangalist.

"I was very mixed up and dissatisfied with life 28 years ago," she said. "Everything seemed to be at a dead end until I found religion.

"Now I travel a great deal for church crusades, meetings and rallies

On Their Way to China

David and Julie Eisenhower file a boarding card with the Iran Airlines at the Tokyo International Airport in Tokyo Sunday. The couple is going to fly to Peking to visit to China at the invitation of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai. (UPI)

Hoover Didn't Trust the Dr.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dr. Robert J. Oppenheimer, director of the laboratory where the first atomic bomb was made, was barred from security secrets in 1953 because FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover did not trust him, a former government attorney says.

Harold P. Green, now a law professor at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., also said the FBI bugged conversations between Oppenheimer and his lawyers during an investigation into allegations Oppenheimer was a Soviet agent.

"I think Hoover thought Oppenheimer wasn't the kind of guy who ought to be trusted," said Green in an interview Sunday.

Green, then working for the Atomic Energy Commission, drafted the formal charges against Oppenheimer, director of the Los Alamos, N. M. secret laboratory where the atomic bomb was designed during World War II.

The case against Oppenheimer was begun after President Dwight D. Eisenhower barred him from U. S. nuclear secrets Dec. 3, 1953, and directed his ordered his security clearance be suspended until an investigation into the accusations was conducted.

After a hearing, the Personnel Security Board voted 2-1 that Oppenheimer's security clearance be permanently suspended and the AEC upheld that decision by a 4-1 vote in June 1954.

Oppenheimer's security clearance was never restored but the physicist was awarded the Enrico Fermi Medal in 1963 for his contributions to the nuclear energy program by President Lyndon Johnson. Oppenheimer died of throat cancer in 1967.

Green, in Atlanta to speak on a panel before the American Historical Association, said the case against Oppenheimer resulted from a pledge by former AEC Chairman Lewis Strauss to Hoover to remove people in the AEC program that the FBI director disliked.

"I believe that when Strauss became chairman he made a promise to Hoover that he was going to get rid of people in the atomic energy program who were bones in Hoover's throat," said Green.

Dallas Doesn't Want Them

DALLAS (UPI) — Outofwork New York City police officers can forget about looking for jobs in Dallas. Police administrators here don't want them.

"There already is a public relations problem when an officer issues someone a speeding ticket," said Don Cleveland, assistant city manager. "It wouldn't help matters for the officer to have one of those sharp Eastern accents."

One Dallas police administrator added, "I've heard too much about the 'fringe benefits' New York City cops get from the people on their beat. I believe the Dallas Police Department can do fine without that type of attitude."

And one city official said there was no need to hire a police union member from New York who might offer free advice to Dallas officers whose Dallas Police Association is pressing for collective bargaining rights.

Cleveland said the police department is 80 officers below full strength and police said they have received a number of job inquiries from former New York City officers.

But Dallas has decided not to hire any of the thousands of officers laid off during New York City's financial crisis.

Officials said publicly the decision was made because of the feeling that the officers would return to New York as soon as possible. But individual administrators said Dallas just doesn't want New York City's type of police.

Bob Shaw, head of the police information office, said Dallas police officials were certain New York officers hired locally would return home if the financial situation eased in the nation's most populous city.

"We're sure they would go back to New York at the first opportunity," Shaw said.

Cleveland said it has long been police department policy to try to employ officers with local backgrounds.

"We will hire more police officers, but we are not out actively recruiting them," he said.

Recovery of Bodies A Dangerous Job

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (UPI) — Authorities say it will be a difficult and dangerous job to recover the bodies of nine persons killed in a plane crash on a remote, boulder-strewn mountainside in the northern Colorado Rockies.

Two rescue workers leaped from a helicopter Sunday to reach the wreckage of the chartered plane on an 11,800foot mountain and confirmed there were no survivors.

Another Colorado plane crash Sunday killed four persons. Twelve of the 13 victims of the two crashes were Californians.

Rescue workers planned to try to recover the bodies today.

"The plane is in a very rugged area and it is going to be a very hazardous operation to get them out of there," said Gilpin County Sheriff Dick Conn. "The closest a helicopter can land is 500 to 600 yards away and from there to the crash scene is up and down cliffs."

The plane, piloted by Lee Hollingsworth of the Denver-based Star Aviation Co., had been missing since Friday on a flight from Denver's Stapleton International Airport to Granby, Colo.

The passengers included Stuart Nelson, 42, president of a men's clothing business in Beverly Hills, Calif.; his wife, Myrna, 36; their two children, Tiffany, 5 and Sebrina, 2; Mrs. Nelson's mother; Bobby Ross, 60; and Gary Nuhivrian, 28, all from the Los Angeles area.

Also killed were Bob Peterson, 10, and his brother, Richie, 9, sons of Marjorie and Robert Peterson who took another plane to Granby Friday. Peterson is president of the Peterson Publishing Company of Los Angeles.

The group apparently was en route to Granby for the opening of a new resort operated by Mrs. Nelson's brother, Leonard Ross.

Conn said the wing and tail section of the chartered plane broke off on impact but there was no fire.

"The crash caused an avalanche and part of the plane was covered by snow," Conn said. "There aren't any trees around. It's above timberline with nothing but large boulders ranging in size from desks to houses."

The other plane crash occured in southern Colorado.

Officials said the victims were the mother, father and brother of Pagosa Springs dentist Dr. Randall Davis, and the brother's girlfriend. The victims' names and their hometown in California was not released. Their twin-engine plane apparently lost an engine and crashed four miles west of Pagosa Springs airport.

Blast Probe Continues

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) — A cause may be pinpointed today for an explosion which destroyed a well-known Schenectady restaurant.

The Friday blast at the Nicholaus Restaurant injured one passer-by and firemen, who spent much of the weekend going over the rubble, said they might have the origin determined by today.

Police and fire investigators spent much of Saturday trying to track down what may have set off the explosion.

Witnesses at the scene said they believed they smelled gas just after the blast, but fire officials today would not rule out the possibility of arson.

Also studying the explosion's cause were investigators for the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., whose gas lines service the area.

Police and fire officials said the blast tore up the sidewalk adjacent to the unoccupied restaurant and threw chunks of cement as far as 70 feet into the show windows of a nearby clothing store.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF KINGSTON, IN THE COUNTY OF ULSTER, NEW YORK (by the favorable vote of not less than two-thirds of all the members of said Council) AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. That the Bond and Capital Note Ordinance passed by this Body on the 10th day of November, 1975, and approved by the Mayor of the City of Kingston on the 12th day of November, 1975, be and hereby is amended and superseded hereby and that any and all revenues derived pursuant to the original such Bond and Capital Note Ordinance be and hereby are ratified, approved and confirmed, nunc pro tunc.

SECTION 2. The City of Kingston, in the County of Ulster, State of New York, is hereby authorized to refund General Real Estate Taxes paid by Strelene Realty Corporation for the year 1973, in the sum of $180,530.72 for the year 1974, in the amount of $199,881.01, and in the year 1975 in the amount of $198,052.09, inclusive of legal interest thereon, making in all a total of $580,463.82, and to refund General Real Estate Taxes paid by Kingston Plaza, Inc., for the year 1975, in the amount of $37,387.87, inclusive of legal interest thereon, and making in all a grand total of $617,851.69, the downpayment of which total sum shall be provided by a capital note or notes in the total sum of $30,851.69, as required by law, and the further sum of $587,000.00 in serial bonds to finance the balance thereof and the levy of a tax upon all of the taxable real property in said City to pay the principal of said bonds and interest thereon.

SECTION 3. Pursuant to the provisions of the Local Finance Law, constituting Chapter 33-a of the Consolidated Laws of the State of New York, serial bonds in the principal amount of $587,000.00 of the City of Kingston are hereby authorized to be issued to finance a portion of the cost of said items of such specific object or purpose.

SECTION 4. The following additional matters are hereby determined and stated

(a) The period of probable usefulness of each item of said specific object or purpose for which the bonds authorized by this ordinance are to be issued within the limitations of Section 11.00, subdivision 33 (b), of said Local Finance Law is ten (10) years, the said sum so appropriated being in excess of 1% of the average assessed valuation of the City of Kingston, and said judgments, awards, compromises and settlements being payable in a single fiscal year.

(b) Current funds are required by said law to be provided as a downpayment prior to the issuance of the bonds herein authorized or of any notes in anticipation of the sale of said bonds and such current funds are hereby provided to be appropriated through the issuance of a capital note or notes of the City of Kingston in the amount of $30,851.69. The City Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to cause the issuance of a capital note or notes in said total sum, as the downpayment for the uses and purposes above mentioned and to apply same to the said specific object or purpose described in Section 1 hereof.

SECTION 5. Each of the bonds authorized by this Ordinance and any bond anticipation notes issued in anticipation of the sale of such bonds shall contain the recital of validity prescribed by Section 52.00 of said Law and said bonds and any notes issued in anticipation of said bonds shall be general obligations of the City and the City hereby irrevocably pledges its faith and credit to the punctual payment of the principal thereof and the interest thereon and there shall be raised annually by tax on all the taxable real property in the City a sum sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on said bonds as the same shall become due and payable.

SECTION 6. Subject to the provisions of this Ordinance and of said Local Finance Law and pursuant to the provisions of Section 30.00 relative to the authorization of the issuance of bond anticipation notes and of Section 50.00 and Section 56.00 to 60.00 of said Law, the powers and duties of the Common Council relative to prescribing the terms, form and contents and as to the sale and issuance of the bonds are hereby delegated to the City Treasurer, chief fiscal officer of the City.

SECTION 7. It is further stated that the validity of the bonds authorized by this ordinance, and of any notes issued in anticipation of said bonds, may be contested only if

(a) Such obligations are authorized for an object or purpose for which the City is not authorized to expend money, or

(b) the provisions of law which should be complied with at the date of the publication of such ordinance, are not substantially complied with, and an action, suit or proceeding contesting such validity, is commenced within twenty days after the date of such publication

(c) such obligations are authorized in violation of the provisions of the constitution

SECTION 8. That the original such ordinance, passed and approved aforesaid, being superseded hereby, is repealed

SECTION 9. This Ordinance, which takes effect immediately, shall be published in full after approval by the Mayor in the official newspaper of the City together with a notice substantially the form as prescribed by Section 81.00 of the Local Finance Law

IN KINGSTON AMERLING VOLKSWAGEN

. . . . . Proudly announces the addition of Richard Mensch to their staff. Mr. Mensch assumes the position of Service Shop Foreman.

Richie comes to us with 16 years of Volkswagen service experience. Trained in Germany, he has reached the highest level of recognition in his field from World-Wide Volkswagen, the New York Distributor for VW. His unblemished track record and years of dedication to VW Service and technology prove to be a tremendous asset to our Service Department.

We have made this addition to our facility to further insure that our customers receive nothing less than the best service possible for their hard earned dollars, and to insure customer satisfaction both before and most importantly after they purchase one of our fine automobiles. Won't you stop in and join us in extending a welcoming hand to Richie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're capable of handling a broad range of interests today Don't limit yourself to little things Be up and doing

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others are more likely to treat you in a favorable manner today if they see you're also concerned about giving them a fair shake

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although you may be tempted to act impulsively today, weigh patiently both sides of important issues before taking step 1

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extra-alert today where your work or career is concerned Something advantageous might develop suddenly

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to feel in a rather expansive mood today Why not get together with fun-loving friends who feel likewise?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You should be quite adept today at stretching the family budget and juggling resources Put your common sense to work

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your strong suit today is in creative or mental areas Jot your bright ideas down even if you can't use them today, they can be tried later

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Most of your attention today will be centered upon your material interests Gains are likely if you use your best judgment

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be happiest today being around people who share similar interests Mix with those you can learn from and have laughs with

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your best results will be achieved today by pulling strings behind the scenes Shun the spotlight

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This should be a very pleasant day for you if you do things in accordance with your highest standards

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be patient regarding rewards that are due to you You'll not be overlooked in situations where you've put forth your best

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D

DREAM: (Q.) This poem I have written is about me and a guy whom I care for very much. It fits us perfectly because we both used to think a lot of each other but he has changed I haven't, and it doesn't seem like I ever will. Many other people probably share the same feelings

We once had a dream
Of you and me,
The way it was,
The way it would be
My dream is still here,
Your dream is now gone.
But I shall still dream
From dark until dawn.

—S in Oklahoma

(A.) There are no doubt many who share your feelings but who can't write a poem about them, as you did. This is for you, and for them.

It is good to love and be loved, even if you lose. But it is not necessary to give up in case you do lose. You can try again. Numberless people do, and they usually win.

So do not spend all your time looking back at a dream. Spend some of your time looking ahead toward a new reality.

PEN PALS: (Q) I remember some time ago reading that you were making up a list of pen pals so I thought I would write and see if you have completed it If so, just how do I go about getting a copy? I would like very much to have a couple of pen pals in different states. —A Reader in Ohio

(A.) The Teen Forum 1975 Pen Pal List is ready and for $1 a copy, along with your name and address, I will be glad to send it to you. Write to Dr. Jean Adams, Pen Pal List, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001.

Jim "Four spades looks like one of those automatic contracts The defense starts with three rounds of hearts South ruffs the third and goes after trumps Maybe he finesses, maybe not. It doesn't matter He loses a trick to the king and makes his contract."

Oswald "When I watched Dr Richard Greene of New Orleans play the hand in a regional tournament four spades also made, but there was quite a lot to the play by both sides East took his ace of hearts at trick one and shifted to his singleton diamond Now Dick was threatened with a diamond ruff in addition to his other three losers "

Jim. "I see how he avoided that He must have cashed his ace and king of clubs, entered dummy with the ace of trumps, led the jack of clubs and discarded his remaining heart on East's queen "

Oswald "Of course Then, there was no way for East to put his partner in The diamond ruff was avoided and Dick made the contract for an average score "

Dangers Below the Stairs—and Plumbing Inspector's Advice

KINGSTON

Is danger lurking in your basement? City of Kingston plumbing inspector, Charles J. Kelly, is convinced that many local families are vulnerable to risks and peril during the winter months. Noting that he's been called by the Kingston Fire Department on numerous occasions in recent weeks to inspect malfunctionig heating units, Kelly warns the public of the following dangers below stairs— or wherever heating units are located in individual homes.

Said Kelly, "Death can result from improperly installed space heaters, improperly adjusted equipment in homes and schools, and—because of improperly installed heating equipment, many homes and businesses will be completely or partially destroyed by fire." And, added Kelly, "Death by asphyxiation can result due to faulty installation of vents from heating equipment, fires will start from clothes left to dry over floor furnaces or open flames, or from electrical, gasoline and oil heaters which have been installed too close to inflamable material."

The local plumbing inspector also warned of the dangers inherent in storing heating oils in glass containers, and defective wiring in heating systems. He urges the public in general to check valves and safety devices in home and business systems. . . and in every other facet of the system.

Questions that should be asked, says Kelly, include: Is your heating equipment working as it should? Is it safe? Are all valves and gauges and safety devices working properly?

Most wystems do function as they should, says Kelly, but a sizeable percentage may not be delivering the comfort, fuel economy and operating efficiency that a modern, well-adjusted system should. "When it comes to the health and safety of your family," urgues the plumbing inspector, "as well as the long term economy and protection of your home, rely only on skilled persons for these responsibilities."

It is Kelly's opinion that the greatest number of tragedies occur because of improper installations by handymen and so-called heating experts, who either install equipment incorrectly in the first place, who tamper with existing equipment in ignorance of how it works, or who apply heating equipment to do jobs for which it was never intended.

There have been many instances, he says, where an attempt to "save a few dollars" has culminated in disaster. The installation and care of heating systems, he stresses, is not a job for a handyman.

Kelly also warned that furnaces and chimneys should be properly cleaned and soot removed from inside chimneys, especially if there is a soot accummulation above any vent piping leading into the chimney.

For your own sake-- and that of your family, suggests Kelly, have equipment inspected to insure a warm and safe home this winter, Anyone who has questions regarding heating equipment is urged to contact him at his City Hall office for answers.

Fear '18 Killer-Virus May Resurface

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — There is a chance that a virus strain which killed more than 20 million people in 1918 might resurface during the next major flu epidemic, according to an influenza specialist.

Dr. Robert Webster said that concern has been raised by recent studies which suggest there are repeating cycles of flu viruses. Similarities, for example, were found between an 1880 virus and the last epidemic strain to hit — the 1968 Hong Kong flu.

"The fact that concerns people now is that the 1918 strain was the next epidemic after the 1880 influenza," said Webster, a member of the research staff at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. "Now we wonder if the Hong Kong flu will also be followed by a strain capable of infecting and killing large numbers of people."

If such an epidemic should strike, he said doctors still face some of the problems of the early 1900's. While progress has been made in the treatment of influenza, a prevention method eludes researchists.

"All of the other plagues in man have been taken care of — except the flu," Webster said.

Despite years of research, doctors have not been able to develop suitable vaccines against current virus strains. "When a new one occurs, we are all virgins," Webster said.

To overcome this susceptibility of man, Webster and other scientists across the world are conducting experiments and swapping information in an attempt to identify all known virus strains and anticipate their descent upon man.

"We now have a good amount of evidence showing that viruses in birds and animals may serve as the source of human viruses," Webster said following tests conducted with Dr. Graham Laver of the National University in Australia.

To reinforce this theory, Webster and Dr. Charles Campbell of the Department of Agriculture have conducted four years of testing on pigs, turkeys, and chickers on an isolated island off the northern tip of Long Island in New York.

"Basically what we were trying to see was if a new strain of flu could be created in a sterile laboratory," Webster said, "and the answer is yes."

Emphasizing the elaborate security precautions used to prevent any virus from escaping the laboratory, Webster said the tests have shown that when the birds or animals are infected with two different animal viruses, they are capable of producing a third viral form.

Webster is hopeful these experiments will lead to a method of early detection of human viruses.

"Our hope is if we can isolate epidemic strains while they are in birds and animals then we might be in a position to produce a vaccine immediately," Webster said.

2 U.S.-A. Accounts for Your Tax-Deductible Retirement Plan

1 KEOGH PLAN
For self-employed individuals or owners of small businesses. We'll set up a plan for you (and your employees, if any) which will bring substantial benefits while paying you high interest. You can deduct up to $7,500 a year from your income for tax purposes. The amount is non-taxable until after your retirement, when you probably will be in a lower tax bracket.

2 U.S.-A. PLAN
For anyone who isn't participating in any other retirement plan, the Ulster Savings Account Retirement Plan offers the same tax benefits and high interest as the Keogh Plan.

If you start one of our Ulster Savings Retirement Plans at age 30, and put aside $1,500 a year, by age 65 your retirement fund would have grown to $316,089 at present top rate.

Don't wait until the end of the year — start your Retirement fund now. Come in, phone or send in the coupon below for complete information about an Ulster Savings Retirement Plan.
